PARLEY ON FOR RAIL PEACE

TRIBUNE GETS LLOYD GEORGE $400,000 BOOK

Britain Is Stirred by Memoirs.

[Copyright: 1922: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The London press and public are greatly exercised over current rumors relative to the publication of the war book by Prime Minister Lloyd George. An evening paper displays this afternoon all over the city a flaming poster with the words: "£90,000 for Lloyd George for memoirs," in the biggest type available, as its competitors proclaim the death of Arthur Griffith and the latest sporting results.

The Press association has issued a statement that "Lloyd George's 'Book of Memoirs' has been purchased for publication" (more than $400,000). The Daily Graphic supplements this report as "the biggest deal in the history of publishing" by the assertion that the figure has been arrived at in the following way:

American serial rights, £40,000; American book rights, £20,000; British book rights, £15,000; British empire serial rights, including Canada, £15,000.

Tribune to Print Memoirs.

The contract was made between Curtis Brown and Sir William Berry, who was acting partly on his own behalf and partly for Messrs. Funk & Wagnall, American publishers, who will issue the book in America. It has been arranged by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the New York Times.

"Lloyd George is finishing the first volume in time for publication this year, and the second will be done for publication in a year's time. The house of Cassell, the controlling interest in which Sir William Berry and his brother, J. Gomer Berry, acquired about a year ago, will publish the book in England where it is looked forward to, as indeed it is right across the civilized globe, with interest greater than that aroused by the announcement of any other book ever printed."

The reputed price of $400,000 for the prime minister's memoirs is twice the sum recently paid for those of the ex-kaiser.

Want Lloyd George to Quit.

There is a good deal of discussion on the point whether Mr. Lloyd George should write a book on the war while still holding the office of prime minister. One weekly, the Outlook, devotes two columns to the apparently ungenial task of castigating Mr. Lloyd George, on the ground that he is disregarding "the old English tradition."

The Outlook says: "Loyd George's projected book is coupled with the literary achievements of Gladstone, Disraeli, Lord Roseberry, and Lord Balfour, as if there were any common area between the by-products of these great men's minds and a sensational work of memoirs. We do not go so far as to say that in no corcumstances should a prime minister set on record the facts concerning the great transactions with which he is familiar by virtue of his official position.

"There might be propriety, as there would certainly be great historical value, in a record of the character of Caesar's 'Commentaries.' There might be propriety in a stately Apologia pro Vita Sua. What would be utterly incumbent in a prime minister is a lucky catchpenny narrative which a literary agent can hawk about among publishers. Such a narrative must be either an outrage or a fraud.

Whole Nation Interested.

"If it is honestly worth its money, it will contain information which no prime minister can use without the gravest impropriety. If it is not honestly worth its money, then the author is simply one of the chief servants of the crown selling his name to a publisher and helping gull the public. One thing is as intolerable as the other.

"The nation has a right to demand that its chief servant shall treat as confidential such of its business as it did not send it to be communicated from to parliament. The nation has equally a right to demand that its chief servant, whose reputation is bound up with its own, shall not expose himself, at any rate while still in office, to the censure of every critic in a mere bookmaker."

Will It Be a Senator?

The Evening Standard publishes an article, signed "X," discussing what the writer calls "the hesitation which most publishing firms seem to have" in purchasing a book at the price stipulated.

"They are torn between the desire to have a great sensation on record and fear that it may not be quite so sensational after all," says the article.

THE CHANGING WORLD

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In olden times learned men exercised their minds trying to solve these difficult problems—

Today, the problem of establishing harmonious relations between capital and labor is even more difficult of solution.

In the marriage ceremony of the past "until death do us part" meant something.

Today, with one divorce to four marriages, the words "until divorce do us part" would seem to be more timely.

When Mr. Balfour returned to England, a few months ago, a grateful nation gave him an ovation in recognition of his triumphs at Washington.

Today, the same nation is excoriating him for his recent note on the international debt question.

STRIKE IS VOTED BY TRAINMEN OF CHICAGO & ELGIN

Trainmen of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin line last night voted 304 to 34 to go on strike as a result of the refusal of the company to grant a wage increase of 30 per cent and make certain changes in working conditions. George Adams, business agent of the trainmen's union, was authorized to call the walkout at his discretion. No intimation was given as to when the strike would be ordered, but union officials said it would be at once unless the company took steps to meet their demands.

It is the contention of the third rail workers that they should have a scale higher than the elevated lines. The former now receive 50 to 67 cents an hour and the latter 82.

Miss Leona Gould, a daughter, said her mother had been in poor health. She was unable to tell how the accident happened.

SEEK HAMMER SLAYERS HERE

Probe On in Death of Wisconsin Pair.

Search for the "hammer slayers" of Mary and John Balser, brother and sister, who were beaten to death in their farmhouse near Prairie du Sac, Wis., several days ago, led to Chicago last night and to the questioning of three Chicago persons in the hope that they might be able to throw some light on the mystery.

The questioning was conducted by District Attorney Henry J. Bohn of Prairie du Sac. He visited Mrs. Mary Isaia, who, in her childhood had been a member of the Balser household and who used frequently to visit at the Balser home.

Ask About Childhood.

It is suspected that the Balsers were slain for a supposed hoard of gold; but nothing has been developed to prove that they had wealth. Mr. Bohn asked Mrs. Isaia to describe the home life of the Balsers and to indicate if she had ever noted anything about their associations that might aid in the hunt for the slayers.

Mrs. Isaia explained that as a girl she was intimate with the Balsers and visited them since she grew to womanhood and was married. She said that a week before the murder she, accompanied by Miss Esther Hoagland, also of Chicago, visited the Balser home. She declared that there was nothing in her recollection to cast suspicion upon any one.

No Significance to Cards.

Thomas and Harry Fremiss, brothers of Mrs. Isaia, also were questioned by Mr. Bohn but they, too, declared they knew nothing of the matter. It was explained by Mr. Bohn that some postal cards written by the young men had been found in the Balser home but that significance had not yet been attached to them.

Mr. Bohn's visit was not official nor was he accompanied by police.

Jersey Mosquito Bite Proves Fatal to Baby

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 12.—A baby's death, said to have been caused by a mosquito bite on the nose, was reported from the Atlantic City hospital today. The infant, Janet Brown of Margate, N. J., 10 months old, was received at the institution yesterday afternoon with a temperature of 104 degrees. She died two hours later.

MISTRESS WINS BACK FORMER MAID AND MATE ASKS $40,000

Denver, Colo., Aug. 12.—Charging that Mrs. Carrie M. Cordes, prominent in Denver society, induced his wife, Mrs. Eda S. Groff, to forsake him and return to the kitchen of the Cordes home, where she had previously been employed, Jacob W. Groff today brought suit in the District court for $40,000 for alienation of affections.

In his complaint Groff charges that Mrs. Cordes made use of "a strange influence" to induce his wife to forsake him.

Groff met his wife in 1891, the complaint sets forth, when she was a maid in the Cordes home. The couple were married and lived in Denver until 1907, when Groff took his wife to Salt Lake City.

In 1917, Groff alleges, his wife was induced to return to Denver, and at a later date he declares that Mrs. Cordes drove up to his home in a big automobile and carried his wife off to "service."

In his complaint Groff sets forth that his wife is "a jewel and a treasure in any household."

WOMEN, BABIES ILL IN DESERT; WIRE FOR HELP

12 Trains Marooned in Terrific Heat.

Los Angeles, Aug. 12.—A plea that some attempt be made to send a Red Cross relief train to Seligman, Ariz., to rescue women and children marooned there as a result of the refusal of Big Four brotherhood members to move Santa Fe trains, was received tonight by The Los Angeles Times from Charles P. Reiniger of this city, one of those marooned.

Several women passengers are ill, according to Reiniger's telegram and many babies and small children are suffering from the extreme heat and from lack of milk. "Only limited medical attention is obtainable," it is pointed out and "sanitary conditions are bad and growing worse, while elderly men and women among the marooned are beginning to exhibit symtoms of approaching breakdown."

Ask for Rescue by Auto.

"All passengers as a unit," concludes the message, "urge that a relief Red Cross train be operated to take suffering babies, small children and elderly and feeble women to Los Angeles and that automobiles be furnished promptly by the company to transport the remainder of the passengers."

A caravan of fifty automobiles from San Bernardino and Riverside will leave tomorrow to bring in passengers marooned at Needles, unless agreement is reached before that time between the unions and Santa Fe officials to move the trains.

The San Bernardino and Riverside chamber of commerce arranged for the 250 mile run across the mountains and desert when L. L. Hibbard, Santa Fe general manager, sent word here there was no progress in the negotiations to get the brotherhood men to move the trains.

Sheriff Shay telegraphed to Deputy Sheriff Bright, in charge of the county forces at Needles, to ascertain at once how many people desired to be brought out by automobile. It is expected the automobiles will reach Needles about daybreak Monday morning.

One Road Resumes; One Stops.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 12.—Resumption of transcontinental train service on one railroad, the Union Pacific, and the suspension of eastbound trains on another, the Western Pacific, were the outstanding features today in the far west in the railroad strike.

Union Pacific trains tied up in Nevada, on the Salt Lake-Los Angeles road, began moving shortly after noon when Big Four trainmen who had gone on strike went back to their posts.

The two daily Western Pacific trains were annulled on account of strike conditions at Oakland and Stockton, where brotherhood men had refused to work as long as armed guards were retained. One Western Pacific train was abandoned by its crew after arriving at Stockton today from Salt Lake.

Summary of Strike News.

Other developments in the strike situation were:

The Southern Pacific company, which had four trains stalled at its Ogden gateway by a strike of firemen, reported that the men had returned to work when the conductors objected to the strike.

On the Santa Fé system trains remained halted at Barstow, Needles, and other desert points. Late reports placed the number of stalled trains at twelve. The company was making efforts to relieve the passengers, some of whom were suffering from the excessive heat, which was 120 degrees at some points.

California fruit "on the rails" en route to eastern markets consists of approximately 2,000 cars, valued at around $1,000 each. Approximately 40,000 carloads remain to be packed and shipped.

Won't Order Men Back.

Peace moves through the brotherhoods were given a setback when D. E. Crayne, general chairman in Los Angeles of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, said that he "could not and would not order the men under his jurisdiction to return to work."

Eighty per cent of the men in the allied shop crafts of the Southern Pacific company lines west of El Paso, Tex., and Ogden, Utah, have become members of the Pacific System Shop Crafts Protective league and accepted rates of pay, rules, and working conditions as fixed by the United States railroad labor board, according to William Sproule, president of the company.

M'Carthy and Mader Freed, Jury Rumor

The jury trying Fred Mader, retiring president of the Building Trades council; Daniel J. McCarthy, junior business agent of the plumbers' union, and John Miller, on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Police Lieut. Terrence Lyons, must remain out until it reaches some sort of agreement.

This apepared to be the attitude of Judge Thomas Taylor Jr. when, at midnight last night, the jurors had been out nearly twenty-six hours.

Early in the evening the jurors, weary from their deliberations since 10:30 p. m. Friday, asked that they be permitted to return to their hotel. When this request was taken to Judge Taylor he denied it and instructed the bailiffs to supply only sandwiches and coffee in the way of food.

Reports on Balloting.

Varying reports of the balloting circulated through the building, many of which had the jurymen acquitting Mader and McCarthy, but deadlocked on the punishment to be given Miller.

One of these reports, which was given some credence, had it that McCarthy was acquitted on the first ballot, and that Mader was acquitted on the fourth ballot. This same rumor also was that the jury stood four for giving Miller the extreme penalty, six standing for a term of fourteen years, and two holding out for acquittal.

Two May Go Free.

It is assumed by some that, regardless of the decision on Miller, granting that the foregoing report is accurate, Mader and McCarthy will be given their liberty.

A glimpse through a window into the jury room late last night revealed a somewhat shopworn group of men. Three or four were asleep in their chairs, as many more were sagging over a table, while two still had enough energy to pace up and down the floor. All, however, seemed to be thoroughly tired.

Doubt Over Foreman.

The foreman is said to be J. M. Simpson, 170 North Lorel avenue, one of the two elderly men on the jury. He is the man objected to by the defense because it was discovered that his home is across the street from Henry O'Callaghan, plumbing contractor, whose home was bombed.

Since the jury retired Mrs. Mader has been one of the pathetic figures of the group waiting for an agreement. All Friday night and into the early hours of Saturday she remained in the courtroom with her 18 year old son, pale and silent. When she seemed to be near a collapse she was prevailed upon to go to a hotel.

CAN'T SWIM, BUT TRIES TO SAVE HER CHILD; BOTH LOST

Mrs. Horace E. Fritschle, 30 years old, 827 Linden avenue, Oak Park, was drowned yesterday in Silver lake at Hart, Mich., in a futile effort to save her 9 year old daughter.

They were bathing on a shallow beach near the Fritschle summer home. For several rods the water is only a few feet deep; then it abruptly goes to twelve feet. The little girl walked over the bar and disappeared.

Although she couldn't swim, Mrs. Fritschle promptly started after her baby and also went down. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

Announcement of the "wedding among the clouds" was made yesterday at the flying field. Justice J. O. Howard of Evanston will perform the ceremony. Mr. Burt lives at 441 Melrose avenue. OPPONENTS SIT FAR INTO NIGHT; HOPE BRIGHTER President's Efforts Gaining Ground.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—The proposal that the seniority issue—conceded to be the sole obstacle to the settlement of the shopmen's strike—be submitted to arbitration by an impartial tribunal was discussed tonight by a conference of brotherhood chiefs and railroad executives as a basis for ending the tieup. Although no definite agreement was said to have been reached, both sides were said to have exhibited a "friendly" attitude toward the suggestion.

The railroad executives will meet President Harding tomorrow morning, when, it was said, he will be told of the new situation resulting from the negotiations, so he may proceed from that point with his policy of mediation.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—(Special.)—President Harding tonight succeeded in bringing about direct negotiations between the railroad executives and representatives of the strikers for settlement of the shopmen's strike, which has been threatening to extend to a general tieup of the transportation system of the country.

Following refusal of the shopmen to accept the latest proposal for settlement of the controversy, and a divided reply from the railroad executives to his suggestion, the President, facing the prospect of having to seize the railroads on behalf of the government, persuaded the conflicting forces to talk over their differences among themselves.

After conferences at the White House, which were prolonged for many hours, the committee of the Association of Railroad Executives met at the Willard hotel tonight with the officials of the Big Four brotherhoods of railway trainmen, whose organizations are not on strike, but who had been appealed to by the shopmen to take their part by refusing to work on defective equipment.

Big Four Handles Strike.

The brotherhood officials, it has been disclosed following the White House conference, had been directed by the shopmen to take their case in the conference with the President and had been authorized to act as mediators in the controversy.

From one in high authority in the Big Four councils it was learned tonight that the brotherhoods do not wish to extend the strike to the operating workers of the roads if it can possibly be averted. It was at their suggestion that an effort at mediation on their part be attempted, but with the understanding that the obstinate issue of seniority would not be determined against the strikers.

After the shopmen had sent their reply to the President rejecting his latest proposal and the railroad executives had submitted a divided response, the President suggested in conference with the Big Four brotherhood officials that they get together with the executives with a view to submitting a compromise or substitute proposal.

Both Agree to Conference.

The Big Four men agreed. Later, when the President met the railroad executives' committee they too, after much persuasion, agreed.

As a result of the President's insistence the direct negotiations to settle the railroad strike began tonight. In the conference the administration was represented by Secretary of Labor Davis and George B. Christian, secretary to the President.

Nothing definite relating to the deliberations of the direct conference was given out at midnight, when it adjourned, except that a committee would report to the President at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Representatives of both sides declared that they could not discuss the situation, intimating that they had promised the President to say nothing until they had reported to him.

Unions First to Parley.

The first of the conferences today was between the President and the brotherhood chiefs, headed by their spokesman, Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. They took with them the reply of the striking shopmen and also presented a formal statement setting forth their own position.

In this statement they informed the President of the unwillingness of the railroad workers to operate equipment which they believed to be defective, and also to work at terminals where armed guards are being employed by the railroads. They are understood to have made it clear to the President that continuance of these two conditions would soon bring on a general tieup of transportation.

After the President had been conferring with the brotherhood leaders for two hours, the executives arrived. The first conference was adjourned and the second one began. The executives were headed by T. DeWitt Cuyler, president of the Association of Railway Executives.

Executives at White House.

Other members of the committee were W. W. Atterbury, operating head of the Pennsylvania system; Julius Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific, President Smith of the New York Central, President Markham of the Illinois Central, President Holden of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, President Cole of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, and Col. Alfred P. Thom, counselor of the association.

Others who sat in the conference were Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of Labor Davis, Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the railroad labor board, and Senator Cummins [Iowa], chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee.

Statement by Labor Leader.

When the brotherhood leaders emerged from the executive offices, L. E. Sheppard of the conductors acted as their spokesman.

"We came to the White House," he said, "to tell the President just how we felt about the situation and the difficulty we are having in keeping our men at work because of the equipment being in bad shape.

"We also came to offer our good offices as mediators in the event the President wishes to use our services."

Mr. Sheppard further stated that the shopmen had left their case entirely in the hands of the brotherhoods, but denied that the President had asked them to carry any proposition back to the strikers.

When asked if he was hopeful of a settlement, Mr. Sheppard said:

"I don't want to muddy the waters by any statement. I'm a Presbyterian, but sometimes I lose hope. I don't know that we have done a bit of good."

Roads Also Silent.

Mr. Cuyler said that the reply of the executives had been presented, but that no statement could be made concerning it.

"Naturally the President wanted to consider it," he said. "I am going to leave the city tomorrow, but we probably will return to the White House tomorrow morning."

Mr. Cuyler declined to express an opinion concerning the outlook. It was believed that the President suggested something for the executives to consider however, because they held a conference for some time in an adjoining room after they left the President's office.

Senator Cummins would not talk of the day's deliberations, nor of the prospect for strike legislation if the conflict is not settled. Asked regarding a report that the President would not now ask congress for any legislation in respect to the strike, he said:

"I don't know anything about that, but I hope the information comes from a reliable source."

Union leaders who conferred with the President were: Warren S. Stone, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; L. E. Sheppard, Conductors; W. N. Doak, Trainmen; D. E. Grable, Maintenance of Way Men; T. V. Keshen, Railway Telegraphers; D. W. Robertson, Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen; J. G. Luhison, Railway Clerks; E. H. Fitzgerald and D. W. Helt.

Public Aware of Danger.

The determination of congress to deal firmly with the strike, if it is not quickly settled, was supported by the reports of house members arriving early for the session, which will begin on Tuesday. These members bring back word that the public is fully cognizant of the danger inevitable from a prolongation of the railroad and coal strikes, and is ready to support the President in any course he may take.

RUSSIAN REDS IN U. S. STIR UP LABOR UNREST

Moscow Agents Work in Industrial Centers.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Underground methods by which the Red international at Moscow, the central figures of which are also in control of the soviet government of Russia, have been endeavoring to organize workers of the United States in the interest of the spread of communism and undermining the economic and industrial systems of this country, are disclosed in numerous Russian communist documents recently brought to the attention of officials in Washington.

Many of these documents disclose duplicity of the Moscow régime which, while negotiating with foreign powers at Genoa and The Hague, has been secretly sending agents to this and other nations to conduct intensive campaigns for the promotion of organized unrest among labor unions with a view to the ultimate revolutionary overthrow of both capital and government.

Take Advantage of Twin Strikes.

Red agents, it is disclosed in this country, have taken every advantage of the present industrial crisis in the United States in an effort to paralyze two industries without the normal operation of which the country would soon be prostrate—the mining of coal and the operation of rail transportation. Officials, it is declared, are convinced that Red agents have been secretly sent to this country from Moscow to preach the doctrines of the Third international and the Red labor international among American coal miners and railway workers, and to embarrass the established order of government, industry and finance. Communist handbills have been distributed to American soldiers urging them not to fire on strikers if called out for strike duty. All this work, officials declare, is being carried on in conformity with the "Theses on Tactics," and other resolutions or orders, given by leaders of the Red international, chief among which are Zinoviev, Bucharin, Lenin, Trotzky and Radek.

One Red Agent Caught.

One of the agents sent to this country has just been caught in the person of Joseph Kowalski, a Communist, who was deported by the United States government during the coal strike two years ago, but who returned secretly to the United States and has been active in trying to organize unrest among the coal miners. Kowalski came here from Moscow, where he was superintendent of the prison in which American prisoners were held for many months, and was also chief of the foreign section of the soviet Cheka.

Agents of the department of justice are in the coal fields and elsewhere checking up on other Communist activities. Other intelligence agencies of the government have encountered their trail, and confidential instructions have been given to the commanders of all army corps areas to counteract handbill efforts to undermine the morale of the American soldier.

Take Orders from Moscow.

The inner workings of the Communist agents in this country taking their orders from Moscow are shown in the documents of soviet origin now under scrutiny here. These consist of resolutions, decrees, theses, and instructions emanating from the executive committee of the Third international that met at Moscow last summer, when plans were formulated for promoting and capitalising just such situations as the existing industrial conflict here.

The documents have been printed for circulation among Communists, Radicals, and near-Communists, and have laid down lines of conduct for Communist efforts to swing labor unions, rail workers, coal miners, and shopmen into ugly activities against industry and government. The documents reaching Washington also include the decrees and decisions of the executive committee of the "first world congress of revolutionary trade and industrial unions," a new organization called, for short, "The Red Labor international," whose particular function is to try to organize the workers of this and other countries for communism.

Would Paralyze U. S. Industries.

The documents contain instructions for organization of revolutionary units in the hope of ultimately paralyzing American industry and transportation just as was done in Russia. Since American industry cannot thrive long without fuel, Communist leaders have been especially active in the mine fields, where there are a number of Slavs of radical tendencies.

American government and financial institutions are especially attacked in the manuscripts now in circulation in this country, the American Federation of Labor is condemned as being too "reactionary," although Communists are urged not to abandon the American Federation of Labor, and elaborate instructions are given for the formation not only of "legal" parties here and in other countries, but also of units for "illegal activities" by underground methods.

Work to Win Labor Unions.

One of the resolutions adopted at Moscow lays down as one of the principal tasks of all Communists, in America and abroad, "during the next epoch," the concentration of "their energy and perseverance on winning over to their side the majority of workers in all labor unions." It advises the Communist agents that "they must not be discouraged by the present reactionary tendency of the labor unions, but take part actively in the daily struggles of the unions and win them over to the cause of Communism in spite of all resistance.

"The real test of the strength of every Communist party is the actual influence it has on the workers in the labor unions. The party must learn how to influence the unions without attempting to keep them in leading strings. Only a Communist fraction of the union is subject to the control of the party, not the labor union as a whole. If the Communist fractions persevere, if their activity is devoted and intelligent, the party will reach a position where its advice will be accepted gladly and readily by the unions."

WINTER CLUB'S "DIVA"

One of the star performers yesterday in the second aquatic program of the Winter club at Lake Forest was Miss Barbara King. Her diving won much applause, sharing honors with the 3 year old swimmer, Betty Lord. David Jones, national intercollegiate champion, from Brown college, gave several exhibition dashes.

Betty Lord, 3 years old, cooed and smiled gently at the youthful millionaires and millionairesses yesterday at the second annual aquatic program of the Winter club at Lake Forest. Then she plunged into the water and raced the best of them. Betty herself could have worn a bathing suit of gold had she and daddy wished, for he's a millionaire railroad supply man—Russell Lord. LEE ORDERS HIS TRAINMEN BACK ON ALL ROADS

Santa Fe Tieup, He Says, Is Not Authorized.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—Members of the brotherhood of railroad trainmen who went on strike on the Santa Fe railroad, have been ordered to return to work, President W. G. Lee announced today in declaring that their walkout was unauthorized inasmuch as the regular procedure in settling disputes had not been carried out. Telegrams to this effect were sent to General Chairman Duffy and General Secretary Hascott of Santa Fe system at Los Angeles.

"We are in full sympathy with the shopmen's strike," Mr. Lee said, "but I will not pass authority to strike on to individual members or to local committees in any case. I am insisting that all walkouts be conducted in an orderly manner and not piecemeal and that the constitution and general rules of our organization be obeyed. This trouble must be settled as all similar troubles have been settled."

Orders to His Workers.

Mr. Lee said messages similar to those he sent to general chairmen on the Illinois Central, Chicago and Northwestern, the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific railroads are being forwarded to all general committees forwarding complaints. They read:

"If employment on your line is unbearable on account of conditions due to shopmen's strike, your general committee should be convened, and if a majority of such committee votes in favor of a strike, authority of the undersigned, as provided for in general rule nine of the constitution and general rules of the brotherhood will be given.

Methods Used by Union.

"The constitution and general rules of all the brotherhoods—engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, and switchmen—relative to authorized strikes of such organizations are, in substance, identical, with the exception that the rules of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen provide that on any system where a grievance exists it must be handled by the lodge and local committee with the local officials of the company at the point where such grievance originated.

"If satisfactory settlement is not effected such grievance is referred to the general committee for the railroad, who will take the matter up at once with the general manager, and if a satisfactory settlement is not effected such general committee, by a majority vote, can request permission of the president of the grand lodge to peacefully withdraw the membership of the organization from further service on the railroads where the grievance exists."

Won't Order Men Back.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 12.—D. E. Crayne, general chairman here of the brotherhood of firemen engineers, said today in connection with the telegram from President W. G. Lee of the brotherhood of railroad trainmen, that he "could not, and would not, order the men under his jurisdiction to return to work."

He said that it was an individual matter where the brotherhood men as individuals, left their work, due to hazardous conditions of employment following a statement from the brotherhood executives that they could leave their work if the conditions were hazardous.

local division as a result of the walkout last night of 300 engineers, firemen and trainmen has compelled Representative Carl Hayden, en route to Washington, to stop over here. Conditions are becoming "unbearable," according to brotherhood officials here. A train bearing sick persons and a family going to a funeral was transported over the route this morning by the striking employes.

Iron River Trains Stop.

Iron River, Mich., Aug. 12.—Forty engineers, firemen and switchmen employed by the Pere Marquette and Northwestern here, walked out today, declaring the engines in service were unfit for use. Their action forced the suspension of ore shipments, amounting to about 125 cars daily. Only mail moved out of here today.

Settle Illinois Tieup.

East St. Louis, Ill., Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—The threatened walkout of 300 members of the Big Four brotherhoods, employed by the Missouri Pacific at Dupo, Ill., near here, was averted this afternoon when the road agreed to remove the armed guards.

Iowa Schedules Disrupted.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 12.—Local firemen refused to go back to work at the Northwestern station here today until armed guards had their weapons taken from them. They also expressed dissatisfaction with the inspection of locomotives.

The result at Des Moines is that there are no available engines in the yards fit for service. Trains are leaving only after trains from Ames arrive and engines are exchanged.

Epidemic Hits Council Bluffs.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Aug. 12.—[United Press.]—Big four brotherhood workers on the Chicago and Northwestern walked out here tonight in protest against armed guards and because, they said, the engines were unsafe. Firemen said they were "through" and turned in their engines. Northwestern and Union Pacific officials announced all guards will be disarmed.

They Lay Off in Dixie.

Meridian, Miss., Aug. 12.—Seventy-five switchmen, hostlers, hostlers' helpers and others on the Southern railway quit work here late today because of the alleged reckless handling of firearms by guards.

INSIST WORK IS PERILOUS

Although a walkout of 1,100 Big Four brotherhood men on the Milwaukee division of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway was averted yesterday, reports from other parts of the country were not so encouraging to the railroads.

Reports from Milwaukee Friday night that train service men of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul would walk out today proved unreliable. At a meeting between officials of the road and union leaders the employes' grievances were thrashed out, and it was said danger of a strike of brotherhood workers had passed.

Similarly, a predicted sympathetic strike of engineers, firemen, conductors, and trainmen on the Chicago and Northwestern railway and the Soo line in Wisconsin failed to materialize.

DESERT TIEUP OF TRAINS TO BRING U. S. JURY INQUIRY

Daugherty Demands Light on "Conspiracy."

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—The federal district attorney in southern California was ordered today by Attorney General Daugherty to investigate "whether the abandonment of trains on the Santa Fé railroad was the result of a conspiracy by those operating them or others to interfere with interstate commerce and the handling of the mails."

Action by the department of justice followed investigation of press reports of the tying up of trains.

Suffering by Passengers.

"It has been reported to this department from certain places, especially southern California and Arizona, on the Santa Fé system," Mr. Daugherty said, "that trains have been and are being abandoned by trainmen and employés. It has occurred at places most inconvenient (Needles, Cal., for instance), and not only results in interference with and obstruction to interstate commerce and the transportation of the mail but in great suffering and distress among men, women, and children who are passengers.

"After conference with the President, I have wired the United States attorney at Los Angeles as follows:

"'Report to the United States District judge any violations of injunctions and institute proper proceedings to hold violators for contempt. Investigate quickly and ascertain if abandonment of trains was the result of conspiracies by those operating them or others to interfere with interstate commerce and the handling of the mails.

Inquiry by Grand Jury.

"'If proof is sufficient, present the matter to the grand jury immediately. If the grand jury is not in session, present to the court the necessity of calling a special grand jury. The department will give you all necessary support and assistance.

"'The interference with and abandonment of trains strongly indicates the existence of a conspiracy, and the government will take all necessary steps to prevent its continuation or like conspiracies elsewhere.'

"It is reported that twelve passenger and mail trains on the Santa Fé line in southern California are tied up because of the refusal of members of the Big Four to move them. The reason given for such action was the danger to members from armed guards and defective engines.

"Seven trains were held up at Needles, three at Barstow, and two at Los Angeles. Hand grenades were thrown into the Santa Fé stockade at San Bernardino."

HOPE FOR PEACE TODAY IN JOLIET RAILWAY TIEUP

Vast Stores of Food Now Marooned in Yards.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Peace may be patched up today between the railroad brotherhoods and the law authorities at Joliet which will permit train service crews on the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad, who have been out for five days in protest against presence of troops at their gates, to return to work, but the fundamental issues involved, which touch the problem of law and order and, it is asserted by observers there, threaten the very framework of American civilization, have not been settled even if this peace comes, but have only been accentuated.

At a conference held yesterday in Joliet between Adjt. Gen. Carlos R. Black, State Senator Richard J. Barr, Acting Sheriff Alfred Lindgren and Lieut. Col. Nelson Morris, who is in command of the troops at the yards, and union officials, there was much discussion as to whether the troops should be kept at the yard gates and in "J" park or moved to a more remote field out of sight of townspeople and railroad men.

Black Sums Up Situation.

Adj. Gen. Black reached the heart of the situation when he said:

"Whether it is right or wrong for the troops to be here is not the question. The public is entitled to safety just as you big four brotherhood men are."

The compromise offered and upon which the men are voting does not settle that question, it is declared.

In that issue students of present-day social tendencies, as exemplified in the coal and rail strikes, see something that is lifting its head everywhere, in every big division point where troops may be needed, in yards where men are trying to work because other men have refused to work there, in coal mines such as Herrin.

There was an acting sheriff at this conference because the real sheriff, gray haired "Big Jim" Newkirk, lies in Silver Cross hospital with a bullet in his head which he received from a striking shopworker while he was performing his duty of preserving law and order in Joliet. When Sheriff Newkirk fell Illinois troops moved in to take his place as the force behind the law of which he was the symbol.

Troops Incense Trainmen.

Presence of these troops, ordinary citizens formed into the 132d infantry, I. N. G., was as a red rag to the shopmen and resulted in the walkout of the big four brotherhood men because they said their lives were endangered by these soldiers. Thirteen hundred trainmen refused to work until the soldiers went away or were hamstrung in what their commander considered an essential method of protective patrol. They were to be taken from the gates and civilian guards installed. They were not to escort the brotherhood men through the yards.

This much was granted at the conference. The next demand was that the soldiers who had encamped on a commanding bluff half a mile from the yards in the park, must be sent far away into a more remote field back of the park. This the authorities have refused to concede.

In the meantime Joliet waits patiently and without much open talk for a return to normalcy. The yards are choked with thousands of freight cars, filled with coal and grain and other needed commodities. The road is a freight car switching and delivering service, forming an outer belt around Chicago from Waukegan to the steel district of Gary and Indiana Harbor, where there is need for the trainloads of material.

The situation at Joliet furnishes the key to the rapidly spreading railroad strike and gives a background for an understanding of what may happen in other centers. A normal city, its striking shopmen, made up mostly of peaceful and decent citizens, Americans with war service as their own background, Joliet today furnishes a study which may be of value to the rest of the country.

Radicals Precipitate Riot.

In the group of strikers who met every day at Slavish hall there was an element of radicals who brought on the open clash with the officers that resulted in the shooting of the sheriff on last Monday. A few days previous to this a union picket, Patrick McCarthy, had been shot while on duty. This aroused bitterness among the strikers, who blamed the railroad detective guards. Demonstrations began against the workers who had taken the strikers' places. One man, Fred Nelson, who had refused to go out, was made the center of the demonstration which resulted in the riot.

Nelson was in his home having supper with his wife after a day's work when the mob surrounded his house and demanded that he come out. Bricks had been thrown through the windows previously. He did not come out until Sheriff Newkirk arrived in an automobile with deputies and railroad detectives. The sheriff brought Nelson out and asked the crowd if they had anything to say to him. Little was said, and Nelson went inside again. Then the sheriff quietly told the men to go home.

"Let's get the sheriff," said some one. There was a surge of men toward the officers and in an instant the sleeping animosity to what this gray haired man represented came to the surface and bullets began to sing. The sheriff fell, wounded and a railroad officer was killed. The man who is said to have shot the sheriff, Frank Levino, an Italian striker, was shot and killed by a railroad man.

Citizens Demand Troops.

Then the citizens of Joliet asked for troops and the adjutant general, after an investigation, sent down men who were on their way home from Clinton where a threatening situation had demanded attention. The agitation against the troops began at once and resulted in the action of the conservative and influential brotherhoods. Everybody seemed to forget the people of Joliet and the people affected by the stopping of this artery of Chicago and transcontinental commerce.

The funeral of Levino was made the occasion of a demonstration unique in Joliet or any city. Three thousand strikers, some of them in overseas service uniforms, with the American and Italian flags in the line, moved down the streets behind the body. It was as though a martyr had been honored. It carried the same significance, perhaps, that was found in another funeral parade a few months ago in the City of Mexico. There thousands of labor union men marched behind the caskets of riot victims of their organization, men who had been shot during a battle between soldiers and strikers near the National Palace. There was the same feeling against the soldiers representing law and order. In Mexico, however, they raised the red flag in the funeral march.

Soldiers at Two Yards.

Soldiers took up positions at the big Maple avenue gates of the railroad yards and have remained there ever since. Behind the high fence there has been little activity during the last five days. The Chicago and Alton yard superintendent at Joliet thought he needed troops, too, and asked for them last Wednesday, after some of his workers had been harassed by men supposed to be an I. W. W. contingent from Bloomington. One hundred soldiers were sent to the Chicago and Alton and still are camped there, although the request has been rescinded by higher authorities of the road.

At Bloomington trouble was averted by taking soldiers away from the yards and replacing them by civilian guards.

Shop Foreman, 2 Strikers Shot After Attack on Home

East St. Louis, Ill., Aug. 12.—A. E. Arnold, night foreman of the East St. Louis terminal shops, was shot and probably fatally wounded when three men attacked him at the rear of his home tonight. Two men, James Callahan and Hosea Venable, who admitted being striking shopmen but deny participation in the attack, are suffering from bullet wounds and are not expected to live. Fred Benish, another striker, is being held for questioning.

COAL FAMINE TO SHUT PITTSBURGH PLANTS, REPORT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 12.—Mill and furnace operation in the Pitsburgh district will be seriously curtailed next week owing to the increasing shortage of coal supplies, it became known late today. Where it is possible gas will be used, but as the supply is not equal to the demand a considerable number of plants would be shut down.

Ohio Steel Mills Speed Up.

Youngstown, O., Aug. 12.—Independent steel mills of the Youngstown district today unexpectedly announced a substantial increase in operations for next week, although up to the last twenty-four hours a decrease had been expected.

5 BOMBS HURLED AT SHOPS; GUARDS FIRE IN DARKNESS

Roseville, Cal., Aug. 12.—Five bombs were exploded in the yards of the Southern Pacific and the Pacific Fruit and Express company here early this morning. Windows in the roundhouse were shattered and a portion of the wall wrecked.

Immediately following the explosions company guards poured shots in the direction from which the bombs were hurled. Answering volleys of shot met their firing. More than 100 shots were exchanged.

United States Marshal Sullivan was struck down by a bullet, according to word reaching Roseville following the skirmish. The extent of his injuries was not learned.

San Bernardino, Cal., Aug. 12.—Four additional bomb explosions occurred in the Santa Fé railroad yards here following the explosion yesterday morning of twenty-three bombs in the same yards. Two additional United States deputy marshals arrived to aid in preserving order, and federal department of justice men came here to investigate the explosions.

MEDILL STARTS SPEEDING UP OF COAL PRIORITIES

Opens Chicago Office to Direct Supply.

With Illinois operators waiting for the Cleveland coal conference to adjourn before making any futher move towards a settlement of the strike, the state administration took some steps yesterday looking to the speeding up of fuel deliveries from the eastern mines now in operation.

Robert M. Medill, state fuel administrator, arrived in Chicago and established headquarters in the offices of the Illinois commerce commission in the City Hall Square building. He brought some clerical help with him and a request from the governor that the commerce commission give him all the aid possible in issuing priority orders.

Full Swing Tomorrow.

Mr. Medill, whose appointment by Lieut. Gov. Sterling has been confirmed by Gov. Small, announced that the fuel administration will be in full swing by tomorrow morning when the governor is expected to name the two committees to supervise the rationing of coal in Cook county and downstate. The county committee will be composed of five members, while the downstate committee will consist of nine.

"It will of course be a slow process," said Mr. Medill, "but this cannot be helped in view of the present coal situation. All requests for application blanks should be addressed to room 2003, City Hall Square building."

How the System Works.

All Chicago applications will have to be referred first to the Cook county committee who will determine upon the order of precedence. When approved by that committee and confirmed by Mr. Medill they will be sent the federal fuel administrator, H. B. Spencer, at Washington, whose office in turn will transmit copies of the orders to the interstate commerce commission for delivery to the railroads.

Gov. Small, it was reported, was expected to come to Chicago last night for a conference with political advisers as to the personnel of the Cook county committee. He is expected to remain here today and announce the appointments tomorrow.

While the state and city surveys beings made by the Chicago Real Estate board and the Illinois Realtors' association have not progressed far enough to give a fair presentation of the famine situation, Louis T. Orr, chairman of both committees, announced that the replies to the questionnaires so far received give some indication of the seriousness of the shortage. These surveys deal only with the supplies on hand in apartment houses and dwellings.

Reports received show a shortage of 71,031 tons in Chicago and of 45,201 tons in other cities in the state, making a total of 116,232 tons, nearly as much as was reported on hand in all the coal yards in the city and suburbs a few days ago.

Situation in Flats.

Twenty-two out of forty real estate agents who have reported so far announced that the buildings which they represent have no coal at all. The others reported a shortage of 69,157 tons. Twenty-two householders out of forty-six who answered the questionnaires reported empty bins, making a total household shortage of 1,874 tons. Twenty-three downstate real estate agents report a shortage of 45,201 tons.

"But we have only begun to scratch the surface," said Mr. Orr. "The agents who have reported do not represent the larger firms whose tabulations will necessitate a great amount of work. I have been through coal shortages before but none of them ever threatened so serious a situation as this one.

Different from Other Crises.

"In the previous cases the coal was at least mined and above ground and the great difficulty was transportation. Now it is still in the ground and it will take some time before it is even ready to be moved, even if the railroads can transport it fast enough.

"It is all very well to talk of getting coal from other states, but how much of that coal do you believe the administration at Washington is going to allow shipped here when Illinois has sufficient mines within her own borders to furnish all the fuel that we and other states require? Do you suppose they can ship it fast enough to meet winter needs even if the railroads were normal? There is only one answer, and one that must be given quickly, and that is to open the mines in Illinois if Chicago is not to freeze this winter."

Praise Brundage Herrin Stand.

On behalf of the 3,000 members of the Chicago Association of Credit Men, Edward F. Reiter, president of that organization, sent a letter to Attorney General Edward J. Brundage commending him "for having stood out as the one public official of the state who has taken cognizance of the crime" committed at Herrin when nineteen nonunion miners were massacred.

"Hundreds of people were witnesses to the bloody outrage and yet no arrests have been made," the letter reads. "There has been no action by a grand jury and worse still the people of Williamson county seemingly condone the perpetration of the murders.

"It has been argued that the trial of those accused of the murders must be held in Williamson county, and that the state cannot ask a change of venue. Surely there must be some basis in law for transferring the trials to some other county."

BIG INCREASE IN OUTPUT OF SOFT COAL LAST WEEK

Gain of 500,000 Tons Is Shown.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—With administration hopes still high that the coal strike will soon be settled, the nineteenth week of the conflict, Aug. 7 to 12, opened with a decided increase in production of coal, according to the weekly statement of the geological survey.

Returns so far received indicate an output of soft coal of about 4,800,000 net tons, or 500,000 tons more than the week before. The increase is due to gradual improvement in traffic conditions on the railroads serving nonunion fields, and also, but only in a very small way, to increased production in fields hitherto throttled by the strike. Despite this increase in bituminous coal output, the nineteenth week finds production still about 550,000 tons below the level reached before the shopmen's strike.

Production of Anthracite Small.

"Production of anthracite in the nineteenth week will be less than 30,000 tons," says the statement of the survey. "The total output of all coal, anthracite and bituminous, therefore, in round numbers is 4,880,000 tons; in the corresponding week of 1921, 7,771,000 and 1,772,000 tons of anthracite were produced, making a total of 9,543,000 tons; and the year before that the total of all coal produced was 12,232,000 tons. The present rate of output is therefore about 5,000,000 tons below normal."

Loadings Show Increase.

Loadings on Monday, Aug. 7, were 16,021 cars, an increase over the preceding Monday of 7 per cent. During the following days the loadings dropped to 13,217 on Thursday. They remained greater, however, than on corresponding days of the preceding week.

Production of anthracite in July was in round numbers 11,000 net tons.

Indiana Mines Run Sunday in Race Against Shortage

Brazil, Ind., Aug. 12.—State operation of two strip mines near here under military protection will continue through Sunday in Gov. Mc Cray's effort to relieve essential industries from the fuel famine. Twelve flat cars were placed on the switch leading to the mines today and arrangements were made for the forty-one imported laborers to work as long as possible each day.

EVAN FONTAINE TO ASK MILLION FOR LOVE CURE

Whitney Proposed, Lawyer Says.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—One million dollars damages is sought by Evan Burrows Fontaine, dancer, in a suit for breach of promise against Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney, son of Harry Payne Whitney, according to the statement of Miss Fontaine's attorney, Charles Firestone, of New York City, in a manuscript filed with Justice Henry V. Borst here today.

It was expected that the complaint in the case would be filed this afternoon, but the papers arrived at the county clerk's office too late for filing, and as a result, they were not made public.

Brief Details Given.

Brief details of the allegations made by Miss Fontaine were given, however, in Attorney Firestone's statement filed in argument of a motion to show cause why the defendant should not be compelled to accept the complaint.

In his statement this morning Attorney Firestone said that on Oct. 28, 1920, Whitney promised to marry Miss Fontaine, after a courtship which commenced about May 25, 1919. The wedding day, he said, was fixed for Oct. 31, three days after the alleged promise was made, but the marriage never took place.

During the time of their alleged courtship, said the manuscript, Whitney made repeated promises to marry Miss Fontaine, who, it was said, later gave birth to a son. Miss Fontaine is still willing to marry Whitney, it was stated. The manuscript said the case was started a year ago, but no attempt was made to serve the papers until recently, when the defendant refused service.

Calls It "Blackmail Plot."

Opposing the motion of Firestone, James A. Leary of this city, representing Whitney, characterized the action as a "blackmail plot." Stating that Miss Fontaine formerly lived in Texas, he requested the court to give the defendant time to secure affidavits from persons residing in the locality where, he said, Miss Fontaine formerly lived.

He said these affidavits were desired for the purpose of proving the reputation and method of living of the dancer in Texas. He stated that Miss Fontaine, previous to her alleged meeting with Whitney, had been married and the marriage had been later annulled under conditions, he said, which he wished to prove to the court.

Judge Borst said he would give the defendant opportunity to present this evidence and adjourned the hearing until Sept. 9 at Schenectady, meantime withholding decision on Firestone's motion.

Met at Entertainment.

Miss Fontaine, noted for her portrayals of oriental dances, became secretly engaged to Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney during the summer of 1919, her relatives say. She met Whitney while performing at an entertainment given by Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr. at a New York hotel.

Young Whitney was in Yale at that time. For a year and a half they were said to have been friends. Miss Fontaine's son, whom she calls Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney Jr., was born in New York Dec. 4, 1920.

Miss Fontaine is said to depend for success in her suit against Whitney on a diary she has kept since her first meeting with the young Yale student. A batch of letters from Whitney to Miss Fontaine are said to be in the possession of a New York attorney.

ARBITRATION IS VEXING ISSUE AT OHIO COAL MEET

Conference Adjourns Still Hopeful of Peace.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Fears among some of the operators that the courts might regard the coal peace conference as being in violation of the interstate commerce law led to a declaration tonight defining the purpose and scope of the parley.

A joint statement issued by Michael Gallagher, president of the Pittsburgh Vein Operators' association of Ohio and chairman of the conference, and John L. Lewis, national president of the miners, set forth that the peace meeting is not trying to negotiate a settlement for absent producers and tonnage.

Purpose of Conference.

"We are assembled," the statement said, "for the purpose of negotiating, if possible, a new wage agreement between representatives of the United Mine Workers and the individual operating interests represented in this meeting.

"The conference is in no sense what may be termed a four state conference and does not undertake to represent the operators of any particular state or district or any operating interests represented herein. Its sole purpose is to promote a mutuality of understanding as between the operators participating and the representatives of their employes."

It is explained that after an agreement is reached here it will then be up to the policy committee of the union to make it a "four state basic."

Split on Arbitration.

The day was spent by the operators and miners in separate groups, the question of arbitration being the chief topic before the producers. Reports are that they are split. Some are for arbitration of the sort proposed by the Illinois operators, who have kept away from the conference, while others are for dropping the question and limiting the work of the parley merely to the establishment of wage scales and working conditions up to next March 31.

The union officials are flatly against arbitration on the ground that it supplants collective bargaining.

The joint committee late in the afternoon adjourned until Monday morning, with both sides still optimistic that peace will come next week.

Governors Meet Today.

Governors Groesbeck of Michigan and Davis of Ohio tonight sent word to Governors Small of Illinois, McCray of Indiana, and Sproul of Pennsylvania that "the situation is such that it would be advisable and helpful for you to be here not later than Tuesday morning."

As to Illinois' representation at the conference, composed of Richard Campbell of Danville, Frank Farrington declares he will not sign any four state basic in which Illinois is represented by only one man. He reiterates that whatever agreement is made here it will take a separate state settlement to start the pits up in Illinois.

CHICAGO HAS BIG SUPPLY OF FOOD, SURVEY REVEALS

A survey of the food situation in Chicago yesterday showed that with the exception of milk, vegetables, and fruit listed as perishable commodities, the city is in no immediate danger of a food shortage in the event of a railroad tieup.

At the same time Russell J. Poole, secretary of the council committee on living costs, issued a statement to the effect that Chicago was well stocked with foods, declaring that any attempts to raise prices should the strike materialize would be plain profiteering.

Food in Warehouses.

A canvass of the cold storage warehouses, the wholesale and retail grocers, the packers, the milk distributors, and the commission men showed that the condition of the food market here is as follows:

Commodity.	Supply on hand.
Butter, eggs, and poultry	90 days
Meat [smoked and storage]	30 days
Meat [fresh]	10 days
Staple groceries	Plenty
Vegetables and fruits	2 days
Milk	1 day

The milk situation, however, it was pointed out, will be only temporary. Practically all the milk distributed in Chicago comes from a territory within eighty miles, embracing western Illinois, Northern Indiana, and southern Wisconsin, and while a rail strike will result in a shortage, enough can be brought in in motor trucks to avert a famine.

Short of Fruit, Vegetables.

In the fruit and vegetable market, though, the shortage will be more acute. According to commission men, the truck farms in the neighborhood of Chicago will not be able to supply the demand, as much of their produce, especially potatoes, is not yet ripe, while little fruit is raised in the Chicago district.

Arrangements are being made, Mr. Poole said, to ship fruit to Chicago from Michigan if the strike ties up the railroads, and he will leave tomorrow for St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, where he will spend several days with representatives of fruit growers and large produce firms to complete plans for the movement by boat.

"Chicago at present is so well stocked with food," Mr. Poole said, "that there will be absolutely no grounds for the raising of prices for at least thirty days. Wholesalers and retailers should remember the ancient truth that boosting the price of a commodity does not increase the supply on hand."

Plenty of Canned Goods.

The survey of the cold storage houses shows that there is an ample supply of staple groceries, such as canned goods, on hand to feed the city. The supply of butter, eggs, and poultry, too, is sufficient to last for several months.

The packers report that they have large quantities of fresh and smoked meat on hand, and in addition many firms have thousands of cattle, hogs, and sheep on the hoof. It was pointed out that if a rail tieup prevents the bringing of live animals for slaughter it will also prevent the shipping out of the meat.

DEFIED UNCLE SAM

MAYOR CHARLES P. SKINNER

When United States marshals posted an injunction notice against Rock Island railway shopmen in the city park at Moline, Ill., the mayor tore it down and then refused to submit to arrest without a warrant. He will answer both charges in federal court Aug. 18.

NATION COMES FIRST, BRITAIN PROVED IN STRIKE

BY PARKE BROWN.

It has been suggested to THE TRIBUNE that the strike crisis the United States now faces is similar in many respects to the situation that confronted England three years ago when, on top of a coal shortage due to miners' strikes during the spring and summer, the rail workers threatened to walk out.

The government, then in possession of the railways, refused to give way, and the strike that followed is regarded as probably the worst in England's history. In London the results were declared comparable only to the conditions there during the air raids.

War time restrictions concerning coal and food were revived. Thousands of motor cars and lorries were put to hauling necessities. Order was maintained by heavy guards. And every day the government was bringing more and more trains back into service. It had reached a point where 800 trains a day were said to be running when, nine days after its inception, the strike was settled with claims by each side that it had won concessions.

Lloyd George Stands Pat.

But chroniclers of history since that time say that the ending of the strike was a victory for Premier Lloyd George in the greatest battle between labor and the government that England ever has seen. It was he who demanded an unconditional surrender to the government as the guardian of the welfare of all the people and resisted all efforts to swerve him from that position.

At the height of the strike he caused the display in moving picture theaters of slides bearing the words:

"The government is not fighting trades unions, which are a recognized factor of the industrial life of the country.

"The government is fighting to prevent extremists of any industrial body from gaining their ends by attacking the life of the community and so bringing untold misery upon thousands of innocent people."

And he clung to this principle in the face of open threats that the other members of the "triple alliance"—the transport workers and the miners—were about to join their railroad brothers in the strike.

The wages of engine crews had been fixed earlier, but in September, 1919, the Board of Trade submitted its proposals for standard grades in other classes, providing for a 100 per cent advance on pre-war schedules, with a minimum of £2 a week. The union rejected the proposals, making higher demands all along the line, and, failing to have received a favorable reply, on Sept. 26 announced an immediate strike.

A final conference with Lloyd George at 10 Downing street failed and the government at once let it be known that it was marshaling all its forces to combat the strike and was prepared to use arms if that became necessary. All army leaves were cancelled and demobilization held up. A fleet of 1,000 army trucks was rushed into handling food supplies. Rationing was enforced. Exportation of coal was stopped and each family restricted to 100 pounds of coal a week.

Nation Accepts Challenge.

"The interests of the nation and the government have no alternative," said Lloyd George in a statement the following day, "but to accept the challenge thrown down to society as a whole.

"They intend to meet this blow at the public weal with all the resources at the disposal of the state and they look to the nation without distinction of class—for it affects everybody—cheerfully to bear privations which will result from this indefensible strike and give their aid to maintaining the fabric of social order upon which the prosperity of the country depends."

There had been years of dark days in England and the nation believed it was glimpsing the first rays of a returning normalcy. Then the strike forced the shutting down of mills and offices, plants and mines, tied up ships and threw cities into comparative darkness.

Public Rallies to Help.

But Lloyd George stood firm. The transport workers, who were threatening to strike, offered a plan to end the trouble. But he rejected it. A government conference failed to bring any hope. Others were held and on Oct. 3 it was announced that the men had rejected the premier's terms which were based on a condition that they return to work at once.

Thereupon the home office issued an appeal for the formation of "citizen guard" organizations. There was a prompt response. Not only did the citizens respond for guard duty, but they volunteered by thousands to help run the trains, to keep the mails and the food supplies traveling. Aristocrats picked up firemen's shovels and oilers' rags. Women took up men's work.

Lloyd George withstood widespread demands that parliament be called into session to meet the situation. J. H. Thomas, head of the union, denounced the premier for demanding an "unconditional surrender." He said that he was hopeless.

Then the "Open Sliop."

But on Oct. 5 Lloyd George's condition was met. The men agreed to return at work. The lines were to continue on what is known on this side of the water as an "open shop" basis for the men who had handled the trains during the strike were protected in their positions by the agreement. A minimum of 51 shillings instead of £3, or 60 shillings, demanded was granted, but although the union asked 53 shillings a week over the existing scale for those men whose wages were not already fixed, they consented to let the question of an increase go over for another year.

The next day the trains were running again and the clerks and bankers, the housewives and clubmen who had been firing engines, hustling baggage, and taking tickets, laid down their shovels, their harrows, and their punches for what England looked upon as a second armistice.

Four Killed; Score Hurt, in Crash of Train and Truck

Annandale, Minn., Aug. 12.—Four men were killed and a score injured when a truck was struck by a Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie train today.

TRIBUNE GETS LLOYD GEORGE'S $400,000 BOOK

"There is every difference between a mild sensation and the real thing—a book which everybody simply must read. If the prime minister lets himself go, as Mrs. Asquith did, telling the whole truth or a good deal of it, about things and persons without regard to anybody's feelings, including his own, the investment of £100,000 might well pay an enormous dividend, but such audacity is not compatible with the prime minister's position and political interests, and if there is diplomatic restraint what will be the effect of the narrative?

Calls It Sour Grapes.

"The prime minister is never at his best when he is under the necessity of being guarded. Great as he is as a speaker, he has no experience in writing, and his few essays in that direction do not suggest a great literary knack. And in 200,000 words he must either say a great deal that is coherently sensational or say it supremely well. If the book is published after he has ceased to hold office its value is not the same. If it is published while he is still prime minister he can hardly avoid that sense of restraint which must be all against the spontaneity and sprightliness of the narrative."

When asked to express an opinion on the hypothesis, thus expressed in the Evening Standard, a member of the firm which secured British rights simply said: "It is probably the view of one of the publishers who got left."

ROAD BUILDING HANDICAPPED BY COAL SHORTAGE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Telegraphic reports received at the Washington headquarters of the National Motorists' association are to the effect that all highway construction throughout the country is seriously threatened by the shortage of coal and the curtailment of transportation.

"More than 300,000 men will be thrown out of employment within the next few weeks if coal is not obtainable in that time," is the message sent to the automobile clubs throughout the country by Raymond Beck, field secretary of the National Association of Motorists.

"In a conference with Chairman Charles C. McChord of the Interstate commerce commission it was pointed out that the transportation of coal was vitally essential for road building purposes, so as to operate steam rollers, steam shovels, and other road building machinery as well as for the manufacture of highway materials."

TOO MUCH COAL CAUSE OF CRISIS, CHICAGOAN SAYS

Avers Competition Is the Best Remedy.

New York, Aug. 12.—Free competition, involving "a gigantic struggle for existence," among the nation's 10,000 coal mines, in which the fittest will survive, will solve the problem of overdevelopment and save the country $400,000,000 a year which now is wasted, F. S. Peabody of Chicago, member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, declared today in a report to the Federated American Engineering Societies.

F. S. PEABODY.

"Too much coal has become a national menace to the industry and to the pocketbooks of the consuming public," he said, "and is costing Americans 80 cents for every ton dropped into their bins.

Diagnoses Industry Ills.

Diagnosing the ills of the industry, he said:

"Prior to the war there were 6,000 shipping mines in operation. At the close of the war there were 10,000, which, if operated full time, would produce 100 per cent more coal than is needed for consumption and export."

Allowing for interruptions due to accidents, failure of car supplies, and "other uncontrollable features which are inherent in the coal industry," Mr. Peabody asserted, "it is safe to say that the present developed capacity of the bituminous coal mines in the United States is fully one-third greater than any possible demand."

Computing the cost, he estimatets the total investment in mines at $2,000,000,000. One-third of this represents overdevelopment, he said, which annually costs the nation $40,000,000.

Waste of man power is the second item mentioned. Of the 700,000 bituminous miners, there are 200,000 too many, Mr. Peabody maintained. Their wages, at $1,500 each per annum, represent the annual waste of $300,000,000.

Under present conditions the 10,000 mines each average 100 idle days a year. Based on his experience as the operator of thirty-six mines in eleven districts, Mr. Peabody estimated the annual upkeep of the nation's mines during periods of idleness at more than $50,000,000.

"In dollars and cents, therefore, we have an item in the country's annual coal bill of about $400,000,000 which is directly caused by overdevelopment. Since the normal consumption of bituminous, including exports, is about 500,000,000 tons yearly, this overdevelopment is costing us about 80 cents on every ton mined."

Forced Into Struggle.

"Under free competition," he said, "with general industrial conditions normal, the 10,000 units of the bituminous coal industry will be forced into a gigantic struggle for existence, in which the fittest will survive, and those least able to stand the strain will be forced out."

This system, he estimated, will take about ten years. At the end of that period, however, he declared, "we will have only the most efficient mines, able to produce coal at the lowest cost, and while the struggle for existence continues competition can be depended upon to maintain a low level of prices. The situation is one that is bound to work directly to the benefit of the coal consumer."

NABBED ON BANK'S CHARGES.

MARRIED AFTER TROUBLES

FRANCES MINITTA M'LANE.

CUTLER ROBBINS WEDS GIRL FREED ON KIDNAP COUNT

Marriage Takes Place in New York.

New York, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Cutler Hinds Robbins, son of George B. Robbins, former vice president of Armour & Co., and Mrs. Frances Minitta McLane, were married in the chapel at the municipal building today by City Clerk Cruise.

Both had been divorced and had figured in court actions last winter when the first Mrs. Robbins involved the bride in kidnapping charges during litigation over the custody of the Robbins baby.

Mr. Robbins gave his age as 33 and his occupation as manufacturer. Both he and his bride gave the same address, 22 West 77th street. Employés of the apartment house at that address said last night that neither Mr. Robbins nor his wife was known there.

According to the marriage license application, Mr. Robbins was divorced by his first wife on charges of cruelty in Chicago on Dec. 23, 1920. The bride said she divorced Merrill Seymour, also in Chicago, March 24, 1918. She gave her age as 24.

Last January the divorced Mrs. Robbins had the police of Ogden, Utah, arrest Mrs. McLane on a kidnapping charge as she was taking the Robbins baby, Geo. B. Robbins III., to his father in California. Under the divorce arrangements the child was to be in the custody of the father half the time and with the mother the other half. The prisoner was released when the Illinois authorities declined to have her extradited for trial in Chicago.

In February last, the first Mrs. Robbins filed an application in the Chicago courts for complete custody of the baby. In her petition she alleged that although its father was wealthy, he kept the baby in a small apartment in New York and that the infant lacked proper care. The application was denied.

CUTLER HINES ROBBINS.

'GERMAN EMPIRE' (ON PAPER) STILL A BERLIN DREAM

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—The continued use by Germany of the term "empire" in diplomatic documents came in for considerable discussion in official circles today.

The claims agreement, signed by representatives of the two governments in Berlin on Aug. 10, is the most recent case of such usage. In that document there is the following passage:

"The President of the United States of America and the president of the German empire, who, having communicated their full powers, etc."

This has served to recall the occasion of the presentation of Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, the new German ambassador, at the White House. Ambassador Wiedfeldt's credentials were from the "German empire." President Harding, in accepting them, did so as coming from the "great German republic."

Considerable comment was caused today by the fact that, while the designation of "empire," which the Germans seem to prefer, was rather pointedly rejected by President Harding, it has been accepted by the state department.

LIVE WIRE INJURES LINEMAN.

Bedford, Ind., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Frank Roberts, lineman for the Interstate Service company, was badly injured today when he came in contact with a live wire of high current.

CHORUS GIRL, 19, AND 2 MEN HELD; 50 CARS STOLEN

Mann Act Charges Are Also Preferred.

"Dixie" Carroll's twitching feet carried her from the "deadness" of a small town through two fluttering years as a chorus girl and a wild interlude as consort of an auto thief and landed her last night, at 19, in a cell. Lodged against her are federal charges of violating the Mann act and the Dyer auto theft act. She'll soon be a mother.

Vernon Rexroat and Harry James, held with her, are accused of stealing more than fifty autos in and around Chicago in the last few months.

The arrests were made a week ago, but were kept quiet until the charges were made complete yesterday and the trio turned over to the federal authorities.

Another Girl Told.

Abrupt halt of the path of the girl from Centralia, Ill., and her two companions came through information supplied by Mattie Barnnock, another girl from Centralia, who had been in the original quartet until, broken by illness, she was forced to return home. There her parents forced her to confess, with the result that Harry Wolff, department of justice operative, and Sergts. William Cox, Michael Neary, and Michael McDonough of the detective bureau last Sunday raided an apartment at 816 East 51st street and arrested Rexroat, alias Hyde, and James, who is his cousin, with the girl.

Rexroat was an automobile dealer in Jacksonville, Ill., until his business failed. Then he became an auto bandit, the police allege, and at Centralia picked up "Dixie" Carroll and James. They were later joined by the Barnnock girl.

Stole Fifty Cars.

In the short time they have been working their loot has totaled fifty cars. Another federal charge, that of violating the Dyer auto theft act, was added to the Mann act charges.

An elaborate plan for keeping "Dixie's" motherhood secret had been worked out. It is said that her married sister, childless, was to come here and then return to Centralia with the baby as her own.

AUSTRIAN KIDS TO GET U. S. FOOD FOR NEXT 2 YEARS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, Aug. 12.—The American relief administration today withdrew from Austria, but left a donation which assures the feeding of 30,000 children for two years and the maintaining of a table for university professors and students.

The Austrian government is continuing the work under the name of the American-Austrian relief work for children.

The government states that $14,000,000 was spent for feeding Austrian children. The number of children fed reached 362,000 on June 21.

WILFUL WASTE AMID WOEFUL WANT!

Crowds licked their chops hopelessly yesterday in front of the Chicago avenue police station when, held just at the edge of the spreading fumes of five barrels of beer by a cordon of coppers, they watched Policemen J. E. Rogan (shown at the left) and T. J. McEnery dump the foaming "forbidden fruit" into the gutter. Altogether, it was a sad day for the watchers. The brew was confiscated by Judge Emmanuel Eller on July 23. Camouflaged as "tires," it was seized when being transported on a truck.

RESERVE FLYING OFFICERS CALLED OUT FOR DUTY

Hint They May Carry U. S. Mails.

Thirty-seven pilots in the air service officers' reserve corps in this area have received orders to report today at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., for a two weeks' period of flying training.

Although the orders were received during the last week in July, before the threat of a rail tieup was grave, considerable speculation is current among the reserve officers as to whether they will be called upon to aid in the movement of the mails by air in the event the strike situation grows more serious.

FORMER CHIEF OF BRITISH POLICE IN IRELAND SHOT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 12.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—A new crime resembling the assassination of Sir Henry Wilson is reported from Buckland-in-the-Moor, Devonshire, where Maj. G. Neilson, until recently chief of the intelligence department of the Royal Irish Constabulary, was attacked and wounded by three men.

Maj. Neilson received a letter a few days ago, stating that today is the anniversary of the death of an Irishman whom he shot in self defense. He paid no attention to the letter.

He went for a walk and was found later in a lane, shot through the body twice, but still alive. He was taken to a hospital, where he recovered consciousness and said he had recognized his assailants as Irish republican gunmen.

NEBRASKA ACTING GOVERNOR, BROKE, IS STRIKE GUARD

Down and Out, Takes $5 a Day Job.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—Pelham A. Barrows, lieutenant governor of Nebraska, and for the past week acting chief executive during the absence of Gov. McKelvie, also is working as a $5 a day strike guard for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

"Being lieutenant governor has honor but no remuneration," he said, adding that he took the new work when he and Mrs. Barrows found "we had $3.40 in the bank and I had $1.60 in my pocket, with not another cent in the world."

"I had to take this work," Lieut. Gov. Barrows told an Associated Press representative last night after he had returned from Alliance, where he had escorted a crew of nonunion workers. "I could not get work elsewhere, and I and my wife were down and out."

Gets $1,200 a Year.

Under Nebraska law, the office of lieutenant governor as such is nonremunerative, although that official draws $1,200 as presiding officer of the state assembly in its biennial sessions.

Mr. Barrow said Gov. McKelvie did not object to the lieutenant governor working for the railroad, and that when so informed he had withdrawn his resignation drawn up for presentation to the C. B. & Q. had there been executive disapproval.

Defeated for Congress.

Mr. Barrows is a former national commander of the Sons of Veterans, having been succeeded in that office two years ago by Clifford Ireland, congressman from Illinois. He was defeated in last month's primary for the Republican nomination as congressman from this district.

"Being lieutenant governor has honor, but no remuneration, and we must live," Mr. Barrows said. "I hope I shall be allowed to earn an honest living at any work I can do without having it appear I am neglecting my duties as lieutenant governor."

Commuter Fatally Hurt When Struck by Train

In the sight of hundreds of commuters, Jones McLeod, 27 West 19th street, Illinois Central switchman, was struck by an express train at the 15th street yards yesterday morning. McLeod was taken to a hospital, but died before being operated upon.

MILLER FIRED AFTER CITIZENS BOMBARD SMALL.

Shelton Named Head of Registration.

W. H. H. Miller, director of the state department of registration and education, was "fired" yesterday by Gov. Small. The action, which was forced by Mr. Miller's refusal to resign after he had been indicted for alleged wholesale traffic in physicians' licenses and druggists' certificates, brings to an end the biggest scandal, with the possible exception of the governor's own indictment and trial, which the Small administration has suffered.

Following the signing of the letter discharging Miller, the governor signed an order appointing to the vacancy Addison M. Shelton, for twelve years superintendent of schools in McHenry county.

Personal Friend of Small.

Miller was a personal friend and appointee of Gov. Small, having run as lieutenant governor on the same ticket with the chief executive, and his indictment for grafting was a severe blow to the administration.

Despite the indictment, which was the direct result of an exposé of Miller's conduct in office by THE TRIBUNE, and despite the fact that a committee of physicians appointed by the governor to investigate the office had recommended his dismissal, every opportunity was given Miller to resign and save the governor from embarrassment.

For weeks Gov. Small has stood firmly against the clamor which arose in all parts of the state following Miller's indictment, hoping that he would resign. That "mutual friends" were sent as emissaries to Miller to get him to resign and that Miller's discharge was due to his refusal to act was evident from the letter written him by the governor.

Governor Fires Him.

"It has been my expressed wish for some weeks past that you resign as head of the department of registration and education," the letter reads, "and of this you have been apprised from time to time by mutual friends. This morning I telegraphed you at the Hotel Morrison and at your office in Chicago to the effect that it was my intention to remove you in event your resignation was not forthcoming today.

"Not receiving any reply to my telegram, it now becomes my unpleasant duty to inform you that I have today removed you from the office of director of registration and education and appointed your successor.

"I regret exceedingly that your refusal to resign compels me to take this action."

The exposé in THE TRIBUNE brought on an investigation by the grand jury, which, after hearing the testimony of witnesses concerning the payment of thousands of dollars to Miller and others, brought indictments against Miller, his son-in-law, K. A. Fries, and others. They are now at liberty on bonds, awaiting trial.

Frederick Eis, aged 80, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Marquette since 1899, has received notice that his resignation, tendered to Pope Pius XI. last May, has been accepted. Meteor Falls Near Town in Nevada, Shakes Houses

Winnemucca, Nev., Aug. 12.—A meteor fell north of Winnemucca today, shaking all the frame houses in town and awakening many persons, the impact sounding like a muffled explosion in a mine.

FACED PISTOL

MRS. MINNIE FLAHERTY.

A robber who attempted to hold up the Betsy Ross Candy shop at 27 East Adams street last night is believed to have been shot when he was surprised by two employés of the American District Telegraph company who have offices in the rear of the store. Mrs. Minnie Flaherty, manager of the store, was preparing to close when the robber entered and her screams brought Carl Benson and W. G. Abram from the rear office. They both exchanged shots with the robber in the store, and then followed him down Wabash avenue to Jackson boulevard. Blood on the sidewalk leads the police to think that the robber was shot.

ALDERMEN SEE PARIS FOLLIES; BOOM CARTER H.

Think He Will Boost an Anti-M. O. Subway.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, Aug. 12.—"A strong feeling is growing in Chicago against Mayor Thompson and I believe that a popular candidate like former Mayor Carter Harrison will win the election in April," said Ald. John Toman today in commenting on municipal ownership after inspecting Paris transportation lines.

"It is true that Mr. Harrison was elected four times on a municipal ownership platform, but after his world tour, visiting all the large cities and examining the situation in Europe, I am sure he no longer champions city ownership of the subways. Chicago must have subways and today we visited the Paris system, which gives us indications of the problems we face, because Paris has the same soil formation as Chicago—clay.

Paris Subways Pay Well.

"Paris subways earned 10,000,000 francs last year because the municipality leases to private operating companies. Mayor Thompson favors municipal ownership and operation, which would be fatal and cost the taxpayers millions. Our reports show that Mr. Thompson is losing in popularity and indicate that opinion is swinging in favor of a popular candidate like Mr. Harrison. I know that Mr. Harrison does not want the job, but after his travels abroad he may be persuaded to run again."

The aldermen traversed subways under construction, saw machinery which is now excavating nine yards daily, and afterward were received by the Paris municipality and given champagne, cakes, and coffee.

The aldermen visited the battlefields on a special train to Verdun and the Argonne, returning trough Chateau Thierry, yesterday. They placed a wreath on the unknown soldier's grave near the Arch d'Triomph today, and then proceeded to London. Ald. Joseph Cepak and Max Adamowski made the trip by airplane.

Enjoy Paris Night Life.

Most members of the party enjoyed Paris night life until an early hour this morning, some returning to the Continental hotel at 6 o'clock, just as the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was being delivered. The party started at the Follies Bergere.

"There is nothing inelegant or indecent about nude women on the stage in the way they are presented in Paris theaters," said Ald. Toman. "Nudity is seen in stage life, paintings, and sculpture, and no one thinks anything about it any more than visiting a museum, or one-stepping, fox-trotting, and shimmying with habitués while consuming large quantities of champagne."

Before they left for London the aldermen were asked what reminders of Chicago they had found in Paris. They answered as follows:

Ald. Max Adamowski said the high prices made him think more of home than anything else.

Ald. Joseph Cepak said the way the motors hurry pellmell through the streets reminded him of Chicago.

"We have better control of autos in Chicago," said Ald. Klein. "The way the motor traffic is handled in Paris, without apparent control, is just as wonderful as the way we handle it in Chicago with visible control."

Ald. Charles Agnew thought Chicago would be a madhouse if it had no more speed limits than Paris has.

Liquor as Strike Cure.

Ald. John Czekela said America would have as little labor trouble as France if it had the same amount of beer and wine.

Ald. Timothy Hogan said: "I have seen more drunken men any day in Chicago in the last year than I have in Paris."

Ald. Robert Mulcahy said the American military cemetery at Romagne stuck in his mind longer than anything else he had seen.

Ald. Lynch said the Paris girls had lots of style and pep, beautiful eyes, little clothes, but it was hard to beat Chicago girls.

Not Racy for Chicagoans.

Ald. Moran said he had heard the Follies Bergere were racy. They might be for Bostonians but not for Chicagoans.

Ald. Patrick Toohey said he hopes Chicago never has municipal ownership of transportation lines. It is wrecking central Europe, he said.

Ald. Maurice Kavanaugh said the inauguration of the Paris liquor system was the best thing that could happen to Chicago. It would keep the boys home.

Make No Paris Purchases.

The party did not purchase anything in Paris, having taken advantage of the exchange rates in central Europe to stock up their wardrobes and buy souvenirs and presents for the folks at home.

"My wife is not buying clothes in Paris. They are too expensive," said Ald. Toman.

The aldermen complained that they do not get enough to eat in Europe's restaurants.

Georgia Woman, Slayer of Divorced Husband, Freed

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Helen Avera, 27, who shot and fatally wounded her divorced husband, Millard Stevens, 32, Sunday afternoon, July 9, when he is alleged to have attempted to force his way into her home to get possession of their 6 year old daughter, was freed late today after a preliminary hearing before Recorder George E. Johnson.

Infection of Toes Fatal to Prominent Pana Woman

Hot water is automatically provided for the residence of Mr. Edward E. Gore by a Royal Automatic Storage Gas Water Heater. A copy of the letter in which he tells of the wonderful service and economy of this heater will be sent on request. The heater shown at the side is size 32—for use in homes with one bath and usual fixtures in laundry and kitchen.

"Its Gas Consumption is not half what I expected it to be."

Mr. Edward E. Gore, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, is another Royal Automatic owner who was surprised that any automatic heater could supply hot water so cheaply. He says that the gas consumption of the Royal installed in his home at LaGrange, Ill., is not half what he expected it to be.

He also speaks enthusiastically of the excellent and unfailing service that his Royal gives, adding that he does not know "how any utility of this kind could give greater satisfaction."

The Royal is capable of the surprising performance of which Mr. Gore speaks because it supplies hot water by a unique method. Its marvelous heating element, which eliminates all coils and open discs, reduces not only the cost of the heater but the cost of operation as well, so that every one can now afford automatic hot water service. And, too, with its wonderful method of operation, Royal service offers many exclusive advantages in comfort.

HUGE AIR FLEET FOR U. S. URGED BY WAR CHIEFS

2,000 Fighting Ships Included in Program.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Air experts of the army and navy have worked out a comprehensive plan to provide an adequate air defense for the nation which is in form for submission to congress as soon as it is finally approved by executive heads.

The program worked out after months of study and scheming by the navy's bureau of aeronautics and the army air service is about to be turned over to the secretaries of war and the navy, who will use it as the basis for their recommendations to congress.

The experts have proceeded on the theory that congress would not, in this time of stringency and economy, entertain a plan which called for an immediate outlay of an enormous sum of money and construction at one time of from one to two thousand planes of all types. Their program, therefore, is of the progressive type extending over several years, patterned after the navy's old 1916 shipbuilding program.

Eye Plans of Other Powers.

How far the two services will go in asking immediate funds is problematical. This is a departmental policy that will be decided finally by the higher powers, depending somewhat on aviation developments abroad.

Ever since the bombing tests about a year ago, there has been constantly increasing public interest in aviation, the aviation people say, and recent events again have brought it to the front. They point to the significance of the announcement by Premier Lloyd George that England was to build 500 airplanes at a cost of thousands of pounds, it being understood that this was but a step in a gigantic aerial program. Another event was the successful exploitation of the torpedo plane, not only in our own navy but by the British.

Sketch of Program.

The American program as tentatively drawn up by the army and navy experts, contemplates the following:

Provision for enough new planes to enable the army air service to have 500 machines on each coast and approximately 1,000 planes at strategic points in the interior.

Detail of 2,500 officers and 40,000 men to the air service.

Construction of between 250 and 300 new airplanes for the two huge aircraft carriers into which two of the treaty-doomed battle cruisers are being converted.

Equipment of every fighting ship and many of the auxiliaries with an airplane, catapult, and, whenever possible, landing gear, something like 300 planes being needed for this.

Quantity production of the deadly torpedo plane of the all-metal type as soon as the experiments being carried out demonstrate the most suitable type for use on ships.

A systematic development of landing fields at seaports for the fleet fliers' use, and the landing fields along definitely laid out aerial lines all over the country.

Cost vs. Cost of Battleships.

While this program would call for an initial outlay of many millions of dollars and an upkeep and replacement cost that would run into big figures, the aviation proponents stress the fact that this cost, while large, is insignificant when compared to the cost of $40,000,000 battleships, and that it is vital to the national defense that the aviation be developed to the fullest.

Air service heads believe that the army's air force should be strong enough to repel any enemy that might threaten an attack; that the definite burden of providing the first line defense, so far as land attack is concerned, rests upon the regular army; that sufficient force to enable the keeping of 500 planes on each coast and 1,000 in the interior should be provided; that a definite system of airways should be established throughout the country, with established landing fields and supply stations at regular intervals; that emergency landing fields should be made at frequent intervals, utilizing cow pastures or other available sites, but marking them and registering them on maps for use by all fliers, and that plans should be prepared for speedy transportation of supplies by air in a war emergency.

600 Planes Now in Service.

At present the air service has about 600 planes in active service. Planes being constructed, and those that could be put back into service in case of necessity, would run the number up to more than 1,000.

Eventually the plans drawn up would double that number of serviceable planes, and more than double the officers and men now in the service.

"The Heirs of Streeterville"

"Jack" Jones of the Dill Pickle club and Lawyer Langworthy (at the right), who ordered bathers from the Oak street beach.

CAP STREETER'S SPIRIT MARCHES ON AND INTO CELL

The shade of old "Cap'n" George Wellington Streeter must have smiled yesterday. For half a century he fought, both physically and legally to retain possession of the "Deestrict of Lake Michigan" which he claimed on squatters' rights and his dying words were that the fight should continue.

Yesterday the battle broke out in a new place and as a result two men are under arrest at the East Chicago avenue police station, charged with disorderly conduct and resisting an officer. A search through the old records of the station would reveal the "captain's" name and similar charges numerous times.

Tell Bathers to Leave.

The trouble yesterday developed when "Jack" Jones, who say he is the president of the Dill Pickle club, and Park Langworthy, a lawyer, appeared at the Oak street bathing beach and told the bathers to leave.

Langworthy explained that he was acting for "Ma" Streeter, who had given to Jones a trust deed to a large tract, including the beach and a goodly segment of the "Gold Coast."

In return for this President "Jack" engages to further a project for the erection of homes for disabled war veterans, chapels for religious sects, a sanitarium for mothers and babies, a stadium for athletic diversions, an art center, including studios and homes for students, and a literary center for training in political science.

Incidentally, bathing accommodations are also to be a part of the general scheme. For the beginning of this vast cultural center, with equipment for the development of mind, body and soul, $5,000,000 was pledged.

Accompanying it was the further announcement of plans for the erection of several ten-story apartment buildings, southeast of the beach, to be rented only to families with children and at $20 to $30 a month.

Their Bravado Melts.

None of the bathers or spectators, especially Policemen Anderson and Flanagan of the Lincoln park force, were much impressed, and when their advice to the two men to "beat it" was ignored they called the Chicago avenue station. Sergeants Brandt and Cullerton responded and at the sight of the two officers bravado of the claimants vanished.

Jones readily submitted to arrest, but Langworthy, in an effort to escape the policemen, ran into the surf with his clothing on, Brandt on his heels. Both were in water up to their waists when the arrest was made.

Jones was released late last night on bonds signed by Attorney George B. Pine, 4854 Grand boulevard. Attorney Langworthy was still incustody up to a late hour waiting for friends to come to his aid.

Goes Into Detail.

Attorney Longworthy, in a prepared statement, said:

"Mrs. Streeter has authorized me to state that out of the rents, issues and profits of the District of Lake Michigan she expects to have available within a short time she intends to make the District of Lake Michigan, Streeterville, beach land, the playground home, art center and educational resort for poor people; that aside from the benefactions named in the deed of trust to Mr. Jones, she will build ten story flat buildings throughout the district, apartments of four to six rooms, heated from a central plant, furnished with every modern convenience, including electric heating and cooking facilities and electrically operated central laundry in each building, cold air systems such that the occupants need not have ice for refrigeration, the apartments to be rented only to families which have children, at the nominal price of $20 to $30 a month.

Roofs All Connected.

"The apartment houses will be so constructed that no two houses will face each other, with children's playgrounds provided every second block. The roof of each ten story building will be beautified and the roof of each building connected with every other throughout the whole of the district so that mothers can go constantly in the open air with their children and enjoy the pleasures of outdoor life—indeed, a system of hanging gardens with which those of ancient Babylon would not compare.

"Mrs. Streeter will establish cooperative stores throughout the district and apportion profits of rents among those who occupy the flats, as she wants the benefits not for herself but in the interest of humanity.

"Further she considers making the city a proposition that if it will pay one half she will pay the other half for the construction of a bridge at the mouth of the river to relieve the congestion of Michigan boulevard and thus afford an outlet from Grant park to her property."

French Fight British Plan to Cut German Debt 60%

LONDON, Aug. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The French delegation to the conference on German affairs was amazed to learn today that the British government proposes and insists upon a reduction of the German reparations payments to about one-third the amounts fixed by the London schedule of payments of May, 1921—that is, cancel altogether the annual cash payments of 2,000,000,000 gold marks ($500,000,000) and to leave only the 26 per cent assessment on German exports.

The text of Premier Lloyd George's proposal, which forms part of the tenth point of the British memorandum reads: "Subject to acceptance by the German government of these guarantees, it will be for the reparations commission to grant a moratorium in respect to all cash payments remaining due from Germany up to the 31st of December, 1922; and, further, the commission shall as soon as possible fix the annual payments in cash in respect to all peace treaty charges for the succeeding period at such an amount not exceeding 26 per cent of the value of German exports as they may find to be proper with a view to the early flotation of a loan by the German government, the major portion of which shall be devoted to the payment of reparations."

French Refuse Plan.

M. Poincare had doubts regarding the interpretation to be placed on this article, and it was one of the points referred by the premiers to the committee of experts. Only at this afternoon's sitting of the experts' committee did M. de Lasteyrie, the French finance minister, obtain explanations from the British members that it was designed to reduce the total cash payments to a sum amounting to 26 per cent of the value of German exports, but leaving the possibility still of payments in kind.

M. de Lasteyrie is understood to have informed the committee there was not the least chance of the French government accepting such an idea, or seriously considering it. Consequently the negotiations between the French and British are at a standstill.

Lloyd George Goes Away.

The members of the French delegation were greatly surprised that Mr. Lloyd George should send word to M. Poincare that he was leaving London over Sunday, thus causing the loss of one day when only two remain before the expiration of the date on which the next German payment is due under the partial moratorium now in operation.

Premier Theunis of Belgium and his foreign minister, M. Jaspar, called on M. Poincare today to discuss the situation, and tomorrow there will be a meeting of M. Poincare, M. Theunis, and Signor Schanzar, the Italian foreign minister.

The Italian delegation shares the French view completely; the Belgians less so, because Belgian interests in reparations are protected by priorities.

YANKS REBUILD WRECKED GLIDER; HAVE HIGH HOPES of Evanston, member of American Glider team.

BY EDMUND ALLEN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CLERMONT-FARRAND, Aug. 12.—The American team spent today preparing a new fuselage and wing for the flights tomorrow. The wrecked fuselage is beyond repair, but the wing was not badly damaged when it struck a spectator yesterday. I have great hopes in the new body, which has low resistance and a new high-lift wing.

I believe the new machine is far superior to the old one and hope to take advantage of the rising currents and gusts on Combegrasse to secure a high altitude above the starting point.

America stood first in all the events Friday night, but tonight M. Bossoutrot leads in the total number of flights with 18 minutes and 34 seconds; Chardon, second, :12:57; Allen, :12:27. The flights of Bossoutrot and Chardon today were consistent, but not remarkable.

Douchy, flying a Potez glider, passed the elimination test with a 92 seconds flight. Thoray's monoplane tries out tomorrow. Many flappers are ready for flights. There is much agitation among the pilots to take off from Mount Puydedome, from which there is an almost vertical drop of 4,700 feet.

British Ship with $200,000 in Liquor Seized by U. S.

New York, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—The British schooner Marina, 200 tons, bound from St. Pierre-Miquelon to Havana, with a cargo of 2,000 cases of whisky, was captured today off Block Island by the submarine chaser Hahn, of the prohibition navy, according to a radio message tonight from the Hahn's captain. The radio message added that the Marina's skipper had no papers. The schooner was first taken to Newport and then to Providence. The liquor is valued at $200,000.

The Dairy Farmer will hereafter be issued from Des Moines. John Andrews, who has been business manager, will remain with it, with headquarters in Chicago.

BEAUTIFUL N. Y. GIRL DISAPPEARS ON WAY TO STORE

New York, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Disappearing from 5th avenue as mysteriously as Dorothy Arnold vanished from that thoroughfare nearly twelve years ago, Nelly Biglin, 20, is now being sought by the missing persons bureau of the police department.

Miss Biglin left her home, 19 East 90th street, adjoining the residence of the late Andrew Carnegie, about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, to go to a bakery at 116th street and 8th avenue, and was last seen near 5th avenue, going in the direction of the bakery.

The missing girl was one of the most attractive of the neighborhood. Because of her features and her bobbed red hair, the police believe they will be able to trace her easily. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 130 pounds.

George and Martha Washington Were Alive Today—What Would They Say About Martha Washington Candies?

George: "I have brought you, my dear Martha, a box of assorted candies—old fashioned, home-made and named for you."

Martha: "Let me taste them, George. Ah! They are delicious—I am inclined to believe that you are extravagant in choosing such fine candies—and in such endless variety, too."

George: "On the contrary, my dear, they are really economical—they are sold in such large quantities that the maker is enabled to utilize the highest quality ingredients and still sell them at the moderate price of 60c the full pound."

Martha: "In that case, sir, I pray that you buy them for me frequently. At such a moderate price and in such surprising variety, I know that I shall never tire of them—as one does of ordinary candies."

THERE are thousands of people in Chicago—and in the other cities where Martha Washingtons are sold—who have learned to satisfy their candy hunger with a variety box of old-fashioned, home-made Martha Washington Candies. For twenty years "the family candies of the nation"—Martha Washingtons continue to earn the far-reaching approval of countless families—for their purity, their variety, their economy—for their innate goodness. A box today will convince the most skeptical of their true worth at

MR. PRESIDENT— GIVE THE NATION LEADERSHIP.

The appearance of sympathetic walkouts in the railway situation is significant of the deeper forces which are taking hold of the strike of railway shopmen. The pretense that these walkouts are caused by fear of personal injury to train service men will deceive no one. Mr. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Engineers, has virtually given consent to the sympathetic strike, though the brotherhoods declare they do not countenance it and propose to keep their contracts with the roads inviolably. But the fact is that Mr. Stone has told his followers to use their own discretion about walkouts, and it is worth noting that of those which have already taken place, one at Joliet, was in protest against justifiable calling of troops to keep the peace after a murderous assault upon the sheriff, and another is on the Santa Fé railroad, which reports that it has filled the places of the strikers—in other words, that as to the Santa Fé the shopmen's strike is lost.

Whatever the conditions may really be, it is clear that the brotherhoods have become concerned over them and have taken measures calculated to bring pressure for a peace of compromise through the threat of a general strike. It may well be that these leaders fear the smashing of the shopmen's unions and the weakening of all organization on the railways. In any case it is evident that the strike is spreading with the virtual approval of Mr. Stone and his associates.

That means that we are all being carried by the current toward a situation which would be calamitous. It is easy, it seems, to start the sympathetic strike. It is harder to control it when once started. There is no limit to the irresponsibility of such strikes and they bring into the problem of peace all sorts of factors which have no relation to the original problem.

To drift into a general industrial conflict over the issues raised in the shopmen's strike would be inexcusable. But drifting we are, in spite of the efforts of the President and his secretaries of commerce and of labor to devise a plan for peace. One side refused the President's first plan. The other, it is reported, may refuse the second. But the President cannot afford, the nation cannot afford, to let matters take this course.

We do not know that peace can be compelled at this stage. But if not, it is of vital importance the public be given leadership. The management has leadership. The men have leadership. The public must have leadership, and there is only one man who can give it to all the people, and that is the President. At present public opinion is not partisan. It is not certain as to the real issues or the real interests involved. It must be helped to judgment and to unity and clear determination. If a general strike develops the people will have to pass through a severe ordeal. They must have leadership then. They should be given leadership now. The American people will take care of any danger that attacks them. Their resources of courage and good sense are unlimited. The President can absolutely rely upon their following and following through. But it is for him to lead and lead now before the current has carried us too far.

WE'RE ALL PROUD PEOPLE.

There is an explanation of Japan's limitation of activities in the war which attributes the absence of Japanese troops in Europe to the refusal of Great Britain to come to Japan's terms. The report is plausible. We do not know whether it is authentic or not. According to this explanation the realistic Japanese asked for a string of British islands and bases running from the Indian ocean to the China sea.

The British refused and the Japanese remained at home. They had nothing to lose if their technical enemy, Germany, ran over France and imprisoned the British on their island and, national advancement not being involved, Japanese soldiers did Japan more good by living in Japan than by dying in Flanders or France. A militaristic nation sometimes is considerate of its citizenship and does not ask its soldiers to battle unless their people are the better for it.

Japan does not hold Memorial day exercises in France. The popular explanation is that the proud whites of western Europe would not owe their liberty to the intervention of Asiatic warriors. They could use Pathans, Senegalese, etc., because they were not very good unless they had white supervision and some of them were not very good with it. That never seemed wholly plausible, particularly not after the British fifth army was knocked to pieces by the most vicious assault known to war.

The United States, being in most things exactly what Japan is not, and standing in very different relations to Germany, did what Japan did not do. Japan had trained men who were kept at home. America had untrained men who were sent abroad to fight. It is honest to say that if any one in America had any idea of making any material benefit come out of cruel necessity he kept his peace. It was enough to help win a war which we felt might have most unpleasant consequences for us if the central powers won it. What we wanted was peace and a lot of it. Therefore we probably should not say that Mr. Wilson was not nationally minded when he went in asking nothing more for America than he asked for the rest of the world.

If he had been nationally minded as the Japanese statesmen are nationally minded, he would have said to Lloyd George: "We're coming in, I think, but this is a war to end war and your naval bases off our coast, off the Caribbean, and the way to the Panama canal have only military value to you and only against us. Therefore, you will give us these bases—you may keep the control of the people, who would not like our institutions—but give us the protection of these islands. In later years you might find that you don't like us as well as you do now."

Mr. Wilson did not say this and, inasmuch as everybody was in a state of rhetoric, probably he should not be rebuked now for lack of vision then. Now when we say we'd like to have these naval bases in our possession the British say that they are too proud to swap. Americans did not stick to Mr. Wilson's declaration that a nation might be too proud to fight, but the declaration has stuck to them, nevertheless. We fancy that the British will stick to the declaration that they are too proud to surrender military advantage in part settlement of a debt.

We fancy that. Then we suggest that the debt ride. As an American banker said, it's bad financially to hold on to it, but good politically. It's something in reserve. We do not want to ruin Europe or even distress it by saying pay or go out in the street, but let it ride. It is a little more power to our elbow. We don't need to have the debtor into court. We do not even have to make him feel that a side street is indicated if America is seen coming. But some day the fact that there is an obligation will be an asset in the American fist and we need not be too proud to hang on to our assets.

Consider the Japanese and be wise.

"NOTHING BUT THEIR CHAINS."

A famous revolutionist in Europe declared to the oppressed people he was rallying to action: "You have nothing to lose but your chains."

That was a thrilling slogan and in a country like Russia there was only too much truth in it. The unfortunate victims of the Russian tyranny seemed to have little to lose but their chains. The bolshevik revolution has proved they had more to lose. Millions have lost their lives. Millions have lost even the small measure of comfort, security, and happiness they possessed under the dark tyranny of the czardom. They lost their old chains and new and heavier chains were forged and fastened upon them.

The Russian people were told they had nothing to lose but their chains. They found they had much more to lose in the chaos of revolution and in the impractical experiments of their revolutionary leaders. How much more have the people of this country to lose, not merely by a revolutionary folly which is not a probability, but by the disturbances incited by radical leaders who mouth the watchwords of old world revolutionists without their justification!

Labor discontent is the effect of two main influences. The first is natural, the second is artificial. The first is largely justifiable and largely beneficial. The second is neither justifiable nor beneficial.

Labor is discontented because it feels that it has not sufficient share in the profits of its effort nor sufficient influence in the control of conditions affecting industry and private life.

But the whole current of American life is sweeping labor forward to greater prosperity and security. The standard of living of the wage earner has steadily advanced. His right to combine for his betterment is acknowledged and receives better support year by year. His health, his safety, his provision for old age are given more consideration as time goes on. His influence in the regulation of his conditions of work is more and more widely provided for. The general policy of employers and the public is growing steadily more comprehensive and helpful toward the problems of the wage earner. His place in the national economy is more respected with time and democratic progress.

All that the American wage earner needs to realize how fallacious are the appeals of radical doctrinaires is to put the fate of the Russian people up beside the conditions of the worker in America. Then he will understand what he has to lose.

But radical propaganda, the artificial cause of labor discontent, takes little account of these general facts. It borrows its phrases and its ideas from the old world. For half a century it has been trying to flood the mind of American workers with discontent, with unbalanced criticism of the evils of our system, with foreign made remedies for American conditions. There has been no efficient defense from this pervasive education in foreign radicalism. Fortunately the realities have been strong enough to resist it, but it has done a great deal of harm and will continue to do harm until counter education defeats it. It creates false alarms, unjustified resentments, exaggerated discontent. It shuts minds to what is sound and beneficial and turns men away from the open road of progress through American institutions for the advancement of every American. Instead of teaching the man who is discontented how he may prosper in our social order and how to make use of the institutions created for his protection, it teaches blind resentment, class hatred, foolish violence. It preaches destruction, not constructive reform.

There is no justification in the general conditions of American life for revolutionary teaching. Our institutions are not perfect. Our conditions are not perfect. There never will be perfect conditions or institutions anywhere until human beings are perfect. But the condition of the average man in this country answers the radical destructionist. Look at those who occupy every place of power and prosperity in this country. In almost every case they are men who began with empty hands. The amount of hereditary wealth in this country counts for little, and there will be less as time goes on, for our laws are directed against it. The taxation of inheritance and the handing down of great accumulations of property will reduce this progressively. The competitive system of life keeps the door of achievement open to all. If the poor man cannot pass through, his son may do so, as other poor men have before him. Virtually all the high places are filled by poor men or the sons of poor men, and so it will be. The great fortunes dissolve, the men born to riches descend to join the poor in a later generation. The whole current of our life sweeps the industrious and intelligent forward. No one is chained to his place unless he chains himself, and even the poorest children have the world before them.

This is not to say there are not wrongs to be righted or conditions to be bettered in this country. There are, and they are going to be righted and bettered, but by our own American intelligence and in our own sensible American way. There is no country like this in the world today. Hope and opportunity are the common property, and the prophet of old world revolutions who tells our people they have nothing to lose but their chains belongs in some other country.

Labor discontent, when it is clear headed and constructive, is to be welcomed. But a good deal of it is simply bad temper created by false ideas and the evil promptings of preachers of old world hatreds. That sort of discontent strikes at our common welfare and injures the wage earners first of all. It creates loss to all by wrong headed strikes and futile violence. It attacks the future of the wage earner's children by trying to destroy the path by which they can go forward to better things. It does not release us from the chains we bear, but endangers the good things we have won and prepares to forge new chains for the future.

American labor needs to keep its head clear, and most of all, to realize what it is blessed with in benefits of the present and hopes for the future.

It has more to lose than any people in the world today.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

A cold wind comes from the lake and the commuter is driven to the log fire. Evening chill comes early. The phlox is bright in the moonlight and the perfume of nicotiana is on the wind, but the doors are closed against the garden. The song of the black cricket is muffled and the occasional note of the harvest fly is a croak. The hand which lay on February is reaching out to rub the foliage of the woods and take the plants by the throat.

When that has been done, when tapestries are brown and the garden white, the ticket clipping will seem to slow down as expectancy takes the place of realization. The short day of December is longer than the long day of June. Time plods over the snow and flies through the roses, traveling through January and February with snowshoes and through July and August with wings.

The August ticket will be clipped in a hurry, but the commuter will hold the January ticket a long time. Late corn is growing in the sun and after the chill the warmer days return to the flower of the garden year when the ticket is bright yellow and the wild sunflower peers over the hedge, but the commuter has had the touch on the shoulder. The path goes by phlox and goldenrod, but it narrows through the garden to the door which lets within the four walls of intensive life.

PLAY—AN ACCOMPLISHMENT.

A visitor to Chicago is impressed by the ability of our populace to play and the opportunities available for such play. A drive through the parks and along the shore reveals thousands of persons enjoying out of door play, at the beaches, on the tennis courts, and along the golf courses. The forest preserves add the spectacle of family picnics, "scrub" ball games, horseshoe pitching, and so forth. It is a varied and interesting panorama, and one of undoubted value to Chicago both for the health and renewed heart for work which it puts into our people and for the impression which it leaves upon the visitor.

More than that, it reveals a new development in the social life of America. How many of the present middle aged generation can remember a mother who donned a bathing suit and went swimming with the children? How many can remember a father who actually played at some skilled and lung-expanding outdoor sport with his sons? Few, we believe.

Yet how many of this same middle aged generation of fathers and mothers are now taking on their sons and daughters for golf, or tennis, or swimming, and giving the young ones a run for the honors? Many. Fathers and mothers are accomplishing two things thereby. They are lengthening and strengthening their own lives and powers, and at the same time are keeping in closer touch and sympathy with their children, to the great advantage of both.

Play is a great thing, particularly outdoor play. Americans have been too much inclined in the past to forget its practical value. We are learning something both pleasant and valuable. Give thanks, even give a discreet cheer, when you see a mother in an abbreviated bathing suit taking lessons in the trudgeon stroke from a bobbed haired daughter. Resolve to do likewise when you see a gray haired father in knickers smothering rough language before a slim son who is trying to correct his slice on the golf course.

It's an accomplishment. It means progress. It is something for national self-congratulation.

WHEN AND WHERE, BEFORE HOW, TO SWIM.

Recently issued statistics show that more than 7,000 persons are drowned each year in the United States. That is considerably below the death list due to automobile accidents, but it is sufficiently large to make us pause for thought, especially in this season when Lake Michigan and a hundred other bodies of water within vacation travel of Chicago are attracting their hundreds of thousands of bathers daily.

Every one should learn to swim. It is a comparatively easy accomplishment. Try to sink to the bottom in three feet of water and you will be convinced. But learning to swim is not a sufficient precaution against drowning. It is as important to know when and where as to know how to swim. And it is even easier.

Cramps, which render the strongest swimmer helpless in a moment, take a heavy toll of life annually. This danger can be reduced to a minimum by refraining from going into the water while greatly overheated, or soon after a heavy meal. Venturing boldly into unknown waters also takes its toll of life. Even a strong swimmer should learn something about the topography of the bottom, the holes and hidden stumps, before he wanders too far. Remaining too long in deep water while strength is unconsciously exhausted is another source of danger. Diving in shallow water is an added danger. Streams where treacherous currents abound are dangerous places. If all these things are taken into consideration the annual toll of death by drowning will be reduced to a minimum. It merely requires application of common sense as to when and where in addition to a little practice as to how to swim.

COUNTRY CLUB DEVELOPMENT.

[Illinois State Journal.]

Saturday the Peoria Country club dedicated a new club house. Peoria refers to it, with customary boastfulness, as "a million dollar club house." It is a magnificent building, whatever its cost may have been, and a show place indeed.

Springfield's Illini Country club is preparing to abandon its present location as too small and out of date. A very much larger tract of land and a better and bigger house are desired. Bloomington now has three country clubs.

News from south of Sangamon is to the effect that Hillsboro is little short of bereft of its senses over its new country club. Mount Olive and Staunton citizens have united to organize a joint club and purchase ninety acres of land, while other citizens of Staunton are organizing the club that shall be exclusively Staunton's.

Is it a phase or symptom of great underlying movement to break the fetters and unload the burdens that modern city life has been placing on men and women and children? If those who can afford the expense of the country club feel such an impulse, what must be the feelings of those who cannot afford it, but must continue without hope of any relief?

TUBERCULAR GLANDS.

THE reports coming in from all parts of the country relative to the treatment of tubercular glands of the neck, the old time scurvy, are practically to the same effect—to wit: operation for the removal of the affected glands is rarely indicated.

Every day you meet one or more persons with neck scars, showing that they have passed through the severe operation for scrofula in vogue twenty-five years ago. It may have been that the operation was advisable at that time. It may have saved people from consumption. Beyond doubt, it was an improvement over the "king's touch" cure which it supplanted.

But now we have new arrows in the quiver, and the old time complete operation has gone the way of the "king's touch" cure.

Dr. Miller reports an investigation of nearly 500 cases in the Massachusetts general hospital. Of these they found out the subsequent history of 150. The study shows that a considerable portion of people who have scrofula develop consumption.

The proportion is higher than among the general population, but of those who developed consumption the number dying was small. The few cases observed seemed to indicate that the ability to combat, or even cure, the disease (consumption) was increased.

Now for the treatment of the glands themselves.

First, the cause of the infection must be removed. This consideration leads, finally, to the policy of removing the tonsils and adenoids in every case. At first they only removed the tonsils that seemed diseased. But they found a good deal of evidence that apparently healthy tonsils could feed a stream of tubercle bacilli day by day into the glands.

Therefore, they adopted the policy of removal of tonsils and adenoids in all cases, whether they appeared healthy or diseased.

The next step was to improve the hygiene of the patient and his surroundings, particularly his home surroundings. For this purpose a home visitor was employed. Bad cases were put to bed in the open air and overfed—in other words, the open-air-bed-treatment of consumption was carried out.

Patients in better condition kept at work, but they slept in the open air and were given extra good feeding.

From this point on treatment varied in the different cases. A treatment which helped one case might not help the next one.

Nearly all got tuberculin. As a rule it was given in small or moderate doses. A few were greatly benefited by very large doses. Sunlight was curative for some, X-rays for others, and mercury lamps with others.

A few had to have operations.

Acute abscesses, over which the skin was red, were drained. Old cold abscesses were also drained. The operation consisted in merely lancing the abscess and permitting the pus to run out. The old style dissection operation was not done.

After drainage, the neck was treated with some sort of light, tuberculin was injected, and the patient slept in the open air and ate as do those "taking the cure."

SHE'S A BUTTERMILK FIEND.

E. B. C. writes: "1 Please analyze buttermilk for me and tell me if it contains too many calories for a person, who is trying to reduce, to drink a quart a day.

"It is my favorite food and I often take it instead of eating solids because I really enjoy it, and whenever I mention trying to lose about 25 pounds of overweight some crepehanger tries to blame my lack of a girlish figure to my beloved buttermilk.

"I golf, swim, row, walk a great deal, and dance, do settingup exercises 15 minutes every morning, and still I am more than pleasingly plump—in spite of trying to diet according to rule.

"2. Will half an hour's rowing every morning do as much as 15 minutes settingup exercises towards helping me find a waistline or which of my chins I want to keep?

"If you can conscientiously tell me that buttermilk is not the reason why I am not thin please say so in print, so I can flash it on the killjoys, who persist in trying to save me from being a buttermilk fiend."

REPLY.

1. A quart of buttermilk contains 332 calories. It contains as much sugar as two pounds of such vegetables as asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower, greens, lettuce, cucumbers, spinach, and tomatoes. It is all right to drink a quart of it provided you cut down correspondingly on other foods.

Buttermilk contains 91 per cent water, 3 per cent protein, 5 per cent fat, 48 per cent carbohydrates, 1 per cent ash.

2. Yes.

THE HEART'S "S O S" CALL.

F. I. W. writes: "What is a cure of the following symptoms in a man of 60?

"Walking at all rapidly or any severe exertion induces a feeling of constriction just above the region of the heart, compelling cessation of any effort for a few minutes; is intermittent in attack, but fairly constant immediately after hearty meal."

REPLY.

It may mean disease of the heart.
Your heart tells you in that way that you are calling on it for more than it can stand.
Or it may be nervousness.
Let a careful examination decide.

HERE'S JOB FOR A MASSEUR.

S. B. R. writes: "Kindly advise me what to do for a stiff ankle. My foot was broken about a year ago, and the cast put on was not made properly.

"Is this the cause of my trouble?"

REPLY.

I have no way of knowing that the cast was not made properly.
Among the causes of stiff joints after fractures are:
a. The fracture itself.
b. Improper setting.
c. Cast left on too long.
d. No massage or passive motion.
I do not know whether the fault was yours or anybody's.
Have a masseur get to work on you without further delay.

CHILL FROM ELECTRIC FAN.

A. R. writes: "Is there any danger to sleep for several hours facing an electric fan which is in motion?"

REPLY.

The only danger is that you may get too chilled.
That danger should be guarded against.

THEN DRINK LESS COFFEE.

Mrs. D. writes: "I have dizzy spells at times, especially if I drink too much coffee. Get a sick feeling in my stomach.

"Will you please tell me what that comes from?"

REPLY.

Why not drink less coffee?

KNIFE FOR CROSSED EYES.

C. R. writes: "I have a slight turn in my eye. I am going on 17. My parents are both dead. I would like to know if my eyes can be straightened by an operation. I am wearing glasses, but they are straight only while I wear them."

REPLY.

Test each of your eyes. Close one eye and try the vision of the other. The probability is that you will find that there is no vision in the crossed eye. Cross eyes can be straightened by operation. As a rule, wearing glasses is ineffective, when the condition has persisted so long.

LOSES REGISTRATION CARD.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Please tell me if it is possible to secure a duplicate of my military registration card which I got from my local draft board? I have applied for citizenship papers, but was told that I had to have this card. I have lost the original. F. B.

The records from all the draft boards are now in the office of the adjutant general, United States army, Washington, D. C.

We do not know if that office would be willing to undertake the arduous task of searching through the records of the millions of men who registered. Your only hope of securing the card is by writing to that office.

DOESN'T KNOW HER NAME.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In November, 1921, my husband divorced me on the grounds of desertion. I did not cross-bill or appear and therefore was not given back my maiden name.

My husband is now married again.

1. What is my legal name? My maiden name or his name, with a No. 1 affixed to distinguish me from his second wife?

2. Is his second wife, if she knew that his year was not yet up, also liable to prosecution? G. W. M.

We would say that it is the name which you signed to your letter. Second wife would be liable to prosecution.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FOR EX-SERVICE MEN.

The Red Cross Home Service section is trying to locate relatives or friends of Stanley Smyth, a native of Russian Poland, who enlisted in Chicago September, 1920, and was discharged April, 1921. He gave for his residence the Y. M. C. A. hotel, 822 South Wabash avenue. Father's name Stanley Smith Sr.

Anyone able to furnish the desired information please communicate with the Red Cross, 58 East Washington street, or telephone Randolph 7480.

BALKS AT INTEREST.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Ten months ago I purchased some furniture in a flat, tendering $500 and signing ten notes for $50 each. I have paid these notes each with $50 and have them in my possession. The notes call for 6 per cent interest, which I have not paid.

1. Has the other party any legal proof of my indebtedness? He holds an agreement which I signed that tells of the sale of the furniture to me.

2. Is this of value to him or to me?

3. With a receipt for $500 and ten notes for $50 don't need any further proof of a clear title to the property?

F. D. M.

1. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing whether you signed a contract in addition to the notes why they did not collect the interest, whether there was a consideration for a waiver of the interest, etc. The fact that he does not hold the notes would not necessarily be conclusive.

2. We do not understand the question.

3. Depends on the wording of the contract, on whether a chattel mortgage was recorded, etc.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

REPAIRS PROMISED.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—[Friend of the People.]—Last April the sewer men made a large opening in the pavement in the 3200 block of Indiana avenue, which is now filled with loose sand. This place has already caused several accidents. We have been unable to have it repaired by the city. G. F.

The opening was made under authority of a permit from this bureau, by a licensed plumber, who deposited the sum required to defray the cost of restoration of pavement. The street is now in good temporary condition for traffic, and will be permanently repaired by our repair force as soon as it reaches that vicinity.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

UNRELIABLE WORKMAN.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I hired a plumber to fix our sewer pipes, which he did, charging me $20. In about two weeks I had to send again for him, as the sewer was again out of commission. He charged me $5 that time. Now I have had to get the plumber again and again he asks $5. I had out a city inspector and he said there was something wrong with the main pipes. Now do you think I should pay the plumber this last $5 he charged me? The city inspector finally had it all fixed right. D. F. C.

The facts that you state are not conclusive as to whether he earned the money or not.

INCONSISTENT INTOLERANCE.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Although the people of Chicago voted three to one against sumptuary intolerance, Bill Bryan and Bill White would slam me into the hoosegow were I to make, sell, or drink a glass of beer. Both of these gentlemen are strong for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, local hostility thereto to the contrary notwithstanding. But Bill Bryan and Bill White sing very softly when it comes to the enforcement of the fifteenth and nineteenth amendments in South Carolina and Mississippi. Mr. Bryan is also very still about the enforcement of these amendments in his newly adopted home state of Florida. Bill enjoys the beautiful southern sunset and his health is good enough to yearn for the continued pleasure of watching these settings.

But Mr. White is also dissatisfied with a Kansas law, and he therefore flouts it. It is not a question of whether this law is wise or just. It may not be either and it may be construed improperly. But men who insist on others hewing to the line are surely the last who should manifest contempt for any law. And yet I think these men are true to type. The man who would impose his views of personal conduct on the other fellow is very likely to resent a rule which is not of his choosing. JOHN W. MASKELL.

"DEPLORING VIOLENCE."

Chicago, Aug. 5.—"The great majority of union men sincerely deplore violence."

After every outbreak of violence in connection with an industrial dispute, the leaders of the unions come out with the above statement, and the newspapers echo it.

No intelligent person doubts for a moment that every member of the Herrin miners' union knows perfectly well the names of all the men engaged in the massacre, and that many of the murderers, probably a majority, are members of the union. Still, "the great majority" have been so busy "deploring violence" that, so far as known, they have not expelled them from the organization. Neither the state nor the national organizations of the United Mine Workers have taken any steps to suspend the Herrin union until the murderers are expelled.

A little less "deploring" and a bit more action showing the sincerity of their regret might cause the public to receive their protestations with more belief. THE COURT.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THANATOPSIS.

By William Cullen Bryant.

TO him who, in the love of Nature, holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness and a smile,
And eloquence of beauty; and she glides
Into his darker musings with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness ere he is aware. When thoughts
Of the last bitter hour come like a blight
Over thy spirit, and sad images
Of the stern agony, and shroud, and pall,
And breathless darkness, and the narrow house,
Make thee to shudder and grow sick at heart;
Go forth under the open sky, and list
To Nature's teachings, while from all around—
Earth and her waters, and the depths of air—
Comes a still voice: Yet a few days, and thee
The all-beholding sun shall see no more
In all his course; nor yet in the cold ground
Where thy pale form was laid, with many tears,
Nor in the embrace of ocean, shall exist
Thy image. Earth, that nourished thee, shall claim
Thy growth, to be resolved to earth again;
And, lost each human trace, surrendering up
Thine individual being, thou shalt go
To mix forever with the elements;
To be a brother to the insensible rock,
And to the sluggish clod which the rude swain
Turns with his share and treads upon.
The oak
Shall send his roots abroad, and pierce thy mold.
Yet not to thine eternal resting place
Shalt thou retire alone—nor couldst thou wish
Couch more magnificent. Thou shalt lie down
With patriarchs of the infant world—with kings,
The powerful of earth—the wise, the good,
Fair forms, and hoary seers of ages past,
All in one mighty sepulcher. The hills,
Rock-ribbed, and ancient as the sun; the vales
Stretching in pensive quietness between;
The venerable woods; rivers that move
In majesty, and the complaining brooks
That make the meadows green; and, poured round all,
Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste—

Are but the solemn decorations all
Of the great tomb of man! The golden sun,
The planets, all the infinite host of heaven,
Are shining on the sad abodes of death,
Through the still lapse of ages. All that tread
The globe are but a handful to the tribes
That slumber in its bosom. Take the wings
Of morning, pierce the Barcan wilderness,
Or lose thyself in the continuous woods
Where rolls the Oregon and hears no sound
Save his own dashings—yet the dead are there!
And millions in those solitudes, since first
The flight of years began, have laid them down
In their last sleep—the dead reign there alone!
So shalt thou rest; and what if thou withdraw
In silence from the living, and no friend
Take note of thy departure? All that breathe
Will share thy destiny. The gay will laugh
When thou art gone, the solemn brood of care
Plod on, and each one, as before, will chase
His favorite phantom; yet all these shall leave
Their mirth and their employments, and shall come
And make their bed with thee. As the long train
Of ages glides away, the sons of men—
The youth in life's green spring, and he who goes
In the full strength of years, matron and maid,
And the sweet babe, and the gray-headed man—
Shall, one by one, be gathered to thy side
By those who in their turn shall follow them.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To the pale realms of shade, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

ARTHUR GRIFFITH CALLED MARTYR TO IRISH CAUSE

"Brain of the Free State" Dies Suddenly.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The death of Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, on the eve of the Free State's victory over the last of the rebels in Cork, is a heavy loss to Ireland and one of those tragedies of which Irish history is full. Fortunately his work has been accomplished and cannot be undone by wreckers who are now in full retreat before the Irish national troops.

I knew Mr. Griffith intimately and was proud to call him friend. I had the good fortune to be selected by him to help initiate the conferences resulting in the Anglo-Irish treaty.

Many of the preliminary meetings were held in the London office of THE TRIBUNE. During all that time I was in close touch with the Irish leader and I know that he never wavered an instant from his ultimate aim, which was the freedom of Ireland inside of the British empire.

Never a Separationist.

Mr. Griffith was never a republican or a separationist. His ideal, conceived more than thirty years ago, and untiringly worked for, was a government of Ireland by a king, house of lords, and house of commons, as in the days of Henry Grattan, the statesman and orator, the king being the same person as the English king, but with separate functions and responsible only to the Irish parliament in Irish affairs.

Mr. Griffith was the intellectual father and mother of the Sinn Fein. It was he who conceived the idea of the abstention of the Irish representatives in the English parliament. It was he who worked out the constitution of the new Irish state, and it was he who conducted the struggle which resulted in the victory of the Irish idea of freedom.

It is known that he disapproved and hated violent methods, but when his associates decided they were necessary he subordinated his own ideas and fell in line with his comrades. His loyalty to his friends is exemplified also in his attitude toward Michael Collins, whom he made head of the Irish provisional government, declaring "it is the proudest thing in my life to be associated with Michael Collins, the man who won the war."

Made Victory Possible.

Mr. Collins himself admits that Mr. Griffith did at least as much of the actual winning of the war, and all the quiet work which made victory possible.

It is now permissible to tell the inside story of Eamon de Valera's rise to popular leadership. Mr. De Valera is the sole surviving commander of the 1916 rebellion, and the first Sinn Fein member of parliament elected. When the first Sinn Fein convention was held in Dublin and the republic was proclaimed, he was nominated for president on his "war record." He was elected by acclamation. The sober heads in the assembly realized the mistake, secured an adjournment, and the next day elected Mr. Griffith vice president, and a cabinet of Griffith supporters.

As soon as possible De Valera was sent to America, where it was thought at least he would do no harm and the whole campaign was entrusted to Mr. Griffith.

Dublin Theaters Closed.

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—The official statement issued this afternoon announcing the death of Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann and Free State leader, said:

"The government announces with great sorrow that President Griffith, who has been ill for a short time past, died at 10 o'clock this morning at a private hotel in Lower Leeson street, Dublin."

As a consequence to the death of Mr. Griffith all theaters and motion picture houses will be closed until Tuesday night. The opening of the Dublin horse show will be postponed until Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Griffith leaves a wife and two children.

"Brain of Free State."

The sudden death of Mr. Griffith followed a gradual weakening of his physical reserve, believed to have been caused by the strain of his experiences during the period of "terror" preceding the truce with England, the long and arduous negotiations with the British government, and the heavy work entailed in connection with setting up the Free State government.

Commenting on his death today, a prominent Free Stater said:

"Ireland has suffered an immeasurable loss. As Michael Collins is the sword of the movement for a free and independent Ireland, so Griffith was its brain."

Chicago Sends Condolences.

Resolutions indorsing the new Irish Free State and condoling with them for the death of Arthur Griffith were adopted yesterday when several thousand of the Friends of Irish Freedom met at a picnic at Elm Tree grove. Michael W. Purcell, district attorney of Latrome county, Wyo., and Patrick H. O'Donnell, Chicago attorney, were the chief speakers.

IRISH LEADER DIES

LAST OF REBEL TROOPS DRIVEN FROM CORK CITY

50 Captured in Battle in Fire Ruins.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Fighting is now in progress around Killarney. Erskine Childers is leading the irregulars, numbering about 500. Gen. Daly is anxious to spare the famous beauty spot and is reserving his fire when possible.

CORK, Aug. 12.—[By United Press.]—Occupation of Cork by Free State troops was completed today when the last of the rebel garrison surrendered.

Fifty republicans were taken prisoners, after making a last stand in the ruins of the buildings they had burned.

Seven Free State soldiers were killed and many wounded.

Clonmel Battle Severe.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

WATERFORD, Ireland, Aug. 12.—Clonmel, one of the principal centers of the irregulars, is in the hands of the Irish nationals. It was captured with the loss of one man killed.

The fighting was more severe than the casualties would indicate, and the resistance was especially strong around the famous Kilkash castle, from where the irregulars were dislodged finally by shell fire.

The operations were conducted by Col. Prout, who advanced three bodies of men from Carrick on Suir and gradually encircled Clonmel, intercepting the irregulars' retreat. Both the military barracks and police barracks were fired by the irregulars before their retreat, but the town otherwise was little injured.

Queenstown Buildings Burn.

PLYMOUTH, England, Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—Capt. Schofield of the steamer President Polk said upon arrival here today that when the ship was calling at Queenstown yesterday a number of shots were fired across the vessel's bow. The admiralty house and the war hospital were burning at that time, he said.

Refugees arriving at Plymouth from Queenstown said terrorism was rampant, and that citizens were forced by Irish irregulars, armed with revolvers, to raid shops for food, the loot afterward being seized by the republicans.

TESTS THEORY OF EINSTEIN ON MONT BLANC

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 12.—On the highest peak of Mont Blanc, Jean La Carme, a French physicist, will carry out shortly one of the most interesting experiments of a century.

Sitting snugly in Vallot observatory, which marks one of the higest points reached by man, and with mother earth swinging under him like a pendulum, M. La Carme will measure the variation in the intensity of gravity in an attempt to verify Einstein's theory. Specifically, he wishes to determine if the mass of earth, as Einstein insists, is variable.

The experiment will be somewhat similar to the famous experiment of Galileo, carried out with a pendulum in St. Peter's, when he discovered that the pendulum swung in a different direction the following morning, due to the motion of the earth.

In the altitude where M. Le Carme will make his experiments the best watches run irregularly and wireless time signals are almost impossible to pick up on account of the rare atmosphere. Every second day M. Le Carme must inject oxygen under his skin to avoid cerebral anemia.

First Compounded This Remedy for My Own Neighbors

Their praise of this newer form of iron has spread so rapidly that now, after nine years, over 4,000,000 people use Nuxated Iron.

Years ago I began to wonder at the great number of my own friends and neighbors who were always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better. Both workingmen and their wives were frequently tired out in the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous, and run-down. One had pains in the back and thought he had kidney trouble. Another had pains around the heart, palpitations and dizziness, and was sure she was suffering from heart disease. Others have severe headaches. Floating specks before the eyes, tender spots on the spine and a great variety of distressing symptoms.

For years I made a special study of this condition, consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. As the result of investigations by myself, a number of investigations by others all over the country showed that seven people out of every four you meet, (about 75 per cent) in their blood, lack enough iron in their blood. Lack of iron in the blood is the greatest cause of fatigue and distressing weaknesses. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. And then, nothing you eat does you any good. Your heart, lungs and kidneys and all your vital organs get no nourishment from the blood. They starve, and when the blood lacks iron the face is thin, pale and watery, you may suffer from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and primary cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood.

In the old days people often took simple iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In comparison, Nuxated Iron I use the newer form of iron, which is like the iron in the blood and like the iron in spinach, lamb chops and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth, nor disturb the stomach, and it is said to produce almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. It is the iron in the blood which is rich in iron that possesses great strength, force and endurance. If you are not strong or well I want you to make the following test:

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks—then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. An astonishing number of run-down people who were ailing for a while, have greatly increased their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by using newer forms of iron.

Honey Waffles, with three strips of bacon, butter and pure maple sap or honey - - - - 25c

Bacon and Eggs. Two fresh eggs, fried in butter, and four strips of bacon - - - - 30c

A million and a half people—that's at the rate of more than 4,000 a day. It is probably twice as many as dined at any other good Chicago restaurant or hotel last year. Figure it down to hours, minutes and seconds and you will see that to reach that enormous total an average of one diner entered the North American Restaurant every 15 seconds, from 7 in the morning until midnight. And this year the totals are running way ahead of last year.

These figures prove startlingly the great popularity of the North American. They are the best possible evidence of the unanimous approval which Chicago downtown diners have put upon our Common Sense plan of doing business. They prove that people are glad to serve themselves here when by doing so they get big portions of food (always the highest quality) at prices from 40 to 60 per cent less than other good dining places must charge to include "service."

Yet in spite of the tremendous number of people who dine here every day our capacity is so large, and our facilities for cooking and handling food so perfect, that never is any long wait necessary. That is true even during the busiest periods. Here you will always be at your table with your food in far less time than you could be served in most good dining places. And here there is always a table for you.

ORCHESTRA FOR EVERY VILLAGE, CHORALCELO AIM

But Courts May Change Its Tune.

Following the news that Wilber E. Farrington, promoter of Choralcelo, Inc., had been called before the "Blue Sky" commission, which has promised to aid some complaining stockholders, other investors in the corporation, it seems, also have made complaint.

The action of the stockholders is only a part of Choralcelo's story. The real story—of how Farrington induced 2,000 people to invest $1,400,000 by methods unique in the annals of salesmanship—extends back over seventeen years. In Chicago, scene of his most recent artistic and business endeavors, the setting is the house belonging to Mrs. Lysander Hill at 174 East Chestnut street, on which Farrington holds a five year lease.

Of Farrington's work, the trustees of the corporation had this to say last spring:

"Choralcelo, Inc., its officers and directors, are not in any way responsible or liable for the studio maintained by W. E. Farrington at 174 East Chestnut street nor anything that goes on therein."

Gives a Demonstration.

There last Monday, as he has done many Mondays before, Farrington gave a demonstration of the Choralcelo.

The living room is darkened. A single light from a room beyond reveals the soft browns of the walls, the rugs, the tapestries, the signs of the zodiac done in brass which shine dimly, a dozen persons, half lost in the depths of period chairs, sit rapt and silent or whisper in voices awed by the magic spell of the dusk, the music, and the voice of Farrington.

At the end of the room high on the seat of the Choralcelo sits Mrs. Regene Farrington. As if without volition of her own, but allowed to act only at the master's will, her fingers tremble over the keys, now swiftly flying, now slowly sure, summoning music over which musicians from all over the world have rhapsodized.

Symphony and Hymn.

Symphony, concerto, folk song, hymns, grand opera, flood the room as if with color, while all the while the low tuned voice of Farrington floats on the music of this instrument which his brain and faith have created.

"Gene, play that symphony of Bach that you and I love so well. Ah, I could sit and listen the whole night through. A little more of the oboe, Gene, but softly—pianissimo. At her fingertips, you see, are all the instruments of the greatest orchestra. Listen, the clarinet, the cello, the harp, the piano, the horn. Softly, Gene, just a chord or two on the echo now. A bit of Handel's 'Largo.' Hear that bass, the only bass in the world that doesn't lag.

"And all from ordinary piano strings, a few bits of wood and steel and aluminum actuated by magnetic waves. Not an imitation but an idealization of each instrument. The Choralcelo violin does not sound like a violin? No, true. The Choralcelo is too perfect."

Audience Sits Entranced.

Meanwhile the audience sits entranced, drinking in the music of the instrument and the voice. A man who seems well acquainted with Farrington leans over and whispers to him, "What instrument do you play?" and Farrington whispers back. "The human mind. I paint word pictures."

Another man, sitting with his daughters, and who has failed to catch the whisper, murmurs, "The morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

"Give us 'Nearer My God to Thee,' please, Gene," calls the master softly.

"Think what the Choralcelo will mean to the village church, the hospital, the crossroads school. We shall girdle the earth with music. One unit or a hundred, depending on the size of the building. Quantity production, a single keyboard, so simple that any one can play it, a cabinet the size of a small bookcase against the wall—and we shall be able to make all this for $500, a price within the reach of every one."

First Mention of Money.

The first mention of money.

As the audience files out the man who talked of the stars now breathes something about "the music of the spheres."

Last of all, Farrington and Mrs. Farrington leave the studio for their home at 1353 North State street, locking the door on the Choralcelo, which bears an attachment for back pay by an ungrateful former employé.

750 Autos and $3,000 Needed for Orphan Outing

More than 750 automobiles and $3,000 will be needed this year for the annual outing, Aug. 15, in Lincoln park of 3,500 orphans and 400 aged men and women from old peoples' homes, officers of the Orphans' Automobile Day association say. The outing will be held in the north side park just south of the Grant monument. Individuals and business concerns are asked to contribute automobiles and funds.

DIES OF RAILWAY INJURY.

James McLeod, 42, of 27 West 10th street, a laborer employed by the Illinois Central railroad, died yesterday from injuries suffered Friday, when he was struck by a train at 15th street.

ROCK ISLAND TO MARK BIRTHDAY OCT. 10; 70 YEARS

Celebration on Oct. 10 of the seventieth anniversary of the first Rock Island railway passenger train between Chicago and Joliet, Ill., then the terminus of the road, will center in Chicago. The day, however, will be elaborately observed in all the principal cities on the company's lines.

The system-wide celebration will center around the "Rock Island Night" radio program, broadcaster from the Westinghouse sending station. Addresses will be made by J. E. Gorman, president of the road, and Charles Hayden, chairman of the board of directors.

Reenactment of the first run on the road of a passenger train will be made Oct. 10, with the Rocky Mountain Limited substituted for the original train of 1852. The train will make a special stop at Joliet.

In Joliet a monument to S. B. Reed, who surveyed the line for the railroad into Chicago, will be unveiled. At Rock Island United States government officials will place a bronze tablet on a pier of the first railroad bridge built across the Mississippi river.

Breathe Circulated Air ~Keep Your Health

YOU wouldn't drink water from a stagnant pool—then why endanger your health by breathing stagnant air? The air in your home should be kept in motion—not by drafts—but by scientific circulation.

A Holland Warm-Air Circulating System keeps the room filled bountifully, with the comfortable, healthful, cheerful atmosphere that goes so far toward the success of a home.

In its natural state winter air is at least as pure and healthful as summer air. Many a person has been cured of lung trouble in climates much colder than that of Maine, Montana or Minnesota. Nature is not at fault if we mistreat the elemental things that she provides in any season.

Winter should be looked forward to as a season of better health, and more gladness—a time when germs outdoors are snowed under or frozen—a time of coziness and wholesome family-life indoors.

Cold weather does not harm the person who is prepared for it. There is no fear of winter in a Holland-heated home.

Of course, winter does bring with it the rather unwelcome cost of fuel, but Holland owners have the comfort of using less fuel than they would use with any other heating system. A thorough investigation of an entire city, Mt. Pleasant, Michigan, proved Holland's superiority in this important respect. And there is no mystery about it—nothing but the scientific burning of fuel—the economic utilization of heat units—which any Holland expert will gladly explain.

Although the Holland is decidedly a quality-furnace, providing a clean, even distribution of moistened air with the least amount of fuel, the price is moderate.

And these are the reasons:

First:—the Holland is not fancy. It is built durably and simply, with the primary purpose of comfort in the home.

Second:—you buy direct from the greatest furnace manufacturing plants in the world. There are no side line commissions to increase the cost.

Third:—the Holland is efficiently advertised; people understand many Holland advantages. Millions read what a million already know by experience. The greater demand makes possible the greater, more efficient production.

Buy Your Own Home-Heating System

Make sure that the responsibility of installing the furnace as well as the responsibility of making it is all put directly upon a concern that is responsible. It costs much less than to take a chance with someone who sells a furnace as a sideline. Holland enginers do not guess. Investigate thoroughly and you will decide upon a Holland.

Good ventilation—the Holland way—with abundant warmth for every room, actually costs less than the dead air with such systems as stoves, steam, hot water, vapor and the many "Hot Air" furnaces, which are unscientifically installed.

If this appeals to you, get complete information today. You will never regret it. Almost three times as many Hollands were sold in July this year as in July last year.

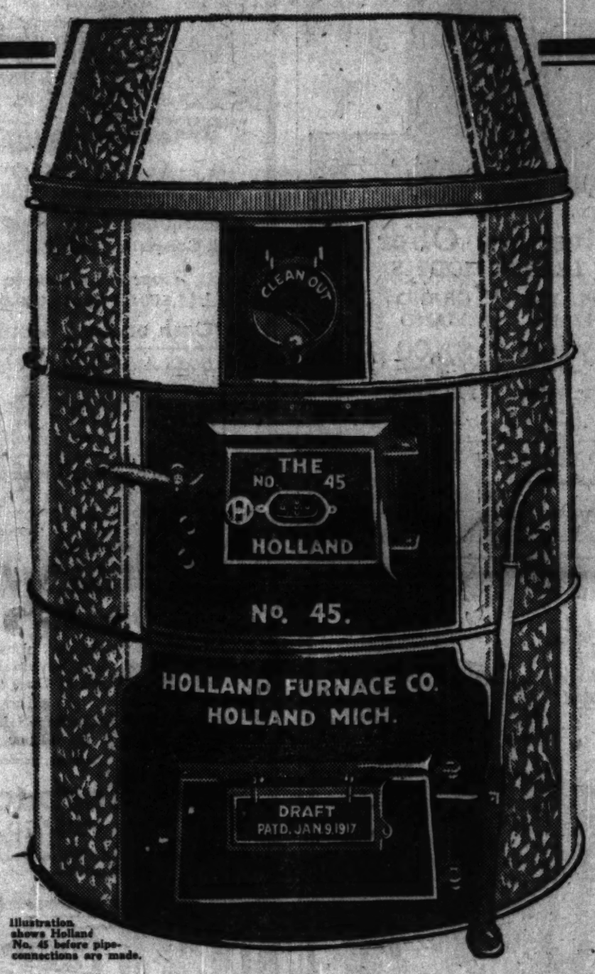

Illustration shows Holland No. 45 before pipe-connections are made.

And Let Us Suggest Buying Now

The foresighted home-owner will not wait to buy his furnace until the "11th hour." In September and October we will be dealing with a lot of folks who cannot see the advantages of buying earlier. Every one, including our engineers, will be rushed late in the Fall.

We hope that we may have enough trained men this year to satisfy the entire demand for Holland installations. But if we do it will be the first time in the history of our business. We can make the furnaces, but there is a limit to the number we can install, and don't overlook the fact that every Holland-installation is planned and executed by Holland experts who have no other work to do. There is positively no division of responsibility.

Let us give you special information relative to the heating of your own home. It is free for the asking and does not obligate you in the least.

THREE CONCERNS INDICTED FOR $750,000 FRAUD

Dragon Motors Caught by U. S. True Bills.

Three Chicago firms, the first of many that recently have been under federal investigation for mail frauds, totaling several millions of dollars, were hit in indictments made public yesterday by Assistant United States District Attorney Harry F. Hamlin. Officials of the three organizations are charged with swindles aggregating $750,000, in which more than 500 persons are alleged to have been victimized.

HARRY F. HAMLIN.

The firms named in the indictment are:

Dragon Motors, capitalized at $1,000,000. Officers indicted, Herman Neidick, Joseph Stein, and Hyman Edelman.

Caterpillar Manufacturing company, Ltd., 608 South Dearborn street. Officers indicted, Charles Weidman, W. C. C. Weidman, John A. Seibert, E. J. Anderson, and M. E. Poelhy.

Jackson Fire Brick company, capitalized at $1,000,000. Officers indicted, Abe L. Salzman, Bernard H. Schwab, and Nate B. Pastel.

Sent Through Mails.

The indictment against the Dragon Motors sets forth that stock in the concern was sold through the mails by the Neidick Financial corporation, with offices in all principal cities, on alleged fraudulent claims that the company was manufacturing one automobile a day, that it possessed assets of $592,772 and that orders were on file for $600,000 worth of taxicabs.

Advertising matter sent through the mails also stated that the stock was being sold with the sanction of the Illinois securities commission, a statement that is said to be untrue. It is charged that 300 persons have been swindled out of sums ranging from $100 to $5,000 through investment in "Dragon Motors." It is charged that the old Selig moving picture studio on the northwest side was pictured on advertising as "the home of Dragon Motors."

Issue $1,000,000 Bonds.

In the charges against the Jackson Fire Brick company it is claimed that Salzman, Schwab, and Pastel issued $1,000,000 worth of bonds on a brick plant in Jackson, Tenn., of which $200,000 worth have been sold. The government charges that the "bonds" were not even secured by a lien on the brick property.

The advertising and mail matter of the company placed special emphasis on the "welfare work" the company was supposed to be doing for employes of the brick plant. They offered to pay bonds in return for property deeds in Jackson. A church is said to be among the properties obtained by the company.

New Tires for Old.

The Caterpillar Manufacturing company, Ltd., is charged with having sold, through the mails, "territorial rights" for a "marvelous tire rejuvenation invention." Advertising claimed that the company was the possessor of a secret process for making new tires out of old casings. It is alleged that territorial rights were sold for sums ranging from $100 to $1,000. Victims were told that if they would buy up old casings they could be restored for a guaranteed service of 5,000 miles and sold for $5 each.

Maj. Hamlin stated that the three indictments and others now being prepared would result in the biggest expose of varied stock selling schemes that has been uncovered since the enactment of "blue sky" laws.

It is probable that all of the officers of the three companies now under indictment will be tried at once, Maj. Hamlin said. In that case more than 500 witnesses, representing all degrees of gullibility, will be called to testify.

SUICIDE REVEALS ILLICIT STILL.

The body of John Neiusek, 2000 South Throop street, was found on the kitchen floor of his home yesterday, death having come from inhaling gas. He was despondent over poor health. Police arrested Frank Kadichik, who shared the flat, as investigation revealed the men had been making moonshine.

CATCHES THIEF

Miss Bernice Dolan made a big catch Friday night when she caused the capture of a negro burglar in her parents' apartment at 5624 South Michigan avenue, police learned yesterday. The negro is an escaped convict from the Ohio state penitentiary, and fifteen burglaries here were traced to him. Miss Dolan, a niece of Police Captain Thomas J. Coughlin, found the negro, William Coffer, ransacking the home. She slipped out and called a patrolman.

OUST CORONER'S AID ACCUSED OF 'WHITEWASHING'

Coroner Peter M. Hoffman yesterday indefinitely suspended Deputy Coroner M. G. Walsh in connection with an alleged "whitewash" given a George G. Florentine, 6959 South May street, at an inquest into the death of Mrs. Mary Brown, 5511 Ingleside avenue, Wednesday, at which the deputy officiated.

PETER M. HOFFMAN.

Mrs. Brown, an aged nurse known for more than forty years to prominent families in the south side, was struck by an automobile driven by Florentine in Jackson park on Aug. 4. She died in Illinois Central hospital on Tuesday.

Driver Fled.

Florentine fled in his car, leaving the aged woman to be taken to the hospital by Mrs. William H. Witter, 4509 Oakenwald avenue.

Mrs. Herbert Wood Smith, 5545 Dorchester avenue, prominent Hyde Park club woman, who witnessed the accident, testified at the inquest, and when the coroner's jury exonerated Florentine immediately requested Coroner Hoffman to reopen the inquest, stating that Deputy Walsh had not allowed the witnesses to tell their stories.

Rather than reopen the inquest, Coroner Hoffman stated, he will lay all the testimony and a list of witnesses before State's Attorney Crowe and demand grand jury action against Florentine.

Will Tell Story to Crowe.

The suspension of the deputy followed a long conference between Coroner Hoffman and Mrs. Smith yesterday morning. The club woman is to go with the coroner to the state's attorney's office to tell how Deputy Walsh conducted the inquest tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Five Shots Fired at Policeman; All Miss

Only the poor aim of a colored man said to be George Kimberling, 1740 Park avenue, saved the life of Policeman George Legg of the Warren avenue station, when he interrupted a street fight at Lincoln and Park avenues early yesterday morning.

Kimberling drew a revolver and fired five shots point blank at the policeman. They all missed. The would-be murderer escaped.

FEAR GIRL WILL DIE BY SUICIDE AS MOTHER DID

"She did it—so will I. Please, if I am ever found, put me next to mother."

A note, begging her "daddy's" forgiveness and pleading that her brother and sister will love instead of loathe her, was left behind by Charlotte Hanson, 15 years old, Friday night, before she disappeared from her home at 3742 North Troy street.

"Charlotte's mother committed suicide several years ago," Emil Hanson, her father, explained. "The girl always wanted to be with her. Suicide has been preying upon her mind."

Slayer of Mrs. Witchell Held to the Grand Jury

Sickly and weak, and one eye gone, Caspar Bastoni was held to the grand jury charged with the murder on July 29 at 149 West Oak street of Mrs. Elizabeth Witchell and her 4 year old daughter, Elizabath Ann, by a coroner's jury yesterday. Lieut. Charles Gratton of the Chicago avenue station testified that he had found the woman and the girl on Bastoni's bed, with bullets in their bodies, and the man on the floor, with a bullet through his eye. Agatha Witchell, a 6 year old daughter, identified Bastoni as having fired all the shots.

FALSE TEETH TOO FALSE, HE SAYS; JUDGE SAYS "NO"

"He made me a set of false teeth, and they came loose in the plate. I want my $75 back," demanded Louis P. Stein, 525 South State street, before Judge Laurence B. Jacobs, in the South Clark street court yesterday. At his elbow stood the dentist, Dr. Felix Rivkin, who goes in for sculpture on the side. A bust he made of Dr. John Dill Robertson is now on display at the pageant.

"Dismissed," declared the judge.

The sculptor took his picturesque person, with flowing hair and tie, to his atelier at 2748 Potomac avenue, to finish immortalizing Mayor Thompson in clay.

Committee Arranges for Catholic Bishops' Sessions

An administrative committee of the National Catholic Welfare council, meeting yesterday at Hotel Sherman, made arrangements for the annual meeting of the bishops of the church to be held in Washington, D. C., Sept. 27 and 28. The committee comprises Archbishop Hanna, San Francisco, presiding; Archbishop Dowling, St. Paul; Bishop Gibbons, Albany, N. Y.; Bishop Walsh, Portland, Me., and Bishop Muldoon, Rockford, Ill.

—now the Smiths dine every Sunday at the Hotel Brevoort

This letter started it

(Letter written by a Chicago business man to his father, who lives in a suburb.)

Dear Dad:
What do you say to having Sunday dinner at the Brevoort Hotel? I've been eating there every week-day for more than a year—and I'm telling you the food, cooking and service are the best I've found anywhere. And you know I've been around some.

Mother and you can drive down. Helen and the children and I will meet you at any time you say.

We can have dinner early and go for our drive in the country—or ride first and go to the Brevoort for an evening dinner. No more roadside meals for me, after our last experience.

I'll phone you Friday and you can let me know.

Love to mother.

Is the Water Hot Yet

That Everlasting Wail—Why not put a stop to it Now

There are homes where there's never any hot water when you really want it. Clothes soaking—dishes stacked—bathing, washing and shaving always being interfered with. Waiting for a poky old water heater to "make up its mind."

If your home is like that you can trade a lot of trouble for a lot of satisfaction by putting in a

The Square Built Heater with the Handsome Green Jacket

Do that and you'll always have plenty of good hot water. You'll have hot water whenever you want it—noon or midnight, summer or winter. Just turning a faucet will give it to you—as much as you want, as long as you want it.

Not only that, but hot water the Humphrey way is cheaper gallon for gallon than what you pay now for your present insufficient, it-or-miss supply. That's a plain fact proved in thousands of homes where big folks and little folks are daily enjoying real hot water satisfaction. You may have a small home or a big one, but there's a Humphrey Heater just the right style, size and price for you.

With a Humphrey the cost is less because you pay for having only the water you actually use. The only time the gas burns is when the water is running—and not all of that. When you turn off the water you turn off the gas. And there's never any hot water standing around to cool.

Only $15 Down

First small payment brings to your home the comfort, convenience and economy of Humphrey hot water supply. Rest in easy payments. Consult any of the Humphrey agencies listed below.

Gleason, father of her six children, it was declared today by Gleason's wife, who, according to her own assertion, is through with the erring husband and will divorce him. The husband will be surrendered to the woman with whom he has lived for seven years.

Willing to Give Up Mate.

"I will not live withhim again," declared Mrs. Caroline Gleason, the wife. "I will not take him back. I am perfectly willing that he should marry this woman after my divorce becomes absolute."

The wife is determined that her husband shall marry Miss Boucher "in order that his children may be brought up properly and may be given a legal name."

"It is not my desire to prosecute my husband, but I want justice done to myself and to his children," she said. "But under no condition will I give up my son Edward. I intend to work to support him, and I will le no one take him away from me."

Vanished After Marriage.

According to counsel fr Mrs. Gleason, the husband deserte her in November, 1913, the same yar they were married. A year later hewas arrested and was ordered to pay his wife $5 a week. After making one payment, he disappeared. He was nt heard from again until found in the Lowdoin street home in Worcester with Miss Boucher.

FRANCE WANTS 2 YEARS TO PLAN PAYMENT TO U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The French government today instructed M. Parmentier, its delegate discussing the French debt with the American funding commission, to inform the American representatives that France hoped to be in a position in eighteen or twenty-four months to submit a practical plan for funding the French debt.

Mr. M. Parmentier had explained to the commision the present inability of France to pay anything on the French debt, the American delegates feared if France expected to offer a plan for funding the debt during the life of the commission.

Count d'Ormay flashed the American message to Premier Poincare in London, who immediately formulated a reply, which is en route to Washington.

LEGION ADMEN TO GIVE BEACH FROLIC AT FORT SHERIDAN

One of the largest gatherings of advertising men ever held is looked for next Saturday, when the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion will entertain older men of the profession and their families at a beach frolic, to be held at Fort Sheridan.

MAJ. SCHROEDER. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

The program will last from early in the afternoon until late at night. Besides a naval bombardment by the Illinois naval reserves under Capt. Edward Evers, in which the 124th field artillery, commanded by Col. Thomas Hammond, will participate, Maj. R. W. Schroeder, who had a narrow escape from death in a fall after setting the world's altitude record, will do some exhibition flying in the clouds, as will Maj. McCord, chief air officer of the 6th army corps. A troupe of famous girl swimmers will give exhibitions in diving, and Col. Horatio S. Hackett will play F. Guy Davis for the advertising fraternity tennis championship.

To handle the crowds, three trains will be run on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, the first leaving the Madison street station at 1:48 p. m. and the others following at 2:45 and 3:30 p. m.

Camp Roosevelt, Ind., Aug. 12.—More than 400 officers, faculty members, cadets, and their ladies attended a military ball at Camp Roosevelt this evening. The dance was sponsored by Maj. and Mrs. F. L. Beals, who welcomed the guests in the large gymnasium. Music was furnished by the Joliet Township High school band.

The visiting guests were met at the Roosevelt station and escorted to the dance floor. At 11:30 p. m. return to the station was made.

While the older boys danced, the junior cadets celebrated a beach party. Following the roast, group games were played in the firelight. Prizes were awarded for the best stunts.

Samuel Harrison Again Heads County Justices

Samuel Harrison, who has been a justice of the peace in Evanston for sixteen years, yesterday was re-elected president of the Cook County Justices, Police Magistrates and Constables association. He announced his intention of going to Springfield to prove that election of five other Evanston justices last year was illegal.

SHERIFF, OUSTED, WON'T QUIT; GIVES WIFE HIS KEYS

Lapeer, Mich., Aug. 12.—Although Ray Baker, sheriff of Lapeer county, was ordered by Gov. Groesbeck to quit his office, and the state Supreme court a few days ago upheld the action of the chief executive, Baker is said to have refused today to relinquish the office to George Carrigan, appointed by the governor to succeed him.

Baker, who was charged with conduct unbecoming an officer at an alleged midnight drinking party, was called upon today by Carrigan and Assistant Attorney General George Mosher, the two demanding keys to the office.

Baker declared he was not in possession of them and referred the two to his wife, whom he had invested with the powers of sheriff. Mrs. Baker refused to surrender the keys, Mosher said. The assistant attorney general reported the situation to his office at Lansing and was advised by the department that unless Baker gave up the office contempt proceedings would be instituted.

INDIANANS CLAIM BOY OF 20 YEARS IS YOUNGEST CASHIER

Declaring that he has the "mature judgment of a banker of thirty-five years," citizens of Mishawaka, Ind., claim for Owen J. Shoemaker the distinction of being the youngest bank cashier in the state and probably in the country. The youth, not quite 21 years old, has been out of high school but three years, and has already held positions as teller and assistant cashier. Shoemaker's home is in Mishawaka, but he works for the Farmers' Loan and Trust company of Napanee, Ind.

AUTO CUTOUTS AND GAS FUMES PERIL HEALTH

Health Commissioner Bundesen in a letter to Chief of Police Fitzmorris yesterday urged a more strict enforcement of ordinances forbidding the use of automobile cutouts and the emission of clouds of gasoline smoke by automobiles within the city.

"I am convinced that both the gasoline fumes and the unnecessary noises made through the failure of motorists to obey the antinoise ordinance are a grave menace to public health," the letter reads in part.

The commissioner said that while on his way to lunch at Hotel La Salle on Friday he found a chauffeur whose taxicab was "smoking" in such volumes that "it was positively a menace to health to walk down the street." When a warning failed to stop the nuisance the commissioner gave the chauffeur a summons to court and he announced that he will be present in the automobile court next Wednesday morning to prosecute the "smoker."

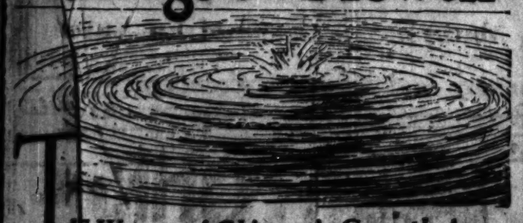
Chicago's Growth



The Waves of Chicago's Growth Are Radiating from Certain Fixed Centers Like the Ripples from a Pebble Cast in a Pool.

There are certain fixed centers in Chicago from which concentrated communities of new homes are rapidly radiating—centers that offer as great potential possibilities for growth and appreciation in value as did 63rd and Cottage, Wilson and Broadway, Roosevelt Road and Kazie, Sheridan Road and Howard Avenue—just a few short years ago.

There is just one good sized piece of vacant property on the near North Side—bounded by through transportation on three sides—that is still available to homeseekers of the better class as a high grade community site. It is fully improved and restricted, of course, on a main artery of motor traffic—with business frontage at a surface line transfer corner. Naturally, there are school boulevards, golf grounds, churches and a shopping district near by.

This property is selling now to reliable individual buyers on a generous term basis that includes no interest the first year. Sewer, water, gas and sidewalks are now being installed. If the home and investment seekers of Chicago could only be made to understand the wonderful possibilities of this tract, every lot would be sold in 8 hours.

It costs nothing to get the facts. Full information, including data, will be given without obligation—no annoying solicitation—all we ask is that you see the property for yourself and follow the dictates of your own good judgment.

DR. SUN SEEKS AID OF CHANG TO SEIZE PEKING

CANTON, Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sun Yat Sen, deposed president of South China, who fled from here Wednesday, is going to Shanghai to meet representatives of Chang Tso Lin, governor of Manchuria, together with leaders in Chekiang province, and Gen. Fung, one of Wu Pei Fu's officers, to perfect a combination against Wu and the Peking administration, it was learned here today.

Besides the three factions mentioned as possible elements in an organization to combat Gen. Wu Pei Fu, who drove Chang from Peking and set up the revived republican parliament there, it is said that a number of subordinate officials of Kiangsu province will take part in the Shanghai conference.

Delayed by Typhoon.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—The liner Empress of Russia, aboard which Sun Yat Sen, deposed president of South China, is a passenger, bound for this port, is struggling against a typhoon and is making slow progress, according to wireless advices received here today from the vessel. The Empress of Russia was due here this morning.

Soviet Opens Peking Parley.

PEKING, Aug. 12.—[By the Associated Press.]—M. Joffe, envoy of the soviet government of Moscow, arrived here today to open trade and other negotiations with the Chinese government.

The soviet representative is understood to have three purposes in his mission here. First, to endeavor to obtain recognition of Russian interest in the Chinese Eastern railway, which now is controlled by an interallied technical board; second, to arrange trade relations with China, chiefly for the reopening of tea exportation to Russia; third, to consider China's demand for the withdrawal of the 2,000 soviet troops from Mongolia.

China already has complained that Urga, capital of Mongolia, nominally under the rule of a religious autocrat, the "living Buddha," really is dominated by soviet officials.

MARBLESTONE HARD TO HER; IRON HAND IS ANNIVERSARY GIFT

A slap in the face was her husband's gift to her on their sixth wedding anniversary, testified Mrs. Ann Marblestone, of the Parkway hotel, before Judge Harry B. Miller yesterday, in the Superior court, who granted her a divorce, with $2,000 alimony, from her husband, Benjamin Marblestone, wealthy Florida land owner.

MRS. ANN MARBLESTONE.

Moreover, Mrs. Marblestone declared, she had followed him to the home of another woman, with whom he was too friendly. On another occasion, she said, he hurled a shaving brush at her. She was represented by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein.

He Was Broke, So Bandits Gave Him Price of Meal

Yakima, Wash., Aug. 12.—Charles Smith reported to the police today that two armed men, holding him up on a street and finding his pockets empty, handed him 35 cents. "Take it," he quoted one of the bandits as saying, "buy yourself a cup of coffee and a stack of hot cakes. You're evidently worse off than we are."

WIFE ALLEGES 'LOVE NEST'; SUES DEPUTY CLERK

A "love nest" at 2821 North Halsted street, and a sweetheart camouflaged under the title of wife, are charges made against her husband, Thomas Morris, in a suit for separate maintenance filed yesterday in Circuit court by Mrs. Bertha Morris, 2464 Orchard street.

Mrs. Morris alleges that her husband, a deputy in the municipal court clerk's office, from whom she has been separated since October, 1921, lavished large sums of money upon Miss Soni Mitch. Morris filed suit for divorce against his wife in June, but the suit was dismissed.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—Henry Ford's offer for the Muscle Shoals projects was declared "unconscionable" by Senator Harreld [Okla.], a Republican member of the senate agriculture committee, in a letter today to Gray Silver of the American Farm Bureau federation.

Senator Harreld said that "in a nutshell" the proposal amounted to turning over to the Detroit manufacturer Muscle Shoals "plus property worth many millions of dollars without any cost whatever to Mr. Ford."

CHICAGO Faces Coal Famine!

Regardless of Strike Settlement

Take this for granted right now: fast approaching cold weather means thousands of empty coal bins. The clamor for coal is loud. It will be louder. Perhaps threats of coal shortage, famine, rationing do not strike home to you today. But winter is fast coming. Unpreparedness now will cause bitter regret then. Do not let today's comfort blind you. Act—and act while there is time. Tradition dies hard. It takes a national calamity like the present coal situation to open the nation's eyes to a better way of home heating. The dependence upon coal for winter comfort exists no more.

Oil Has Permanently Replaced Coal

for home heating. Its unquestioned acceptance in modern homes everywhere will be multiplied many fold when winter comes by the use of Kleen-Heet. It is the only completely automatic oil-burning system enjoying the full endorsement of the National Board of Underwriters. Kleen-Heet in your home ends shoveling coal, emptying ashes—freedom from dirt, soot and annoyance.

Do not confuse Kleen-Heet with any other system you ever saw or heard of. It is different—it is better. It is backed financially by Chicago business men of unusual resources, to insure its increasing success. Oil is plentiful. Its supply is steady. You never heard of an oil strike. You cannot afford to jeopardize the health of your family through the uncertainties of your coal supply.

Prepare! Not Next Month or Next Week, But N-O-W!

When you ask us to demonstrate Kleen-Heet to you, we do not make claims. We offer facts. Kleen-Heet's record of performance will stand the searching scrutiny we urge you to make. Kleen-Heet is here—and here to stay. Your neighbor is probably preparing against the certain coal famine. Your neighbor's neighbor is making ready. Cold reason urges you to do the same. Weeks have passed with but little coal mined. Dealers' bins are bare. If the coal strike is settled immediately, it will take months to catch up—months marked by winter's icy hand, with its suffering, disease and even death.

If you cannot call at our down-town demonstration rooms, mail the coupon. Mail it today. It is the first step toward preparedness. If you wait we may not be able to serve you. Our production facilities are being worked at top speed. Avoid disappointment by acting now.

3 CHICAGOANS DIE AS FAST TRAIN IN INDIANA HITS CAR

Mother and Daughter Are Among Victims.

Three Chicagoans were killed yesterday afternoon when a fast Michigan Central train plowed into their automobile at Kettle Crossing, two miles east of Porter, Ind.

The dead are:

MRS. LOUIS COHEN, 1321 Lawndale avenue.

PETER PINHOFF, 1508 Ameline avenue; brother-in-law of the dead woman.

FLORENCE COHEN, 10 years old, daughter of Mrs. Cohen.

Probably fatally injured:

JEROME COHEN, 6 years old, son of Mrs. Cohen.

Three Others Hurt.

Mr. Cohen and Saul Silverstein, 4502 Sheridan road, were seriously injured. Oscar Pirrson, also of Chicago, sustained bruises.

Silverstein was driving the car. While it was crossing the track, apparently in a bad location, the speeding train struck the car and threw it fifty feet.

Five other auto deaths were recorded here yesterday. Mrs. Pauline Mikuen, 74 years old, 6115 Evans avenue, died of injuries received when her husband's car hit a street car. Charles Ennis, 4038 Monticello avenue, killed by an auto Friday night, died yesterday, as did Margaret Walker, 119 Ogden avenue.

John Orzech, 8 years old, 2633 Cullerton avenue, was fatally injured late yesterday when he was struck while crossing the street in front of his home. Stanley Dutbodich, 1402 Alpine street, driver, is being held pending the inquest tomorrow.

Grand Trunk Train Kills Man.

A man believed to be Ed Carlson, Worth, Ill., was killed last night when a truck he was driving was struck by a Grand Trunk train and carried four blocks. The crash occurred at 115th street, Mt. Greenwood. The man died in a hospital at Blue Island. He had no papers of identification but the truck's number is in the name of Carlson.

HALF A CENTURY

MR. AND MRS. THOS. WARNE.
[Ganiere Photos.]

A ceremony originally performed fifty years was repeated last night when Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Warne, 1823 North Tripp avenue, celebrated their golden wedding aniversary at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. Miller. The Rev. J. A. Molstad of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran church performed the ceremony, which was observed by eleven children, seventeen grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

MASSEY & CO., BROKERS, CRASH; OWE $1,500,000

Failure Result of That of Nast & Co.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The brokerage firm of Harry A. Massey & Co., 209 La Salle street, was thrown into receivership yesterday following an involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed in United States District court. The petition was brought by three creditors, including an employe of the firm, with claims aggregating $583. The Chicago Title and Trust company was appointed receiver and immediately took charge of the firm's offices in the Rookery building.

Liabilities of the firm are estimated at upwards of $1,500,000, including the secured claims of banking creditors. While the assets have not been determined, it was the opinion of the receiver that they will come close to covering the liabilities.

Due to Nast & Co. Failure.

Failure of Massey & Co. was the result of failure of Nast & Co., another Chicago brokerage house, about a month ago. Massey & Co. acted as traders for Nast & Co. on the Chicago Stock exchange. When Nast & Co failed they were indebted to Massey & Co. to the extent of about $350,000. The receivership of Nast & Co. resulted in depleting the working capital of Massey & Co. to an extent that the firm technically was insolvent.

Harry A. and Frederick Massey, the members of the firm, laid their situation before the Chicago Stock exchange governors. An audit of their accounts is said to have disclosed that the firm's liabilities exceeded its assets by about $60,000 after excluding the claim against Nast & Co. Officials of the Chicago Title and Trust company, which is receiver for both Massey & Co. and Nast & Co., yesterday expressed the opinion that Nast & Co. will be able to pay its creditors about 50 cents on the dollar when its affairs are liquidated. In this event customers and creditors of Massey & Co. probably will be paid close to dollar for dollar. Massey & Co. was the only Chicago brokerage house that had a claim against Nast & Co.

Suspended for Five Days.

Massey & Co. were suspended as members of the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday for five days by action of the governors. It is understood the firm had about 2,000 customers and their dealings were entirely in stocks. Notices of the receivership were posted yesterday morning on the doors of the firm's offices and drew a small group of customers, but there was no disturbance.

The petition in bankruptcy was based on the allegation that last Tuesday the firm paid the Western Union Telegraph company a bill of $174.50 and the Illinois Bell Telephone company a bill of $274.05, and that the company was insolvent at the time these bills were paid. The firm originally operated under the name of Massey, Perrin & Co., but last year was reorganized as Harry A. Massey & Co.

TWO QUIZZED AS ROBBER SUSPECTS.

Two men who gave their names as George Burns and Fred Conway, answering to the description of the pair that broke into the offices of the Chicago Packing company, 913 Fulton street, Friday night, and were frightened away by the watchman, were captured by Des Plaines street police and questioned.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In Saturday's TRIBUNE it was stated that a man who gave his name as Charles Jones, living at the Illinois Athletic club, was arrested in a raid by the police on a north side flat. Officials of the I. A. C. assert that no one by that name lives at the club.

ACTORS, WRITERS LAUNCH WAR ON "CENSOR MANIA"

New York, Aug. 12.—Formation of a joint committee for the promotion and protection of art and literature, composed of members representing theatrical and literary societies, was announced today by George Creel, chairman.

"The purpose is to unite and direct every possible force in the fight against censorship," said Mr. Creel. "The spirit of narrow minded intolerance, proceeding from the motion picture, has commenced to threaten the drama and literature and unless resisted, it is only a question of time when every product of the creative instinct will be called upon to run a gauntlet of beadles."

The organizations represented are the Actors' Equity association, American Federation of Musicians, Authors' League of America, Cinema Camera club, Guild of Free Lance Artists, Motion Picture Directors' association, Printing Trades unions, Screen Writers' guild, and American Dramatists.

GIRL SCRATCHES HER ASSAILANT; PEDDLER NABBED

Scratches left on the face of Lawrence Connell, a Greek peddler, by Margaret Schiller, 13 years old, 1910 Cleveland avenue, yesterday led to his arrest on a serious charge. Several days ago, according to the girl, Connell came to the rear door of her home and asked her if her mother didn't want to buy some lemons.

When she said her mother wasn't at home he forced his way into the home and attempted to attack her, but fled when she screamed and scratched his face. Yesterday detectives from the Hudson avenue station arrested him when they found him selling lemons and saw the scratches on his face.

Goes Squirrel Hunting in Winnetka; Pays $10 Fine

Two squirrels shot in Winnetka cost William Cook of Chicago $10 when brought before Justice Nelson yesterday. Cook handed over the money and was allowed to keep the game.

FLAPPER'S CARD NEARLY PARTS EVANSTON PAIR

A bit of pasteboard nearly wrecked a new Evanston family and forced Judge Henry G. Williams to Solomon's role yesterday.

Some joking friend thought it would add to a newlywed's home comfort to slip the card of an Edgewater Beach flapper into the young man's coat pocket. And of course Fate sent the young bride straight to the pocket. She mooned over her secret for weeks and weeks. Then she called the girl and asked for information.

Flapperishly, the girl was vague enough about her numerous male acquaintances to plant the seed of suspicion still further. She accused her husband and a battle grew which sent them to Judge Williams for advice.

"Why not ask your joker friend to 'tess up?'" suggested the judge to the sorrowful pair.

"Why, we hadn't thought of that!" answered hubby. And they left arm in arm, friend husband's right hand doubled up. The judge is keeping their names secret.

RUSSIANS TURN ON BRITISH FOR ACTS AT HAGUE

Seize 3 Ships; May Take All Oil Fields.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 12.—In retaliation for British solidarity with other nations at The Hague conference against the bolseviki, the latter have seized three British steamers and arrested three Britishers at Batoum, according to advices received by radio from the former British consul at Baku. It is understood, furthermore, that Moscow is repudiating the agreement with the Shell Oil interests and now intends to nationalize all oil properties at Baku, regardless of previous ownership.

The Britishers being held by the bolsheviki are Mr. Sully, manager of the Shell transport; Mr. Moe, his attorney, and Mr. J. B. Dodge, suspected of being an agent of the Anglo-Persian Oil company. The steamers seized are the George, the Cedric, an oil tanker, and the Lady Helena.

The Whitehall company, a British commercial concern, was closed by the bolsheviki on Friday. During the night the seals on the doors were broken and shops raided. Money was not touched, but every document in the place, even to torn paper in the wastebasket, was taken.

Nephew of Winston Churchill.

Mr. Dodge, who is the son of an American mother, and a nephew of Winston Churchill, recently arrived in Batoum from Persia. When arrested, the cheka accused him of being an agent for the Anglo-Persian-Standard combine, charging that he had attempted to purchase large holdings in the Baku fields. He maintained he was merely a merchant, but papers in his possesion indicated that he is interested in the purchase of Baku properties. The Englishmen, though not jailed, are guarded constantly. Serious complications are possible.

Since the collapse of The Hague conference, British officers here have been anticipating a new policy regarding the operations of British concerns in Russia. The repudiation of the oil contracts and the closing of the Whithall store are regarded as forerunners of the new policy.

Severe Blow to Oil Men.

The action of the soviet is a severe blow to the Anglo-Persian-Standard combine, which had already begun arrangements to secure pipe line rights from Baku to Batoum to move north Persian oils. Acquisition by the Standard Oil company of the Nobel interests was the first step in this direction. The bolsheviki charge that Mr. Dodge attempted to close deals with other interests in Baku which had pipeline concessions.

An American observer returning from Batoum yesterday reports that the Georgians are being told to prepare for military movements. In speeches last week, the soviet leaders informed Communists that the situation was delicate and that they might be called upon at any moment to help their Moscow brothers in a war against the capitalist states.

The Value of Charcoal

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in

STUART'S Charcoal Lozenges

They are compsised of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. Charcoal is also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

GERMANY SHOOS GRAFTERS AWAY FROM TOURISTS

BY OTIS SWIFT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—The finding of widespread extortion from Americans in Germany has resulted in a serious lessening of lucrative tourist traffic in Germany, and reforms are being rushed to make trips here more pleasant and easier for visitors.

Following THE TRIBUNE'S exposure of the manner whereby German consular offices abroad charged Americans $10 apiece for a transit visé, useless after one trip to German territory, Germany is about to put into effect new regulations whereby one can get a visé good for any number of trips to Germany during a three months' period.

At present the German consulates are forced to give a visé good for one year, if an American demands it, but when no specific demand is made the Germans merely give a transit visé, and a Yankee wishing to return to Germany has to pay an additional $10.

Business tourists who have had occasion to pass in and out of Germany this summer found themselves paying the $10 charge three or four times as a result of this graft.

It was also announced today that the authorities in Berlin had abandoned the plan to charge a 200 per cent tax on all hotel rooms hired by foreigners. All tourists are paying a 15 to 40 per cent room tax daily, proportionate to the cost of the room occupied. Leading hotels have announced that they will shut, if the 200 per cent tax is imposed.

Americans making purchases in the shops here are still at once asked, "Are you auslander?" and an affirmative answer means a 50 per cent price increase. Shopping and private transactions, however, cannot be regulated legally.

Chile Foreign Minister Censured; Pact Will Pass

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 12.—[United Press.]—After many days' debate the senate today passed a motion censuring Foreign Minister Barros Jarpa by a vote of 20 to 7. It is not believed the vote will affect the Washington protocol, but is to have been due to personal objections. The protocol is expected to pass. The President, who has been awaiting the result of today's vote, is expected to organize a new cabinet immediately.

Think of a yacht with the power and stuff of a tug—

Think of beauty—striking, enchanting—combined with power, stamina, ruggedness—think of this and you have a picture of the Paige Six-66. Its tug-like might is never so much in evidence as when pulling up long, steep hills in high gear.

And the great 6-cylinder, 70 H. P. motor has ample reserve power for even sharper demands. With a standing start, in high gear, from the bottom of Hubbard Hill, the Paige will go over the top at 35 miles an hour. So free from vibration, so silent the action that you marvel at the unbroken smoothness of its power. Marvel until you realize that every minute three gallons of oil are forced through the main and connecting rod bearings, banishing friction.

Amazingly easy is the handling of the Paige, with its ball-bearing steering spindles, giving touch guidance; new type spring clutch, assuring quick, effortless gear-shifting; speed range—2 to 70 miles an hour in high gear. While the long wheelbase and springs, snubbers, Paige-Timken axles, front and rear, finely poised weight, low-hung body, absence of sidesway, give shockless riding—delightful comfort.

The sturdily built chassis—embodying Paige engineering ideals and devotion to finest detail—is an important factor in the long life of the Paige. And joined with this dependable strength are a dignity and beauty in body lines that quicken the pride of ownership. Every interior appointment of this roomy, seven-passenger Paige is a model of good taste.

The Paige Six-66 has such an all-round appeal that in less than two years it has become the second largest selling car between $2,000 and $11,000. Think of your ideal car—a yacht in beauty, a tug in power and stamina—then let us show you how near the Paige comes to your ideal.

CHICAGO BRANCH: MARKET AND WASHINGTON STS.

It's Hard to Tell But Easy to Smell

WE could keep on telling you till the cows came home, that loose hops lose their flavor and that pressed hops are the only kind that are worth taking home.

But you won't understand it, because nobody can understand it until you actually smell the difference.

So go to any store that sells malt extract and hops, ask for a package of Puritan Fresh Pressed Hops, then ask for any of the packages of loose hops and smell the difference for yourself.

You'll find that the loose hops smell like old hay. You'll find that the Puritan Fresh Pressed Hops are so pungent and sharp that it almost hurts your nose.

Also we may tell you that only the latest crop of Oregon Hops goes into Puritan Packages. And that no other pressed hop on the market is made exclusively from the Oregon crop.

And if you want to know the difference between Oregon Hops and the Hops grown in any other state we might tell you that the biggest difference is 100 per cent in price.

So if you are using hops and want to get hops with the real hop flavor and want also to get the best hops in the market for Goodness sake ask for and demand Puritan and don't take anything else.

ENATE TO VOTE N TARIFF BILL NEXT SATURDAY

ght Sessions to Speed Up Amendments.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—A unanimous consent agreement for the passage of the tariff bill by Saturday was entered into by the senate today. The agreement provides that the senate in committee of the whole shall proceed to vote without further debate on remaining finance committee amendments not later than 5 o'clock next Tuesday, and on reported amendments offered by individual senators not later than 10 o'clock Thursday night.

After the bill is reported to the senate and unreserved amendments acted on in committee of the whole are disposed of, no senator shall speak more than once nor longer than ten minutes upon any reserved amendment nor upon any amendment that may be offered in the senate. The senate will proceed to vote upon the bill without further debate not later than 4 o'clock on Saturday.

It is expected that night sessions will be held throughout the week in order to give sufficient time for consideration of the various remaining amendments.

Harreld May Speak One Hour.

Senator Harreld (Okla.), obtained unanimous consent to speak for one hour on Wednesday in advocacy of a duty of 25 cents a barrel on crude petroleum and 25 cents a barrel on fuel oil which he will offer. The senate will convene at 10 o'clock on that day instead of 11. The pending bill leaves petroleum on the free list, which the house and the senate finance committee having rejected amendments imposing duties.

The senate today disposed of nearly all finance committee amendments to the sundries schedule. This leaves a few remaining amendments to the sundries schedule and committee amendments to the free list and to administrative provisions. These must be disposed of not later than Tuesday under the agreement. Most of the important controversies are out of the way and little difficulty is anticipated in conforming to the terms of the agreement.

Approve High Duty on Toys.

Among amendments to the sundry schedule which caused discussion was the increase of the duty on toys from 40 per cent, as in the house bill, to 70 per cent. Senator Underwood [Ala.], Democratic leader, opposed this increase, declaring that the American toy manufacturers are "gorged with profits and desire to perpetuate a monopoly." Republicans defending the high duty declared that the American manufacturers had been seriously affected by German competition. The senate approved the duty by a vote of 33 to 18.

Other amendments approved were those relating to asbestos, sporting goods, spangles and beads, ramie hat braids, footwear with woolen uppers, braids and plaits of straw, palm leaf, willow and rattan, brooms, bristles, buttons, cork, dice, poker chips, emery, matches, explosives, feathers, furs, fans, hair cloth, hats, jewelry, catgut, gas mantles, and manufactures of bone, horn, and India rubber.

ROCK OF AGES

In the block at Freeport marked by the boulder above Abraham Lincoln and his famous opponent, Stephen A. Douglas, held their second joint debate on Aug. 27, 1858. Thousands will gather in Freeport to celebrate the sixty-fourth anniversary of that famous day. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi will speak. The stone was dedicated in 1903 by Theodore Roosevelt.

'FIGHTING BOB'S' FOES STRIVE TO DEFEAT BLAINE

See Governor Easier than Senator.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—The contest over the Republican nomination for governor and other state offices is no less bitter in Wisconsin than the struggle precipitated by the effort to defeat Senator La Follette for renomination.

Gov. Blaine, seeking renomination, heads the La Follette slate of candidates for state administrative office. The Citizens' Republican state conference named an opposition slate headed by Attorney General Morgan as the candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, attacked the Blaine regime, with its Nonpartisan league and radical labor support, as dangerous to the welfare of the state and appealed to Republicans to clean out the entire La Follette outfit.

Have Hopes of Beating Blaine.

The leaders of the Citizens' Republican conference are more confident of beating Blaine than of retiring La Follette. Their confidence has increased with recent developments, among them being the entry of A. C. McHenry into the ring for the governorship. McHenry is a wet and is expected to draw wet votes from Blaine. Two years ago McHenry polled so many votes for the nomination for senator that La Follette's candidate, Thompson, was defeated.

The Blaine slate is classed as wet by the Anti-Saloon league, which is supporting the Morgan slate. The league has just issued a bulletin which says of the candidates for governor:

"W. J. Morgan—Very dry. Platform against beer and wine.

"John J. Blaine—Wet leaders have publicly praised his stand on liquor. Vetoed Matheson dry bill; criticised this bill for prohibiting liquor prescriptions to minors. Constantly attacks dry organizations in speeches.

"A. C. McHenry—Wet."

Governor's Tax Stand an Issue.

Looming large in the contest also is the tax issue, which is the chief burden of Gov. Blaine's speeches. The governor asserts that he is the author of a campaign to exact evaded income taxes from corporations and rich individuals which has netted the state more than $500,000 up to date, and advocates publicity of income tax returns to prevent concealment of taxable income.

The governor reads to his audiences a list of large Wisconsin corporations and the amounts of additional taxes which he says he has compelled them to pay after their books had been audited by the state. He also reads the amounts he says these corporations have contributed to the American Constitutional league, organized to fight the radical regime in the state government.

Gov. Blaine tells his audiences that he was astonished to learn of the wholesale evasion of taxes by the big corporations.

The Citizens' Republican state conference through its secretary, State Senator Elkorno, has answered the governor's claims in a detailed statement which asserts:

"1. That all credit for the recovery of about $600,000 in corporation income taxes belongs to the tax commission, only one member of which was recently named by Gov. Blaine, long after investigations had been started and many completed.

Takes Credit from Executive.

"2. That the work was well under way and that $100,000 had been recovered or was being recovered before Gov. Blaine had ever taken office and that the work would have been continued under any governor elected.

"3. That there is nothing to show that Gov. Blaine was even aware of the work which was going on until late in 1921, when his consent as governor and member of the emergency board was asked to a move to transfer $40,000 from the soldiers' educational bonus to the tax commission's appropriation to make possible the employment of more field agents.

"4. That, although the law provides for a heavy cash penalty and for criminal prosecution in cases where fraud can be shown, there have been fewer than a dozen penalties collected, the sum total of which has been practically negligible, and that there has not been a single case of prosecution under the criminal statute.

"5. That if Gov. Blaine has the evidence to substantiate his statements that these sums have been fraudulently withheld he has, in failing to institute proceedings, been guilty of a neglect of duty which should indict him summarily before the voters of the state at the primaries."

RIVERSIDE

With its winding streets—wide, deep lots—50x275—is the ideal spot for a childhood home

Quick Transportation to Loop by Steam—Surface Lines—Elevated—Boulevards

The History of Riverside

A number of years ago Mr. Frederick Olmsted, celebrated as the designer of the World's Fair Grounds in Chicago, conceived the idea of laying out the most beautiful suburb to be found anywhere—and he choose the winding Des Plaines River—the site of Riverside—as the ideal location for it. This beautiful area with its winding river, wooded banks and high elevation has developed into a community of distinction—both physically and socially—and it is good fortune, indeed, that permits us to offer a few remaining homesites to American residents of Chicago.

Environment

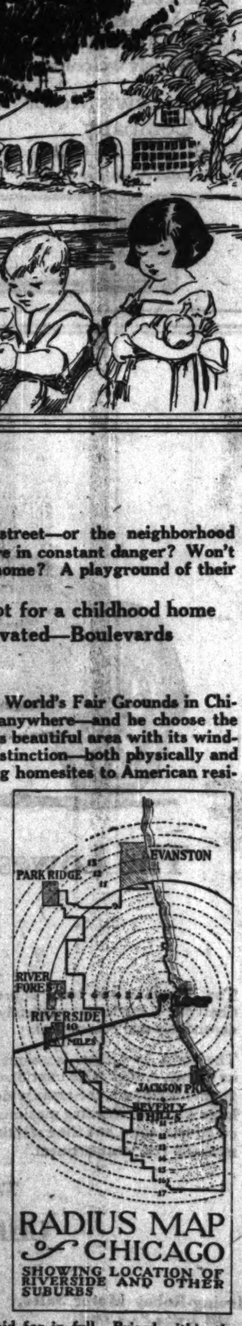
Riverside Beautiful offers every advantage that could be asked for in a homesite. There are schools, churches, markets, amusements and diversion—the Forest Preserve and Zoological Gardens are just a few minutes distant—a country club, pure water, excellent transportation and village municipal government—all of these things contribute to its charm. On the other hand—there are no factories, no smoke, no dirt. A delightful spot for the man who wants the best for his family.

Transportation

A glance at the map at the right will indicate that Riverside is really right in the heart of growing Chicago. Sixty-six trains a day provide twenty-four minute transportation to the loop—at a nine cent fare, and a comfortable seat assured. Elevated and surface lines reach Riverside—and are handy for those whose business confines them to the south and west sides. A fine boulevard via Washington Blvd. and Des Plaines Ave. to the heart of Riverside. The new Ogden Ave. improvement project runs directly into the village.

Restrictions

Building restrictions are controlled by the village board—and are administered so satisfactorily that Riverside has come to be known as the show place of the Chicago district—the most beautiful of Chicago's many charming residential communities.



RADIUS MAP of CHICAGO
SHOWING LOCATION OF RIVERSIDE AND OTHER SUBURBS

In Conclusion

Consider the many advantages of Riverside—the charming environment that it offers for your family, the quick and modern transportation facilities, the well regulated building restrictions—and, in addition, consider the fact that these lots are fully improved with water, sewer, gas, electricity, sidewalks, paved streets—and all improvements are paid for in full. Priced within the buying power of the most modest homeseeker, these fine lots surely offer an opportunity for homeseeker and investor alike that is truly remarkable.

JAILER ENTICES "SNOW BIRDS" TO ROOST WITH CURE

Flutter Awhile but His Strange Remedy Helps.

Drug addicts in the county jail call Assistant Warden Hans Thomson "Doc," for Thomson's "dope remedy" has gained a jailwide fame.

Though heroic in his measures, his system works, according to his patients. After the administration of the "remedy," a dark brown liquid liberally loaded with ginger, the "snow bird" takes to his bed and is agonizingly sick for several days. He lies sleepless, tossing on his cot, calling for his favorite drug, cocaine, morphine, or heroin. Then at the end of the third or fourth day comes sleep, sometimes a day or two of it, and when the patient wakes he is on the road to recovery. He begins to eat and sleep more normally and to put on flesh at an astonishing rate.

During the treatment he is kept alone in an isolation cell and no other prison, under penalty of the "solitary," is allowed to see him. At the end of two weeks he is a new man, not cured, for that depends on him, but given a new chance.

At present "Doc" Thomson has only two patients. One, after the first struggle, was sleeping so soundly yesterday that even a shake of his shoulder could not rouse him. The other, an addict for eleven years, whose body was covered with more than five hundred scars of the needle, was almost back to normal. "I still feel a craving, but it's not as strong as it used to be," he said, "and I'm not going to give in to it. I'm through. I've got my chance, and I can never repay Warden Thomson for what he's done for me."

WOMAN'S STORY HOLDS TWO FOR DOHERTY SLAYING

David Thompson and Louis Roberts, colored, 2724 South Wabash avenue, were ordered held to the grand jury for the murder of Policeman Patrick Doherty Thursday night, following the testimony of Mrs. Anna Price, colored, 45 East 28th street, at the inquest yesterday.

Mrs. Price, after scrutinizing the prisoners, declared that one of them looked like the man in whose hand was the revolver that fired the fatal shot. Neither Thompson nor Roberts testified. The coroner's jury, meeting at 4635 Wallace street, was out but a few moments.

Policeman Doherty, attached to the Cottage Grove station, was shot and killed in South State street. The assailants escaped, but the two colored men accused of the crime were later arrested by Policeman James Steele.

"The first automobile dealer on Broadway"

There is but one important decision to make in buying an automobile

SHALL IT HAVE a KNIGHT TYPE engine or a POPPET VALVE engine

There is no other choice in gas engines. You must have one engine or the other and the engine is by far the greatest factor of the automobile. All other points are secondary, and should be decided after this choice is made.

The poppet valve engine of today is still, in principle, simply the old stationary gas engine, adapted and modified in many ways for adaption to automobile use by

VALVES IN "L" HEADS VALVES IN "T" HEADS OVERHEAD VALVES OPPOSED VALVES DUAL VALVES

The many varying modifications of the same principle only prove that engineers have been constantly groping to better a condition of fundamental design which should not exist at all.

The Double Sleeve R&V Knight Engine has no such problem as it has no valves. It is the one type engine designed because of the automobile, for the automobile and used by the automobile.

The R&V Knight type and the Poppet Valve type are based on different fundamental principles. No changes or modifications in either can change the points of difference between the two which make them so radically different in performance and in length of life.

While the Poppet Valve engineers have made many, many changes in trying to get away from the poppet valve defects inherent in this type, regardless of all their changes, they all have a poppet valve engine still.

In our R&V Knight engine never from the first has any change been made in its fundamental features which control its functions; for unlike the poppet valve type, none is needed. It was right at first—it is right today.

Naturally the R&V Knight of today is a smoother engine, because of greater skill in manufacturing and refinements of design, developed by our ten years' experience in making Knight engines.

Satisfaction from your automobile, the cost of its operation, the life of its usefulness very largely depend upon the decision you make between the

R&V KNIGHT TYPE
POPPET VALVE TYPE

We will gladly send you our free booklet "Why we believe in the Knight Engine." It will give you a clear understanding of the difference between these two types, and the importance to you of making this decision.

PREPARE BILLS TO KNOCK OUT DIRECT PRIMARY

Legislators Plan Return to Convention System.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The Illinois direct primary law is to be attacked next winter in Springfield from two sources. Representative William M. Scanlan of La Salle county, a veteran Republican of the house, has announced he proposes to reintroduce the bill of the last session that substituted the convention system for the present direct primary.

Representative Frank Ryan Jr., of the Second district in Chicago served notice yesterday that he is for a repeal of the primary system and intends to put it up to the legislature to agree upon a substitute to go into effect prior to the 1924 elections, at which a United States senator, governor and state officers will be nominated.

Favors Convention System.

The Scanlan bill, as outlined by the La Salle county representative, restores the convention system as it existed during the early days of the Deneen administration. Mr. Scanlan says it will conform with the various opinions of the Illinois Supreme court. In substance, delegates will be elected to a county convention, under proper registration regulations and restrictions that will cause all parties to hold primaries on the same day and obviate the old "soap box" method of choosing county convention delegates.

Mr. Ryan's Democratic proposal goes a bit further. His statement is that his constituents are against the direct primary system and that his intention is to put through a law that will abolish the present direct vote principle.

Says Legislature Is for Change.

"There is no question as to the wish of the legislature," he said. "It is 85 per cent against the direct primary law, and all that is necessary to change the system in Illinois is nerve.

Representative Ryan suggested that the legislature, once convinced that there is a demand for a change, would put through the required amendment, getting back to the convention system prior to the spring elections that come along in April following the opening of the legislative session in January.

"This of course would require a two-thirds vote to enact an emergency law," he said. "If there is to be a change made by the incoming legislature it can be ordered early as well as safe. Over my way my folks want it changed as rapidly as possible."

Plan of Scanlan Bill.

The Scanlan proposal was offered by him in the last house, but was buried in committee. He said yesterday that it follows the general form of a bill drawn by Charles E. Woodward, now president of the constitutional convention, and the author, in its essentials, of the present administrative code, that was adopted under the Lowden administration.

"The bill that I shall introduce," Representative Scanlan said, "is in substance house bill 27 of the 1921 session. If the new constitution is adopted on Dec. 12, with a few minor changes, easily made, it can fit in perfectly with the requirements of the constitution, and if the legislature is on the square for the elimination of the direct primary system there is no reason why the bill may not go to speedy passage."

MRS. ALICE DUDGEON.

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Mrs. Meda Hodell, 26, confessed slayer of her father-in-law and husband, says the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," was unknown in her home.

A great newspaper publisher, talking the other day to one of the oldest living editors and advising him to take a vacation, said: "While you are away, build something, if it's only a chicken coop or a cow barn. Home buyers and builders should look first to heating

A HOUSE can only be a "home" when properly and economically heated.

In buying or building this item is positively the most important of all.

Houses equipped with Weil-McLain Boilers are "homes" beyond all question of a doubt, for in these boilers efficiency and economy are combined.

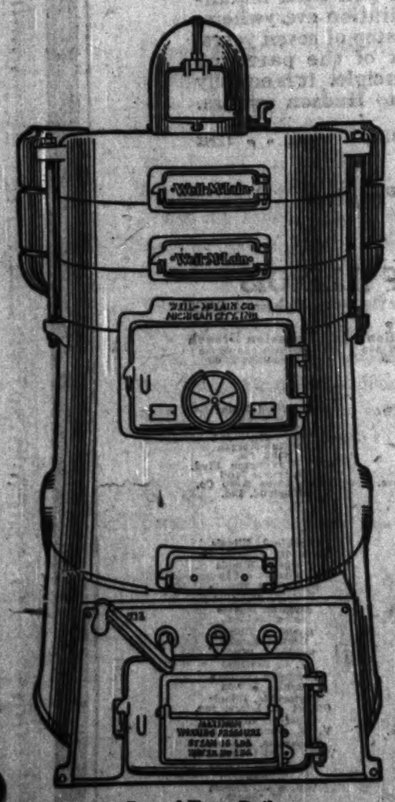
Many years of study have resulted in perfecting the two major functions of a boiler. These are: complete burning of fuel; full utilization of heat units. In Weil-McLain Boilers every pound of fuel is completely burned—made to yield a maximum number of heat units. Waste is practically eliminated.

Due to the perfection of three remarkable features full utilization of heat units is accomplished. These include: the Weil-McLain fuel-saving corrugated "double surface" crown sheet which gives double heating surface directly above the fire. The simple candle test shows that this is the most valuable surface in any boiler.

All other heating surfaces are also corrugated. This further promotes economy of fuel and heating efficiency.

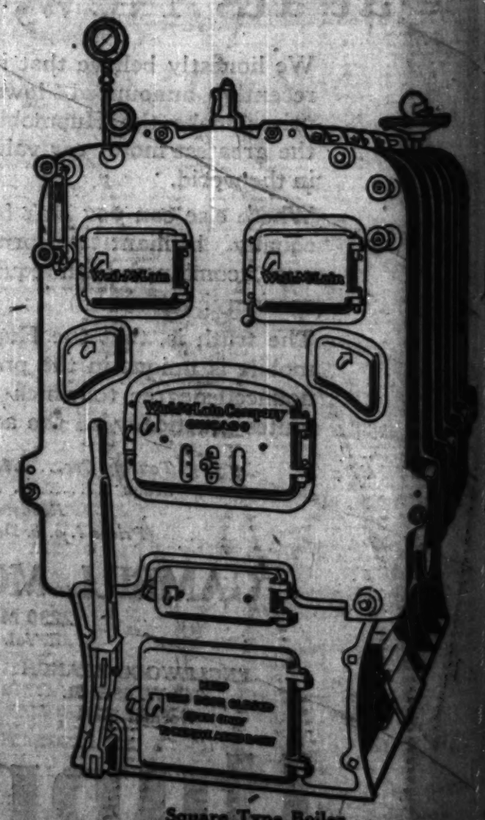
A long "back and forth" fire travel holds the hot gases in continuous contact with all the fuel-saving surfaces. This final safeguard prevents waste of valuable heat units.

Other notable features which add to the efficiency of Weil-McLain Boilers are: large fire door; handy front clean-out doors for each section; smooth, non-clogging surface of lower one-third of fire pot; triangular grates which shake out all ordinary clinkers. For full value in dollars, service and economy your logical choice should be a Weil-McLain Boiler. Write us for further details and we will also send you, if desired, the name of a competent heating contractor who will serve you.



Round Type Boiler

With fuel-saving corrugated, "double surface" crown sheet and all other heating surfaces corrugated; also long "back and forth" fire travel. Made for steam, vapor, vacuum and hot-water heating; suitable for bungalows, residences and 2-flat and 3-flat apartment buildings.



Square Type Boiler

Like the round type, has maximum heating surface directly above the fire and long "back and forth" fire travel. Made for steam, vapor, vacuum and hot-water heating; suitable for apartments, factories, schools, theaters and public buildings.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Eighteen hits for a total of twenty-six bases brought nothing but defeat to Gleason's White Sox yesterday, the pennant seeking Browns winning the first of a bobtailed series, 7 to 6. Despite defeat, the south siders did nobly by rearin' up in the ninth, chasing the peerless Urban Shocker from the hill, scoring four runs, being snuffed out only after the tying and winning runs had progressed to the two farther corners.

URBAN SHOCKER. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

The things that did the damage was an ascension indulged in by Harry Courtney in the fourth. He went democratic after three good innings and before Shovel Hodge could mop up, four Brownies had nicked the pan. Then Hodge, with the aid of a boot by Collins, got his in the sixth, the league leaders scoring three. After that Blankenship snubbed them most beautifully.

Shocker Hit by Terrific Drive.

Shocker set himself for a bad afternoon by getting in the path of a terrific drive by Collins that led to a run in the opening inning. The ball cracked him on the left arm and caromed into right field. He had troubles galore after that, but with his mates playing beautiful ball he got by unscathed until the eighth, when the Sox scored their second run. Then he got it properly in the ninth, Fohl rushing forth two more pitchers to get the side out and quiet some 23,000 fans who had been hanging around all afternoon waiting for something to howl about.

Courtney started to wipe out the one run lead given him in the first on hits off Collins', Hooper's, and Sheely's bats, by passing Sisler to start the fourth. Jacobson and McManus then singled and Williams doubled, two scoring. Severeid relieved the situation by lining to Sheely for a double play, but the veteran Austin followed with a triple that scored McManus and Shocker. Courtney. Hodge's first effort resulted in a pass to Shocker, after which Gerber singled Austin home with the fourth run of the inning.

Browns Add Three in Sixth.

Austin's double brought on the deluge in the sixth. Gerber followed with a single, Tobin walked, Sisler doubled, and Jacobson was safe on Collins' error. That mass of incidents was good for three runs. The next happening was the Sox tally in the eighth on hits by Hooper, Sheely, and Falk. Then came that strenuous ninth.

McClellan, batting for Blankenship, fired the opening gun with a double after one was out. Johnson then singled, and Strunk tripled, two scoring. Strunk counted on Collin's grounder to Shocker. Hooper then doubled and counted when Sheely singled. Shocker was at this stage and Pruett came on. He fanned him for a two bagger. Pruett was yanked hurriedly, and Wright took up the job. He ended it when Mulligan grounded to McManus.

GOV. MILLER GRACES JUDGES' STAND AT SARATOGA RACES

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 12.—[Special.] — The New York turf is basking in the warm sun of official favor this summer. The mayor of the city of New York hardly had left Saratoga Springs after spending several days here, during which he was an enthusiastic spectator of the races each day, when Richard T. Wilson received a letter of acceptance from Gov. Miller to an invitation to visit here during the racing season. The invitation was a personal one, although Mr. Wilson is president of the Saratoga association.

The governor arrived this morning and viewed the races from Mr. Wilson's box. The usual invitation to notables, of course, was extended to him to see one of the feature races, the Saratoga special of the Champlain handicap, from the judges' stand. The governor accepted and watched the races from the stand.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question John H. D. Langebartel, 539 South 9th street, Quincy, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

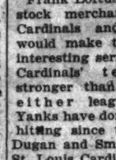
Would a Browns-Cardinal world's series interest you as much as a Browns-Giants or a Cardinals-Yankees?

Where Asked.

Jackson boulevard, at South Wells street.

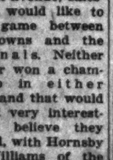
The Answers.

Frank Loftus, 3604 West Polk street, stock merchant — The Cardinals and Yanks would make the most interesting series. The Cardinals' team is stronger than any in either league. The Yanks have done better hitting since they got Dugan and Smith. The hitting of the St. Louis Cardinals and the batting of the Yanks would make a very interesting comparison.



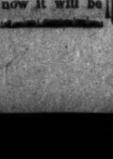
Elmer Tusick, 301 North Cicero avenue, Board of Trade clerk—Well, Pittsburgh is liable to be up there, too. I'd like to see a game between Pittsburgh and the St. Louis Browns. Pittsburgh is hitting well, they are getting good pitching now, and they are liable to beat out the Giants.

G. L. Cooley, 2344 North Whipple street, clerk—I possibly prefer a Cardinals-Yanks series, but I don't know. The Cardinals haven't won a pennant for I don't know how long, and it would stimulate interest in St. Louis in the sporting game. It is a team made up, not of high priced stars, but of all around baseball players.



Albert Rowe, 901 Galt avenue, salesman—I would like to see a game between the Browns and the Cardinals. Neither has ever won a championship in either league, and that would make it very interesting. I believe they would draw a big crowd, with Hornsby of the Cards and Williams of the Browns.

Davis Sirois, 2035 Melvina avenue, pressman—I would be very interested to see the Browns and the Giants play the world's series. If Williams continues to hit as good as he is now it will be possible for the Browns to win the series. If he hits some home runs in the series as he does in the games now it will be interesting.



TRIUMPHS OVER BRAD SMITH IN FINAL, 4 AND 2

Victor Leads, 4 Up, in Morning Round.

BY JOE DAVIS.
(Picture on Page 4.)

Russell Martin of the Jackson Park Golf club, who recently won the Cook county open title, added the city golf championship to his collection by defeating Brad Smith, a clubmate, 4 and 2, in the thirty-six hole final at Jackson park yesterday. As Martin will represent Chicago in the public parks championship of the United States Golf association at Toledo, the hope was expressed freely yesterday that he might rise to national heights.

BRAD SMITH. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

The sturdy young south sider has the making of a topnotch golfer, possessing a fine repertoire of shots and a phlegmatic disposition. This was a big asset yesterday, as a record gallery of 2,500 followed the match, and it took time to clear the fairways and the players had to wait from three to four minutes at some of the tees. When the course was cleared a park policeman stationed in the center of the course blew a whistle, just like a traffic cop in the loop, and then the men drove.

Tourney Well Handled.

The match was finely handled by the Jackson Park Golf club members, assisted by the South Park police. Officer John Brown, who has seen all of the seventeen championship finals, said it was the most orderly crowd he had seen. The Jackson park fans know the game.

Returning to the actual play, it was the case of the winner shooting steady golf against an opponent who was extremely wild at times. One cannot expect to hook persistently and win a golf game, even if good resoveries keep him in the running, and this happened to Smith.

Outplayed clearly in the morning and finishing 4 down, he made a good comeback in the afternoon and reduced Martin's lead to 1 at the ninth hole, but even this feat was not impressive, as he was not going well.

Trying to play safe at the eleventh hole, Martin was short off the tee and left himself a long shot over the water. He got a rather low ball which just cleared the drink. It was a fine opening for Smith, who had a mashie pitch to negotiate, but he dubbed into the water and Martin, making a clever approach from a bad lie, won, 4 to 6.

Smith Loses Twelfth.

They had a long wait at the twelfth tee, and once more Smith pulled badly to the seventh fairway, and, failing to get home in 2, he lost, 4 to 5, and was 4 down with 6 to play.

Martin lost the first and second holes in the afternoon through missing putts, the second being a mere pigmy.

Martin's play in the morning was sound, as his card of 70 indicates. Smith started his hooking at the fifth hole, where he went into the bushes and took a penalty. He repeated at the eleventh hole and got another penalty.

A. S. Johnson Wins.

In the second flight final A. S. Johnson of Community defeated H. D. Gruver of Jackson, 3 and 2. Johnson led all the way.

W. Fitzgerald of Jackson came from behind and won the championship flight consolation, 5 and 3, against C. C. Dunkley of Community. At lunch, eon time Fitzgerald was 2 down, but he rallied in the afternoon and gained his victory by shooting a 71.

J. Hennessey of Columbus also showed how to come back in the second flight consolation. At noon he was 2 down to D. J. Ryan of Jackson park. Hennessey made up this discrepancy after luncheon, evened the count at the home green, and won the match at the extra hole.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

ADIEU II. BEATS MISS LIBERTY IN PAGEANT RACE

(Picture on Page 3.)

Shooting ahead in the eighth and last lap, Webb Jay's Adieu II. won the free for all twenty mile runabout motorboat race at the Pageant of Progress yesterday. Miss Liberty, winner of the race Friday, led for the first seven laps yesterday, when something went amiss with it, and it relinquished the lead, to finish second. The time was 26:13 3-5.

Great Lakes, a speedy runabout entered by the Great Lakes Boat Building corporation, was third; Janet Virginia, fourth, and Mona, owned by Miss Muriel McCormick, was fifth.

Janet Virginia, owned and driven by Walter Plummer of Maywood, won the 625 class contest by six seconds from P. D. Q. VI. in a race that was close from start to finish. Summaries:

FIRST RACE. 625 CLASS. START 3:56:25.

P. D. Q. VI., Dr. A. C. Strong	20:00	2
Miss Illinois II., Robert Lee	20:33	1

Janet Virginia, W. Plummer	36:09	3
Mona, Miss Muriel McCormick	38:20	2

In the third contest, a chance race for boats of all descriptions, Walter Plummer's yacht Virginia led a fleet of twenty-two craft over the finish line. Great Lakes II. was second and Humdinger third.

The program this afternoon includes final races in the 625 and free for all runabout classes. The latter race will be a duel to the finish between Adieu II. and Miss Liberty, each having won a race. The third event will be another cruiser chance race, and at 5 o'clock sail yachts will put on a race around the course used by the motorboats. Miss Chicago probably will go after a time record if the weather is favorable.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

REVIVING RACING.

THERE is no law against horse-racing per se in Illinois. The common gaming act, by court decision, applies to open booking. On third conviction a person faces penitentiary sentence.

Now the Illinois Jockey club announces it will conduct a twelve day meeting at Hawthorne with purses and running expenses financed by the sale of memberships. There will be no open betting, we are told. We are not told there will be no betting between individuals.

Meetings along somewhat similar lines have been attempted in the past. Usually the bank roll was not thick enough to stand meager attendance when wagers were restricted, or the meeting was conducted at a loss which did not tempt the promoters to repeat. Heretofore it has been impossible financially to conduct a race meeting in Illinois without revenue derived from betting privileges.

This Hawthorne meeting, we are told, is constructive and educational, with the avowed purpose of helping to influence favorable legislation at Springfield. Many prominent citizens on the membership roll joined and paid their money in hope rather than confidence, regarding their dues as a contribution to the cause of racing.

As such we accept the Hawthorne meeting. Judge Joseph A. Murphy, racing secretary and major domo, as it were, of the enterprise, has had thirty years of turf experience. He has had experience in communities where the laws were unfavorable. We look to him to see that advertised purses are paid horsemen and that there will be no aftermath of scandal which has been attached to some previous sporadic attempts to revive the sport in this state.

The Wake thinks Illinois is entitled to a law permitting racing with supervised betting. We think there is greater public demand for racing than ever before. We hope the Hawthorne meeting may be such a success and provide such interesting sport that our state solons will make possible by legislation the comeback on a high standard of that amusement for which many of us long.

Do You Remember Way Back When:

In the palmy days of minstrelsy, how we joined in the chorus of Billy Emerson's popular song and dance, "The Big Sunflower":

There is a charm I can't explain about a girl I have seen,
And my heart beats fast as she goes past in a dark dress trimmed with green.
Her eyes are bright as evening stars, so loving and so shy,
And the folks all stop and look around whenever she goes by.
Chorus.

And I feel just as happy as a big sunflower
That nods and bends in the breeze,
And my heart is as light as the wind that blows
The leaves from off the trees.

BIG PUBLIC EVENT ON LABOR DAY IN HUMBOLDT PARK

Twelve Races on Program as Arranged.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Appreciating the great public good accomplished by staging its annual silver skates derbies and water carnival, THE TRIBUNE will take another step forward to encourage wholesome exercise for the younger generation and recreation for older people by holding a bicycle derby over the four and two-fifths miles course in Humboldt park on the morning of Labor day, Sept. 4, starting at 9 o'clock sharp.

JOHN A. PELKA.

When THE TRIBUNE water carnival was held in the Lincoln park lagoon last month, it was generally estimated at least 75,000 people saw the contests. The silver skates derby last winter on the Garfield park lagoon attracted a gathering of 35,000 skating fans and over 1,000 entrants. These events are sure to grow in favor not only in the point of interest but in the caliber of competition as nothing will be spared to bring the best talent available before the general public without charge.

Courtesy of Park Board.

Through the courtesy of the West Chicago park commissioners of which Christian F. Wiehe is president and John A. Pelka secretary, permission has been secured to hold a bicycle derby in Humboldt park. Aside from President Wiehe and Secretary Pelka, among other commissioners who are heartily in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S plan to do something worth while for Chicago's public are William Ganschow and Charles E. Graydon.

"It takes some spirited minded institution like THE TRIBUNE to take advantage of our parks and put on some sort of athletic entertainment to please the public," Secretary Pelka said in issuing the permit. "The West Chicago park commissioners are glad to lend their support to anything which will help in the better development of our boys and girls and afford pleasure for those who cannot take part."

The derby will consist of open and closed events. The open races will be featured by a twenty-two mile handicap open to all riders in good standing with the American Bicycle League of America, which has issued a sanction for the event. Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the bicycle league, has issued the sanction and will act as referee of the derby. Eddie Mahlke will be chief clerk, of course, and other men of bicycle racing experience selected to act as officials.

Event for Ranger Bike Winners.

The closed events will consist of races for boys and girls who have won Ranger bicycles in TRIBUNE subscription contests. In these contests the bicycle must be owned and ridden by the contestants. Every boy and girl who won a Ranger bike will be duly notified of the event through letter by THE TRIBUNE circulation department, of which Max Annenberg is manager.

Instead of the customary system of awarding medals, cups, and other trophies, THE TRIBUNE will give away more than $1,000 in merchandise certificates. The checks for closed events winners will be large enough to start the victors to school on the following day with new suits, shoes, neckties, and other wearing apparel.

Many Prizes Offered.

In the twenty-two mile handicap, blue ribbon event of the day, there will be twelve place prizes and eight time awards. The winner of the race will be given a $50 certificate, while the first time prize winner will be awarded a certificate of the same denomination. Second place winner will be given a $40 certificate, while the value of the remaining place prizes will be so graded that the rider who finishes twelfth will be rewarded with a $5 certificate. Second time prize will be a $40 certificate, with the prize decreasing in value so that the eighth place winner will be given a $10 check.

In addition to the twenty-two mile handicap, there will be an open eight and four-fifths mile scratch race for class B riders and another of the same distance for class C experts. The winner of each race will be given a $25 certificate. Second place will be rewarded with a $20 check; third place, $15; fourth, $10, and fifth, $5.

No Entrance Fee Necessary.

No entrance fee is necessary. Riders desiring to enter are requested to clip the entry blank appearing on the sports pages, fill it out as directed, and mail it to the Bicycle Editor of THE TRIBUNE. Entries will positively close Aug. 28.

In the closed competition there will be nine races, five for boys and four for girls. The winner of each race will receive a $15 certificate, while the victors of second and third places will be rewarded with $5 and $3 checks, respectively.

The following closed races will be held:

BOYS.

Half mile—Under 12 years. One mile—12 years and under 14. 4 2-5 miles—14 years and under 16. 4 2-5 miles—16 years and under 18. 4 2-5 miles—18 years and over.

GIRLS.

Half mile—Under 14 years. One mile—14 years and under 16. 4 2-5 miles—16 years and under 18. 4 2-5 miles—18 years and over.

WAINWRIGHT IN TWO MORE SWIM RACE RECORDS

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 12.—Helen Wainwright, New York, established a new world's record for women for the 500 yard free style swimming, according to an announcement made here today by the National A. A. U. Her time for the distance was 7:09 2-5. The old record, made in a closed pool, was 7:19 2-5.

HELEN WAINWRIGHT.

Miss Wainwright also established a new American record in the same race for 300 yards. Her time was 4:18 2-5, while the previous American record was 4:18 2-5. This record also was made in a closed pool.

Miss Hilda James was first in the 300 yard medley race, 100 yard breast stroke, 100 yard back stroke, and 100 yard free style. Miss Sybil Bauer of the I. A. C., Chicago, gained rapidly on her in the second lap of the race in which the back stroke was used and was within a few yards of the leader when the final lap at free style began. Miss James was equal to the challenge, however, and finished several yards in the lead. Miss Wainwright was third. The time was 4:40 4-5.

Johnny Weismuller of the Illinois A. C., the world's fastest swimmer, was a winner in two events today—the 220 yard free style for men for the national senior championship and the 50 yard free style open event. His time in the 220 was 2:22 2-5, more than two seconds behind his own world's record. The Chicago boy's time in the 50 yard swim was 23 3-5 seconds. Tom Blake of Los Angeles was second in each race.

SKELTON SETS RECORD

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Perhaps the greatest 220 yard breast stroke race ever witnessed in this section ensued at the Detroit Boat House club course today when Robert Skelton, Illinois A. C., Chicago, defeated Donald McLellan, Northern High school, Detroit, by three feet, both making time which it is expected the National A. A. U. will accept as a world's record. Skelton's time was 2:34 4-5, and McLellan's, 2:35 3-5. The world's record is 2:38.

Paul Roberts, D. A. C., once intercollegiate champion, won the 50 yard free style Central A. A. U. championship from Charles Jefferies, Detroit Northern high, by a full yard. Abe Siegel, Chicago, who won the title in 1921, did not come to Detroit to defend it.

Glen Cove Net Finals Postponed Till Today

Glen Cove, L. I., Aug. 12.—[Special.] Rain compelled postponement of the finals of the Women's Metropolitan tennis championship here today, between Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory and Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, Wilmington, Del. The singles' championship will be decided tomorrow afternoon.

DEMPSEY HERE TOMORROW FOR BRENNAN MILL

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With plans practically complete for the staging of the bout between Jack Dempsey, white heavyweight champion, and Challenger Bill Brennan in Floyd Fitzsimmons' arena Labor day afternoon, fistic fans now will follow with interest the boxers' preparation for the contest, which is sure to be the star attraction of Labor day struggles.

BILL BRENNAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The champion will arrive tomorrow morning. Bill Brennan already is in Chicago, where he has been training for the last three days. Leo Flynn, manager of Brennan; Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons, and Jack Kearns, who looks after the white champion's affairs, are scheduled to meet in Chicago tomorrow morning to post forfeits and clear up a few minor details.

Training Quarters Secured.

Arrangements have been made in Michigan City for training quarters. Tickets are on sale and plans made to enlarge the arena in the event advance demand warrants it. The main event will be supported by an excellent card of preliminaries, according to Jack Kearns, who will assist Promoter Fitzsimmons to arrange the card.

Brennan showed his wares at the Arcade yesterday before another capacity crowd. Bill admits he is a little heavy, but claims he will take off the superfluous weight after two weeks of training. He is anxious to get down to Michigan City, where he can settle down to the training grind in earnest.

Mike Dundee May Meet Lynch.

Following his popular victory over Eddie Anderson at Aurora last Friday night, Mike Dundee, Rock Island, may be matched to meet Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, at one of the early shows in either Aurora or East Chicago. Dick Curley, manager of Dundee, said he will make the match if Lynch will agree to 121 pounds. Eddie Meade, who looks after the interests of the champion, wants the weight at 120 pounds.

George Ferguson, manager of Ever Hammer, local lightweight, who stayed ten rounds with Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard at Michigan City recently, may match the bristling blonde with Lew Tendler in Philadelphia on Labor day. There is a slight hitch in the offer, but Ferguson expects to come to an agreement in a day or two.

JOCKEY ENSOR REINSTATED AT SARATOGA MEET

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Jockey "Buddy" Ensor, whose incorrigibility drew him a suspension for a year, was restored to good standing by the stewards of the Jockey club at their meeting today. It was early in the Saratoga season last year that Ensor's conduct compelled disciplinary action. Immediately after receiving his license Ensor was engaged to ride for R. T. Wilson.

A number of other jockeys were granted licenses, some of them having been riding here with temporary papers. These include Arthur Collins, Mack Garner, C. F. Ginley, Cornelius Hughes, William J. Cleary, Earl Pool, Frederick Smith, and Nash Turner.

EAST ST. LOUIS RACER INJURED ON OHIO TRACK

Cleveland, O., Aug. 12.—Ed Burget, East St. Louis, Ill., was probably fatally injured today when his automobile crashed into a fence during the automobile races at Maple Heights track. He was taken to a hospital, where physicians say his chances of living through the night were slight.

NET MATCH AT SKOKIE TODAY

Tennis followers will have the opportunity of watching the western singles and doubles titleholders in action this afternoon at 4 o'clock when John Hennessey, Indianapolis, and Alex Westbrook, Detroit, also Indiana and Michigan state champions, respectively, oppose the veteran local pair of Walter T. Hayes and Alex Squair at Skokie Country club, Glencoe. The gates are open to the public.

Ward Burton took the honors in class A, with a total of 42 from twenty-two yards. H. A. Henry was high in class B. He turned in a score of 43 from twenty yards, while C. Ebbole was best in class C with 36. Leading scores:

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 12.—"Gavvy" Cravath, veteran major league and American association outfielder, and one time champion home run slugger of the National league, finished a long career as an active baseball player, it became known today. LOTS O' GOOD FISH IN THE SEA

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

"THERE are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught," and it's a joke to say that Jack Dempsey can't get any work in his specialty. Wonder what the old time champions would have said if they'd been offered 10 per cent of the amount Dempsey could make, if he wanted to, in the ring during the coming six years.

The trouble is that the champion is holding out for big purses. He and a lot of other fighters have exalted ideas of their ambition values since the row on Boyle's Thirty Acres a year ago. If he and his manager were sincere in their offer to take on the topnotchers among the challengers he would keep busy, show good sportsmanship, and incidentally take in a lot of money.

Of course it is pointed out that Dempsey has "signed" or "agreed" to take on the four leading challengers. But, except for the Brennan bout, which at this writing seems pretty sure to be held at Michigan City Labor day, "signed" and "agreed" mean nothing. They are offset by the jokers in the "articles" that makes the bout itself contingent upon time, place and purse matters still to be settled.

And as long as the champion demands a month's output from the mint for his divvy there is small chance for settling on the purse, let alone the rest of the essentials.

Can Fight Once a Month.

Dempsey can fight once a month if he wants to. All that he'll need to do is forget the big money he got with Carpentier and be satisfied to fight often for comparatively small purses, then he'll find the promoters willing to take a chance. Dempsey may not be abe to shake the plum tree for another $300,000, but the notion that he'll have to go back to riding the brake beam because he has fought himself out of a job is a joke.

Probably Jack could take on Willard, Brennan, Wills and Carpentier, if he won the first three bouts, and average close to $200,000 a fight, clearing up $800,000 in the series. The income tax would take most of it, of course, but even at that Dempsey's share of his own earnings would be a useful sum of money.

It is a well known fact that age doesn't help a boxer and it behooves Jack to gather his rosebuds while he may, to make hay while the sun shines and get while the getting is good. If he takes on the big four in succession and lays aside a considerable fortune—which is well within the possibilities and certainly according to every rule of sportsmanship—the champion can then lay back and await a new crop of challengers.

Jack Past Best Form.

It will not be a long wait. Dempsey is at or past the peak of his form. Others are coming on and the man that will beat Dempsey is long out of knickerbockers. Dempsey himself says he expects to have some young fellow, a lad with plenty of ambition and a wallop, hit him on the chin some day.

With the color line erased to let Wills have a crack at the title, Jack will have no excuse to avoid meeting the latest dark cloud on the horizon.

This cloud is Mistah Tut Jackson, who has been knocking them over right along. He needs experience, mayhap, but a year or so will give him that, and a year is not so likely to help Dempsey.

The fishin's good, Jack. Better hook 'em before some man eating shark swallows hook, line, and fisherman as well!

PUGILIST DIES AFTER COLLAPSE FOLLOWING BOUT

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 12.—Young Labadie, known as the soldier boxer, who collapsed after a bout Tuesday night, died today without recovering consciousness. Officials of the Arena club and managers of the boxers have been questioned by the police, and it is expected they will be summoned when the inquest is held. Labadie, who was 24 years old, was a private at Camp Dix. He and Louis Barale, a Frenchman living in Camden, boxed six rounds at the club and at the conclusion of the bout both seemed in good condition. Labadie suddenly collapsed, however, and when he was taken to a hospital surgeons found he had a hemorrhage of the brain.

APPLAUSE FOR INJURED JOCKEY BACK IN SADDLE

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Benjamin Marinelli, jockey, injured when three horses fell in the sixth race at the Saratoga track yesterday, was accorded a round of applause when he rode to the barrier astride Forest Love in the first race today.

The two other jockeys who were hurt, Charles Lang and Edward Scobie, pleaded unsuccessfully with their physicians to be permitted to go to the track and witness the running of the Saratoga Special.

Lang suffered a broken collar bone and severe bruises, and Scobie had a rib broken and was shaken up severely. Marinelli escaped with bruises.

FRENCH, AUSSIES REST; RAIN HALTS DAVIS CUP MATCH

Boston, Mass., Aug. 12.—Instead of fighting out their struggle for Davis cup preliminary honors, tennis teams of Australia and France went to the movies or nursed ailments today. The postponement until Monday, because of rain, of the two singles matches that remain of the tournament was satisfactory to both teams.

It was particularly pleasing to the men from Australia. Although the advantage in standing was theirs, physically they were hardly up to renewal of the stern competition of the last two days.

Gerald L. Patterson, their captain, drawn to meet the brilliant French youngster, Henri Cochet, was limping on an ankle that threatened to keep him out of play. Pat O'Hara Wood, called upon to face the giant Andre Gobert, star of yesterday's doubles match, was ill at ease with the neuritis that has pained him for weeks.

The Frenchmen were in fine fettle, but concurred readily in the postponement. There was no disposition on the part of Capt. Allan H. Muhr to seek play and gain the advantage consequent on the opposing team's injuries. "We will go to the movies," he said, when Gobert and Cochet asked if they were to get into their playing togs.

TENNIS STARS PLAY IN RAIN AT SOUTHAMPTON

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Gum boots, rubber overcoats and water wings made up the popular costumes at Meadow club today when the semi-final round matches in the mixed doubles were played to the accompaniment of rain.

WHEN HE BROKE IN THEY SAID HE WAS TOO SMALL TO CATCH

THE White Sox-Browns game yesterday marked the tenth anniversary of the arrival of Catcher Ray Schalk from the Milwaukee American association club and the famous catcher's thirtieth birthday. His record in those ten years includes catching 1,283 contests and pinch-hitting in twenty-seven others, with a grand batting average of .254 and a grand fielding average of .980. For the ten years he has caught an average of 128 games per season.

A native of Illinois, Schalk began in 1911 with the Taylorville, Ill., club of the Illinois-Missouri league, and was sold to Milwaukee near the close of the season for $700. "Kid" Gleason, present manager of the Sox and at that time assistant, quickly secured Schalk's transfer from Milwaukee for four players, value reported as $17,000.

Gellen, James Salem, and Harry Carlson will try to win the title.

BABE RUTH ILL; ABSCESS ON LEG PUTS HIM IN BED

New York, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—The Yankees will have to worry along without Babe Ruth for several days. He went to St. Vincent's hospital this afternoon for an operation on an abscess on the calf of his right leg, then was sent home to his apartment in the Hotel Ansonia tonight. Mrs. Ruth said late in the evening Babe was feeling fine, but expressed doubt whether he would be in shape to play against the Detroit Tigers in the series beginning here Tuesday.

Ruth's infection is almost identically the same as the abscess which developed on his arm during the world's series last fall and resulted in his untimely retirement. Ruth will not be in the game at Washington tomorrow and may miss the entire Detroit series.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

STUDYING NATURAL HISTORY ON TOTEM POLES.

If you want to tackle a real natural history lesson there is nothing like trying to decipher the birds and mammals on a totem pole. We tried it this morning and before we got through ravens were eagles and frogs were brown bears. That was enough and we decided to quit.

Although you may miss your guess as to the species of bird or animal carved upon these totem poles found in this neck of the woods, the interesting legends surrounding these wild creatures and the relation they have to the lives of the Indians is always fascinating. It is hard to imagine a raven a guardian spirit, yet this black bird of the north woods plays that part with many an Indian family in Alaska. As carved or painted, these ravens are birds which once seen you will never forget and I sure would want my gun if I ever run on to one of that type running around loose in the woods.

The salmon fishermen are on the job right now and off the mouth of one big river near Wrangell their boats were much in evidence. With the glass you could see the nets stretched out to catch the valuable tons and tons of fishes that are canned near here every season and, brown faced, fishermen lying in their sturdy boats were busy picking up their catch and setting their nets.

There's life for you—running those nets rain or shine. It is certainly no job for a fellow who gets seasick. Five minutes in one of those small fishing boats bouncing, bobbing, and pitching on the water would mean his finish.

Ravens, ducks, and gulls have provided plenty of "food" for thought while cruising up this coast and they haven't been on totem poles either. But I have the inclination to climb into the forest that stretches along the shore for miles and miles and have a peep at the bird life.

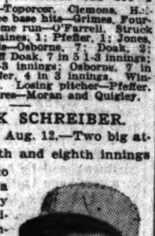
BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 12.—Two big attacks in the sixth and eighth innings were enough to give the Cubs a 6 to 4 victory over the Cardinals in the opening game of the series today. The defeat shoved the St. Louis gang down the ladder, into second place again, as the Giants took a pair from Brooklyn. Bob O'Farrell's homer in the eighth, counting two men ahead of him, was responsible for the triumph.



BOB O'FARRELL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Three Cardinal pitchers worked in an effort to turn back the Bears, but all were treated with equal indifference and mauled around the lot. Bill Doak, who started, went by the boards in a fit of passion when the Bears reared up for three runs in the sixth. Jess Haines worked the rest of the inning and was pulled for a pinch hitter. Big Ed "Jeff" Pfeffer finished up and was the victim of the three run winning attack put over on O'Farrell's smash.

Osborne Walks Off Stage.

Ernest "Kewpie" Osborne started the battle for the Bears and was a strong hurler for five innings when the Cards started to smack his delivery. When the St. Louis nine took the lead in the seventh with two runs which were gained by two walks, a hit batsman and a single, Osborne was called out and left the slab, but not before a big argument with Capt. Charley Hollocher. Percy Lee Jones finished and didn't have a bit of trouble blanking the locals.

The Cards broke the ice in the fifth, scoring their first run on doubles by Toporcer and Clemons. Osborne was in trouble right here, for after Clemons doubled he filled the bases with a pair of passes, but managed to escape. Three Cub runs in the sixth gave Ozzie new life. Four hits, including a double by Hollocher and a triple by Grimes, and a pass brought home the runs.

O'Farrell Homer Turns Tide.

One more Card run counted in the sixth on triples by Fournier and Toporcer, but again snappy fielding turned back the Cards. Then came the seventh and the two Cardinal tallies for the lead. Two were out when Osborne got into a mess. He passed Smith and Hornsby and hit Fournier in the ribs. Then Mueller singled, scoring two. This gave the Cards a one run lead and it looked good. Ozzie was replaced.

The winning rally in the Cubs' eighth started with Friberg's single. Heathcote sacrificed and Krug was passed. Then O'Farrell got one of Pfeffer's benders on the end of his bat and sent it into the right field bleachers for a homer. Three runs, enough to win the contest, scored. Jones was strong against the Cards in the eighth and was third.

2 Cubs' Rookies Lead Minor League Batters

Springfield, Mo., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Two rookies of the Chicago Cubs, playing with the Springfield Western Association club, are among ranking batters of the league, according to figures just announced. For PLAYERS of WHIST By A. R. METCALFE

FEW CHANGES IN WHIST LAWS.

THE only code of laws which prevails in the United States is the one published by the Whist Club of New York. Since 1913 the only changes of any consequence have been in the penalties for a bid out of turn and for a revoke. The last change was made in 1920, and since that time there has been no change of any sort.

In spite of this, one is constantly hearing of new laws of all sorts, most of which are quite ridiculous. In a recent game on the North Shore the first three players passed. The fourth player bid three diamonds. She was promptly informed that after three players had passed, the fourth player could only bid no trump or one in the major suits, such being the law of the New York Whist club.

After considerable discussion, the deal was thrown out, although the fourth player might easily have won a game in diamonds, and this resulted in the rubber going to the wrong pair. It would not be one bit more preposterous to state that the fourth player must dance upon the table before making a bid. There has never been any law in regard to the bid that any player may make except that it must be higher than any preceding bid.

Counting is a bugaboo to the majority, but a pure delight to the fortunate few who have courage enough to know how to do it. It is also less difficult than it seems if a player puts his best efforts into the work. The deal which follows is a very pretty example.

West secured 9 tricks.

After losing the club finesse, the declarer could only count two tricks in hearts, two in spades, one in diamonds, and three in clubs, which meant that unless he could win the queen of diamonds game was impossible. It was easy for several reasons, as the play progressed, to place the king of diamonds in the north hand.

The persistence of north in clearing his heart suit, although knowing that south had no heart to lead to him, the diamond discard of south all pointed conclusively to that fact. It was necessary, therefore, to compel north to lead diamonds, and to do this declarer was obliged to make his very curious play in the spade suit of leading away from the king and one; as north must have kept two diamonds and still had two hearts remaining, he could only have two spades.

By taking the last spade from north and allowing him to make his two hearts, the declarer compelled the desired lead of a diamond at trick 12, and so earned the game. The next deal was more difficult.

West secured 9 tricks.

The declarer won the second club lead after finding that south had no more of that suit. There are seven easy tricks in sight and the most likely way to secure the necessary eight tricks seemed to be in the spade suit. The first round of spades, however, revealed an appalling situation. The declarer was forced to lead out his short diamond suit, not because he was afraid of losing the three tricks represented by diamonds, but in the hope of getting a count of the hand which would enable him to figure out an extra trick.

The discard of a heart by north on the last round of diamonds revealed the situation perfectly. With seven cards remaining, south was counted for four spades and two diamonds and no clubs. He therefore had one heart only, which west extracted neatly with his ace. Then by losing a spade trick to south the declarer compelled south to lead spades to the guarded jack in dummy, after winning the two diamond tricks.

For the declarer to win the last trick with a small club was, of course, an absurdity, due entirely to the carelessness on the part of north. That player at trick two should have made a mental note that west held one more club and that he must always have a club until he played or discarded it. Not having done this, north was obliged to guess at trick twelve and as is usually the case, kept the wrong card.

12 O'CLOCK GIRL

KATHERINE AGAR.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 12.—"Imagine being put to bed at 9 o'clock every night in Paris," Wailed Katherine Agar, Chicago, a member of the feminine athletic team which has come to compete in the women's Olympic games in Pershing Stadium, Aug. 21. "We are really tired in the evenings on acount of the practice daily, and it is especially tiring to me to throw the javelin every day, but we think 9 o'clock a bit early. We would slip out if the matrons were not watching so closely."

The girls walked miles and miles through the Louvre gallery today, having a day off, and returned to their hotel so fatigued that they went to bed before 8 o'clock. All of the fifteen girls, except two have bobbed hair and are attracting much attention.

IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE STARTS SPORTS PAPER

The Izaak Walton league recently launched a magazine devoted to outdoor sport entirely. The purpose is the protection of fish and game. The start was made on the contributions of scores of chapters of the Izaak Walton league. In discussing the aims of the magazine Will H. Dilg, president and founder of the league, said yesterday:

"Our magazine was born of necessity. We simply had to have an official organ so that the truth might be sent home to the American fisherman and hunter that unless a great national organization of well directed sportsmen is brought about soon sports a-field and a-stream will be but a memory and our rods and guns and reels useless relics of a past golden age.

Time to Call a Halt.

"Emerson Hough in his editorial, 'Time to Call a Halt,' has not overstated facts when he writes: 'In this year, 1922, the lovers of outdoor America for the first time began seriously to realize that outdoor sport in this country soon will be a thing of the past.'

"Scrambling for the last remnants of our great heritage, we have been so busy as to be blind. Now the truth comes home. Now for the first time a sudden consternation comes to the soul of every thinking man who ever has loved this America of ours."

"Zane Grey, novelist and sportsman, will edit the league's sea angling department, and he has a story devoted to a ten hour battle with a swordfish he hooked July 14 this year. Grey has fished and hunted all over the country and knows conditions. He writes: 'The Izaak Walton league might be the power to save our fish for the boy anglers of the future. Surely it is the last hope. Anglers and hunters can be brought together in a united and tremendous force for good.

Million Men Needed.

"'What is needed is a million men all over the United States to enlighten the public to the fact that food and game fish are in danger of extermination, to make new laws and to enforce them, and to educate young anglers in finer and more sportsmanlike ways—and to save the fish. In a few years it will be too late."

The Truth About "Social" Diseases Must Be Told

IF Chicago should catch fire again, and if all good citizens, including the Fire Department, should try to hush the matter up—instead of trying to put the fire out—what would be the verdict of Public Opinion?

Of course the situation described is unthinkable.

And yet—a force quite as destructive as fire is wrecking thousands of homes in Chicago and depriving commerce and industry of millions of dollars' worth of productive energy, chiefly because men and women continue to "hush the matter up" instead of organizing to eliminate it.

Venereal disease is on the increase.

According to medical authorities, one of these diseases has already attacked more than 15 per cent of our entire population. It is responsible for eighty out of every hundred babies born dead, for twenty out of every hundred people committed to our asylums for the insane.

The other has already done damage to more than half our adult male population. It is responsible for 20 per cent of all blindness, for 80 per cent of all pelvic inflammatory disease in women.

This unfortunate state of affairs is the more tragic because the toll of suffering taken by these two diseases is utterly needless.

Among the first million men called to the colors, shortly after America's entry into the war, certain large draft groups ran as high as 35 per cent infected. The United States Medical Corps could not reject so great a number; so instead it cured them. By the time the American Army had entered Germany, the proportion had been reduced to less than one in a hundred.

Not so many years ago, untold numbers were dying every year of typhoid—smallpox—yellow-fever—malaria. Today in enlightened communities those diseases have been practically wiped out.

Chicago faces no enemy so devastating as venereal disease. That, too, should be wiped out.

It is now more than two years since the Public Health Institute (founded, not for profit, by public-spirited citizens) declared war upon "social" diseases in Chicago. It was prompted to enter the fight because its founders had been impressed by the remarkable record of the Medical Corps during the war. They believed that much the same methods were practical for continuing the fight.

The need for this institution and its power for good are evidenced by the fact that since its inception, two years ago, its ministrations have steadily increased in number, until at the present time its staff of physicians are treating every week-day approximately 800 men, women and children afflicted with "social" diseases—a monthly total of over 20,000.

With the adoption of this practical method by progressive citizens in other large cities, it is hoped that another generation will see a marked reduction in the power for evil now possessed and exercised by two of the most dangerous enemies society has ever known.

The facilities of the Public Health Institute are unequaled. Patients are examined and treated by skilled physicians, thoroly trained, whose broad experience is constantly being extended by personal contact with thousands of actual cases. The Institute maintains, as an auxiliary, the most completely equipped laboratory in America for its special work, where every diagnosis is verified by exact chemical, bacteriological and serological tests.

At the Public Health Institute the utmost privacy possible is assured. Each patient, upon registering, receives a number and thenceforward calls for his record by number only. Forty individual treatment rooms insure prompt attention.

On a different floor from the men's department the Institute maintains a separate department for women and children—with trained nurses in constant attendance, ministering to the increased comfort of the patient.

Any person coming to the Institute will find those in attendance kindly and sympathetic; he will return to his work with a heavy burden lifted, for he will know that the best that medicine affords is at work to get him well.

The cost of treatment is small, and is available on terms so liberal that any person regularly employed can afford it.

If from any cause whatsoever a person has reason to suspect infection from a "social" disease—and it should be noted that frequently a disease of this character lurks in the system for years without revealing its presence—the Public Health Institute urges the importance of an immediate examination. Even a day's delay is dangerous—not only to the patient but also to those near and dear to him.

As for the person who already knows he is afflicted, he of all people should undertake immediate treatment—the best that may be had.

For the good of the individual—and for the good of Chicago—the truth about "social" diseases must be told.

MOTORDOM

"Dangerous Age" of Auto Owners Hit by Coroner

Trade Association Adds Courtesy Plea to Safety Drive.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MOTOR car adolescence, that inevitable period between the purchase of the first new car and complete mastery of driving, is a primary cause of automobile deaths in Cook county, according to Coroner Peter Hoffman. His latest survey of the automobile death and accident toll shows that 3,248 people have been killed by motor vehicles in the county in the seventeen years of their operation. The list has grown from five deaths in 1905 to 606 in 1921, and the average of two deaths a day will continue this year unless reckless driving is immediately curbed.

"Carelessness in driving is, of course, the worst enemy to public safety we have to face in Chicago," said the county official yesterday after completing the survey, "but we have found in going over our cases that the dangerous age of the automobile is a close second.

"Nearly every man who buys a car goes through the speed mania period to some extent. If he happens to be conceited he instantly becomes a menace to society. After learning the first principles of driving he begins to wonder how fast the car can go and to think that everybody on the street is watching him. Then he begins to speed up, thinking that every car on the street is trying to race with him and attempting to pass as many cars as possible. He has heard that we drive fast in Chicago in order to keep the traffic moving and seems to think that he can exceed any speed limit and pass all the cars on congested streets. Naturally his own car is under control less than half of the time.

"In addition to the danger he causes by his own wild driving, he influences other drivers to follow him. Even old timers at the wheel unconsciously increase their speed with the car ahead. The result is a death list that is appalling and becoming more so every day."

In a complete record of accidental fatalities covering the last seventeen years, made in poster form and distributed from the coroner's office as another step in the safety campaign, county authorities have placed the accidental death list at 91,822. They have found that the housewife is engaged in the second most dangerous calling in the county, due, in great part, to automobile accidents. In the period covered, a total of 12,885 laborers met accidental death and 8,434 married women engaged in home pursuits were killed. The third death class were children under 5, a large percentage of them killed in automobile accidents.

The county safety poster is the most powerful argument against Chicago's carelessness ever made public. It begins with the caption, "Watch your step. What's your hurry?" over a reproduction of a recent CHICAGO TRIBUNE cartoon which pictures a skeleton poised in front of an hour glass and beating out jazz music on a banjo with broken strings. On either side is a chart showing the cause of every premature death in the seventeen years.

The Chicago Automobile Trade association added another important bit to the safety campaign yesterday in distributing "courtesy stickers" to dealers along the row and requesting them to enroll all car owners in the courtesy order.

"Put this sticker on the windshield of the car," the association urges, "and help center motorists' attention on the one idea of courtesy.

"In the early days a motorist approaching a crossing would pause and let pedestrians cross. He did it with a smile. Today the average Chicago motorist assumes the attitude of 'To hell with the other fellow!' Courtesy among motorists themselves also seems to be on the wane. Today a fellow in trouble might just as well be in the middle of a desert as somewhere on a busy thoroughfare, for all the assistance he gets from passing cars."

PARISIAN MOTOR STYLES

When a French journal offered cash prizes recently for the "smartest car" in the city, hundreds of Gasoline Alley residents shined up their mounts and entered this long line at the Bagatelle gardens in Paris. Compare the Parisian assembly with the cars that may be seen along Michigan avenue any day, and draw your own conclusions concerning automotive progress at home and abroad. Highway Congress Plans to Resume Work at Seville

THE international road congress, which ceased operations in 1914 because of the European conflict, is to resume its deliberations early next May at Seville, Spain. The program for what promises to be the most important conference on highway improvement ever held has just been received from the office of the general secretary in Paris.

Thousands of delegates, representing national and state governments and good roads associations in the United States, Belgium, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, France, Great Britain, Italy, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, Argentina, Czecho-Slovakia, Spain, Portugal, Norway, Germany, Jugo-Slavia, Poland, Austria, Cuba, Chile, Brazil, and many other countries, will participate in the congress and exchange views and experiences for mutual benefit. English, French, and Spanish have been adopted as the official languages.

Canadian delegates will go to the meeting determined to bring the next congress to Canada. The first congress was held at Paris in 1908, the second at Brussels in 1910, and the third at London in 1913.

Trucks Carry Strawberries.

Farmers 150 miles distant from Detroit are bringing in their strawberries by trucks. Strawberry shipments into the Pittsburgh, Oregon, market are also being made by truck. Growers and commission men generally report that the berries arrive in better condition and bring better prices, when shipped by truck.

Illuminated Map to Show Progress on State Roads

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 12.—A huge illuminated map showing the progress of all state hard roads under construction is under preparation by the state highway division for exhibit at county fairs throughout the state.

The map also will show the amount of grading and the contracts awarded. Each of these will be shown by different colored lights. Another map showing the location of material plants from which come the concrete, stone, and other materials used in the building of Illinois' great road system will be exhibited.

With these maps the department will send out tinted pictures showing views of various highways of the state. Models are to be prepared of bridges and of present state standards of pavement.

As these displays are to be exhibited for the benefit of the public, the highway division is asking for suggestions as to what should be included.

Test Truck Loads

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—[Special.]—The pressure exerted on a pavement by the impact of a truck wheel as it passes over bumps, cracks, and depressions can now be accurately determined by an apparatus designed by the bureau of tests of the state highway division. In this device the wheel load is carried on an oil cylinder three inches in diameter the oil line being connected with a three-eighths inch cylinder, the piston working against a coil spring. This piston is connected by levers to a stylus moving over a rolling paper. The paper rolls are operated by a connection with the truck transmission, enabling the operator to determine the relation of the speed of the truck to the movement of the paper.

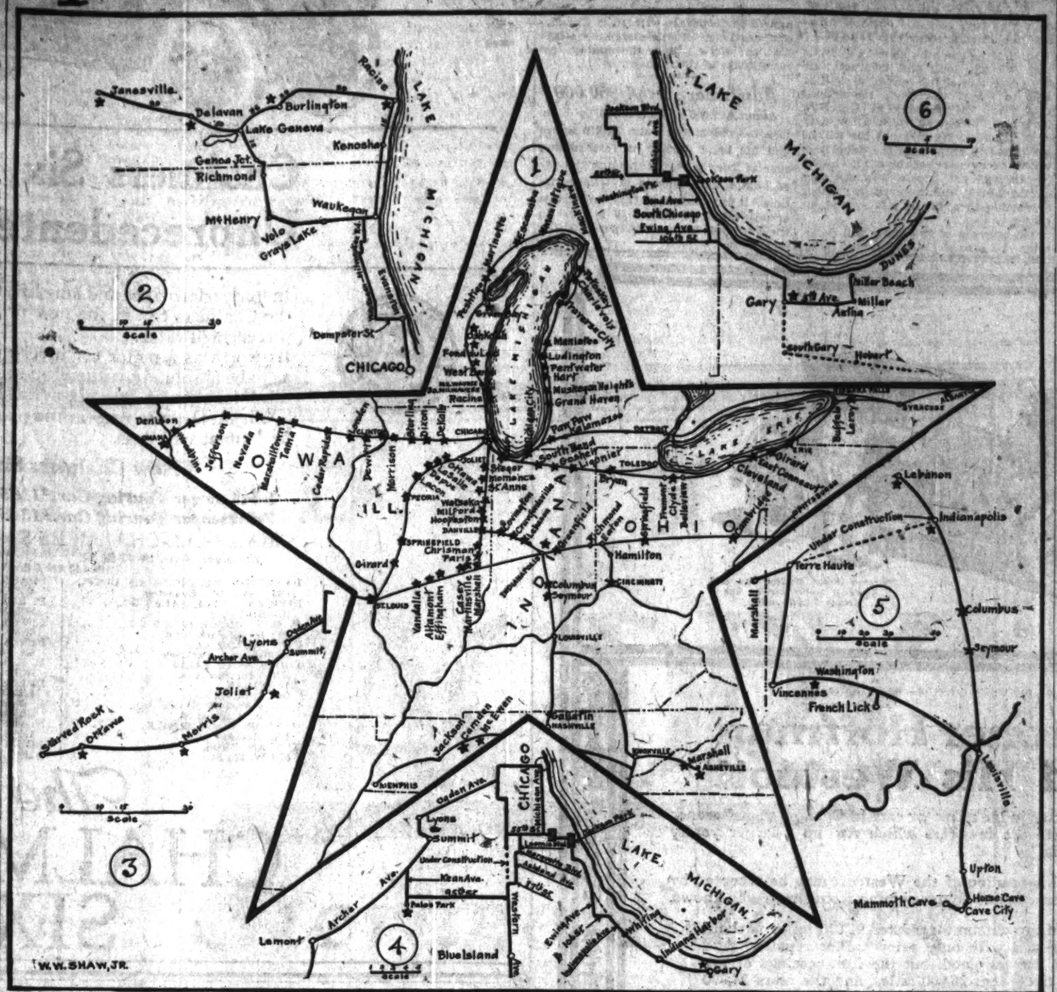
XXV.—Camps for Motor Gypsies.



W. W. SHAW, JR.

ILLINOIS cities with foresight enough to foster visits from the thousands of tourists passing through the state have garnered millions in revenue for several seasons past. Michigan authorities estimate that $100,000,000 was spent by tourists in that state last year, and a like amount went into the coffers of Wisconsin and other middle west business men. Municipal free camps for tourists are credited with producing a lion's share of this revenue in communities where this popular hospitality is extended.

Here is a detailed map showing the most popular motor routes in middle western states and where free camps may be found on each of the routes.

Section No. 1 covers the heavily used trails centering in Chicago, with Asheville, Memphis, Albany, Mackinac, and Omaha as points of the star. Camp sites are indicated by stars opposite names of towns and cities where free camps are maintained. In this district eighty-three free camps are listed by the various guides.

Section No. 2 shows the best routes at present to Lake Geneva and Janesville, with the free camps indicated.

No. 3 is a detailed illustration of the best route to Starved Rock park, following the Ogden avenue and Illinois valley pavements laid by the state.

No. 4 shows in detail the routes leading south from Chicago and the present Western avenue detour.

No. 5 indicates the best routes to Mammoth Cave at present and the camp sites that may be used on this popular trip.

No. 6 is a detailed illustration of the best route offered to the dunes at present.

Motor Equipment Now Large Enough to Protect U. S.

Survey Discovers 100,000 Cars in Chicago Suburbs.

MOTOR cars will care for the traveling public in any rail crisis. Within a forty mile radius of each of the seven largest cities in the country there are enough cars to carry the entire adult population to business, as indicated by the following table, compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce:

Suburban area—	Motor car regis.	No. adults.	Adults per car.
Chicago	100,826	588,619	6
New York	221,645	1,816,588	7
Philadelphia	75,474	581,689	7
Detroit	40,000	223,168	6
Cleveland	56,370	325,550	6
St. Louis	30,982	266,466	8
Boston	120,200	816,471	7

As the majority of the women in the adult population are not engaged in business, and as some of the men in suburban areas are locally employed the ratio of one car to every six or eight adults is a sufficient emergency force as far as rolling stock is concerned.

The suburban situation is well exemplified by the traffic conditions on Long Island, a territory near New York City which has built up an adult population exclusive of the counties in the metropolis, of 131,000 and a motor car registration of 22,300, or one for every six persons. These cars in normal times are feeders to the Long Island railroad. The passengers carried total of this road has been increasing each year with the gain in population and motor vehicles in its territory. In an emergency this traffic could be carried in motor cars, but the city of New York would need to provide parking spaces for 22,000 cars, as well as for trucks, which are, however, moving more constantly.

The traveling representatives of business will also be protected in the event of a rail strike. Analysis of state registration cards shows that in Massachusetts around 9 per cent of the cars are owned by business houses.

Suspension of railroad service over short distance routes would not seriously inconvenience the traveling personnel of many business concerns. Failure of rail service over long distances would create serious inconvenience to long distance business travel, though essential trips could be handled over the transcontinental highways, according to the national chamber.

One department of travel in which there is little need for worry is that of vacation trips. The use of the motor car for holiday tours is constantly gaining. Over a million persons went motor camping last year. More than 100 cities now have municipal camp sites. There are many additional moderate priced commercial camps for motorists and large areas for this purpose in the national parks and forests.

THE Fisk Cord is giving more value in service this year than was ever put into a tire of any kind before.

The buying public knows it, too—for, even though the Fisk factory, working at capacity, is bending every possible effort to build them, it has had difficulty in keeping up with the demand.

Before you buy any other tire, compare it with a Fisk cord—the tire whose distinctive extra quality you can see and feel, weigh and measure at the time you buy.

There's a Fisk Tire of extra value in every size, for car, truck, or speed wagon.

Columbia Light Six

Doubly Certified Dependability

A good automobile is built to deliver many miles of quicker, more convenient, comfortable and dependable transportation.

How well it does its work depends on the capability of its makers.

The Columbia Light Six is the product, not of a single organization, but of many—each a recognized leader in its line.

Columbia certifies the completed car—certifies performance, economy, dependableness, and the substantial quality that means lasting satisfaction.

Every unit is additionally certified by its nationally known and nationally responsible manufacturer—a specialist.

Certified Engine — Continental Motors
Certified by Continental—the largest exclusive manufacturers of motors in the world.

Certified Clutch — Borg & Beck Clutch
Certified by Borg & Beck—long recognized as the largest builders of dependable clutches.

Certified Lighting & Ignition — Auto-Lite
Certified by Auto-Lite—whose lighting and ignition system is rendering faithful service to hundreds of thousands of motorists.

The 50 horsepower six-cylinder motor in the Columbia Light Six is a Continental "Red Seal", which means that it bears the nameplate and carries the guarantee of the largest and best known automobile engine builders that exist today.

Both front and rear axles are produced by Timken, and Timken certifies them. No better axles can be had.

Durston builds the transmission (using Timken bearings) and gives to this important unit the assurance of satisfactory service that comes only with long experience and a jealously guarded reputation for quality.

It is the same throughout the entire car. Auto-Lite electrical equipment, Borg & Beck clutch, Spicer universal joints, Stromberg carburetor, Gemmer steering gear, Harrison radiator—a long list where every name represents known value and proved merit.

And each part of each car has passed both the rigid inspection of its maker and a further searching test by Columbia engineers.

Never before have these standard specialized units been combined in a car selling for less than $1000.

The new Columbia Light Six is now on display. Come and see it.

Certified Axles — Timken Axles
Certified by Timken—whose name assures that Columbia has the best in front and rear axles and bearings.

Certified Universal Joints — Spicer
Certified by Spicer—acknowledged as a leading producer of universal joints of the most durable type.

Certified Carburetor — Stromberg Carburetor
Certified by Stromberg—builder of a highly developed carburetor insuring gasoline mileage seldom equalled in a car of this size and power.

The wheelbase of the Columbia Light Six is 115 inches. The car is equipped with deep-drawn crown fenders, bullet lamps, deeply cushioned genuine leather upholstery, plate glass rear windor, slanting windshield—a refinement of detail, in short, that far surpasses your expectations. The tires are 6-ply Fisk Cords. Steel o wood wheels optional.

Canadian Trail Blazers Win in Wilderness Test

Mark New Road Through Scenic Paradise of Northwest.

VICTORIA, B. C.—[By the Associated Press.]—Completing the thrilling and at times hair raising pathfinding run from Edmonton to Vancouver, the entire distance through Canadian territory, the Edmonton Automobile club pilots, C. W. Niemeyer and Frank Silverthorn, who ended their journey at Victoria, recently, gave a graphic account of the trip.

They described their journey as one of marvelous beauty and remarkably hard work, but said they had opened the patnway to Edmonton, and that the expenditure of but a comparatively small amount of money would make it a permanent and pleasant trail for the tourist. They encountered muskeg, burned bridges, rock slides, grizzly bears, railroad trains, windstorms, and furious rains; but they came along with only three blowouts, and those caused by rail spikes.

Leaving Edmonton, the car proceed- westward with a heavy load. It weighed 1,800 pounds, carried two to four men and 1,600 pounds of baggage. The outfit consisted of picks and shovels, axes, hammers, four 12 foot, 10 inch planks, and several shorter pieces; a complete set of tools and spare parts; two spare tires and a spare wheel; fifty gallons of gas and five gallons of oil. They made the entire run on forty-one gallons of gas and six quarts of oil, and came every foot of the way on their own wheels via deserted railroad grade, active railways, tote roads, and the Yale road.

From Edmonton they proceeded through the Yellowhead Pass trail, taking the abandoned Grand Trunk Pacific railway grade near the mountains and following it to Jasper.

They picked up "Baldy" Robb, a well known mountain guide, who was with them throughout the trip. At Jasper they took to the steel railway and bumped the ties to Lucerne, resuming the abandoned grade one mile west of there and following it to Red Pass. Then they took steel to Tete Jaune Cache and the old tote road thence to Alfreda, steel to Blue River and Avola, thence tote road to Lytton, steel and tote road to Hope, and the Yale road to Vancouver, and then by Canadian Pacific ferry to Victoria.

The pathfinders reached here with blistered hands and sore muscles. They brushed and built miles of roads, constructed thirty-one bridges, some of which were good enough to be called permanent structures; they killed a 14 foot grizzly bear with a 303 rifle and took 200 pictures of the wild life of the trail, Rocky Mountain sheep, deer, and birds.

From Edmonton to Edson they struck one strip where they averaged only a mile an hour owing to the necessity for building brush trails and little bridges across muskeg country. It was on this period of the run that a great rainstorm came down and made a temporary mess of things.

Entering the mountains proper they passed through marvelous country, presenting a variety of views that could not be surpassed in America. Niemeyer is familiar with the great motor highways of the United States, its deserts and mountains and mighty parks, and he says they passed desert areas of sage brush similar to the great American desert; mountain scenery that rivaled Colorado and Yellowstone park. A portion of the Thompson river canyon could well be called the Yellowstone of Canada; great, brilliantly colored ravines and hills of rock and verdure, terrific cliffs and wonderful forests.

The car was driven on the railroads, around curves and along precipices where the variation of a hair would have thrown the occupants hundreds of feet to death. The car wheels straddled the rails, the outer wheel being on the outer edge of the ties. The ties in many instances were projecting over a yawning space which fell straight to the roaring river.

At one point where erosion had worn away a tote road for some hundreds of feet they went down to the river and "leaded" a trail through the water, around a rocky point, and then back to the road. At another they found a rock as large as a house right in front of them. They had to cut their way around, through shale rock. One section was a mass of fallen timber due to a great windstorm that came down on them. This was near Tete Jaune Cache. They cut their way through. Everywhere they went they left a passable trail behind them.

Canada Opens Gates

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 12.—Restrictions which heretofore limited nonresidents to one thirty day automobile tour in Canada in six months were lifted today by new regulations. Any number of permits may now be granted, provided that after thirty days the owner gives a bond. He may then keep the machine in Canada for an additional five months.

Owners of cars or motorcycles crossing the border for a period of not longer than twenty-four hours will still be required to surrender their state licenses, which will be returned to them as they leave Canada.

Nonresident owners of cars who are connected with automobile companies were not formerly permitted to bring machines into Canada for touring purposes. The new regulations abolish this rule.

SOUTHERN MARKET.

In South America, Brazil has a motor vehicle for every 1,497 persons; Argentina, one for every 296; Chile, one for every 455.

Huge Auto Show

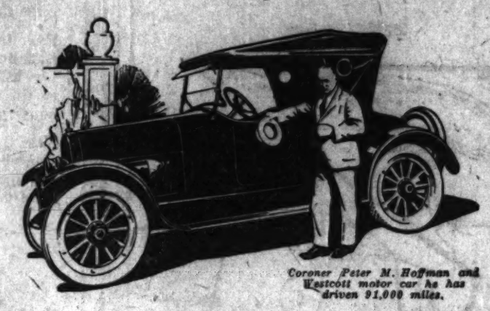
A big automobile show will be one of the chief features of the Central States Fair and Exposition, to be held on the new fair grounds on the Lincoln highway, two and one-half miles north of Aurora, from Aug. 18 to 26.

By holding the auto show in a circus tent 600 feet long and 188 feet wide the promoters of the exposition will be able to forget the space restrictions that limit the showing at the New York and Chicago shows to a few cars of each make. No make of car will be permitted to exhibit at the exposition unless every model of the car is shown. In one case this means nineteen cars in one exhibit, and the average number of models to a booth will run about eleven.

The success of the show will determine the size of the permanent building that will be erected to house the show in succeeding years. L. L. Fest, Sam Miles assistant for years at the big national shows, is managing the auto show for the exposition. Mr. Fest says the big manufacturers have agreed to coöperate with their Chicago and northern Illinois distributors and that the show will be thoroughly representative of the industry.

Busses Save Band $60,000

About $60,000 will be saved by Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa and his band during its forthcoming tour of twenty weeks through the use of busses as a means of transportation. It is anticipated that under this arrangement no time will be lost in the transportation of baggage for the bandsmen.



Coroner Peter M. Hoffman and Westcott motor car he has driven 91,000 miles.

Coroner Hoffman and His Westcott

There is no better judge of motor cars in Chicago than Coroner Hoffman. There are few cars which run up a larger yearly mileage than his.

Consequently, his opinion of the Westcott may be accepted by motor car owners as good advice coming from a man who knows.

"I have run my chummy roadster 91,000 miles without any trouble and with only a few minor repairs. And not only is the car good, but the front casings of my last set of tires went 26,000 miles, and the rears 24,000 miles without a blowout. It's an easy car on tires.

"I want to certify to your advertisement that the Westcott is 'The Car With a Longer Life.'"

Middle West Is Invited to View 800-Mile Highway

EVERY city, village and town bordering on the greater Sheridan road from St. Louis, Mo., to Houghton, Mich., through Illinois and Wisconsin, is expected to have representation at the big celebration Sept. 15, which will be held at Menominee park, Oshkosh, Wis.

According to present plans of the program committee, special representatives will call at all the places to solicit the coöperation of the communities in order to make a demonstration that will attract national attention to what is now regarded as one of the most perfect highways on the North American continent. The completion of the work on highway 15 from Thereso to Lomira, Wis., finishing the last link, makes it one continuous boulevard to Houghton, Mich., a distance of 800 miles, with the exception of one-half mile at Zion City, where construction is now going on.

Two committees will leave for St. Louis this week to organize the communities from St. Louis to Chicago, in the celebration. Mayor Kiel of St. Louis is expected to head the St. Louis delegation, and Mayor Thompson of Chicago has been named as general chairman for the Chicago enthusiasts. Springfield, Ottawa and Peoria will be visited and general committees organized there, the same as in Milwaukee and other cities on the highway.

Those who have made the trip from St. Louis up north through Illinois, Wisconsin and into upper Michigan speak glowingly of the wonderful touring possibilities and business opportunities this highway will afford when all work is completed. For the most part, the road is well marked. Wisconsin's part is highway No. 15, and in upper Michigan it is highway No. 15 all the way to Houghton, through Escanaba and Marquette.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

FRANK B. ANSTED, president of the Lexington Motor company, has announced the production of three new cars in the company's line and a substantial reduction in prices, effective at once. The new body types include a sport roadster at $1,695, a "Royal coach" at $2,145, and a brougham at $2,645. The five passenger touring car, powered with the Ansted motor has been reduced to $1,695, and the "Lark" novel sport car to $2,045.

Durant activities have been extensive during the last eighteen months. The Lansing plant, which cost $1,000,000, was started in the spring of 1921. One year later 123 Durant "Fours" were produced there. Since the first of this year a large addition has been built to make room for the production of the Star car, which is due on the market before the 1st of September. At Flint work is being rushed on the newest Durant factory, where the Flint Six will be produced.

Log to Coast

One of the longest pathfinding and logging trips ever undertaken has been started by the Chicago Motor club's pathfinding car No. 3, which left Chicago last week. The car will travel to the Pacific coast and back and will thoroughly log and map two transcontinental routes before its return three months from now. The trip will cover more than 8,000 miles of roadwork and is expected to result in numerous short cuts and revisions on present highways.

The car will proceed from Chicago to Yellowstone park and thence to Portland, Ore., over the Yellowstone trail, making such side trips as may be necessary to find the best roads. From Portland it will proceed to San Francisco and thence to Los Angeles. Returning to Chicago it will come over the Santa Fe trail, similarly investigating such variations to that route as may be found desirable.

Better Ford Brakes— Less Upkeep Expense

$2 a set

Every time your Ford brakes are relined, you pay from $4 to $5 for the labor charge alone. You keep paying that charge every few weeks as long as you continue to buy cheap, ordinary brake lining.

Why not pay a little more for White Stripe? Get the lining that lasts for thousands and thousands of miles.

White Stripe Brake Lining for Fords

Saves three or four installation charges. Only toughest, long fibre cotton—and 20% to 50% more of it—goes into the special White Stripe weave. An extra layer of wearing cords cover and protect the framework threads—giving added strength and wear. The special White Stripe treatment protects the lining from hot oil and friction. Keeps the fabric fresh and soft. Gives brakes you can depend on at less expense.

CAUTION—When you buy cheap brake lining or some "just as good" substitute, you bargain for trouble and constant relining expense.

Be sure you get White Stripe—the White Stripe trademark—the plain white line—is on every inch of the lining. You can't get the special White Stripe weave and treatment in in any other lining. Your dealer may offer you something else because of policy, but if you insist he will supply White Stripe.

Dwindling Coal Supply Menaces Motor Industry

Fear of Steel Shortage Adds to Detroit Strike Distress.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 12.—[Special.]—The coal and railroad strikes, unless adjusted within the next week or ten days, will work havoc among automobile plants, and no surprise will be shown if several of them are obliged to either close down entirely or at least get into "low" speed.

The Ford plant has less than a week's supply of coal on hand, and should this great workshop be forced to close, it will also mean the shutting down of other concerns dependent upon it for coke and gas. The Ford industries consume on an average 2,500 tons of coal daily. There is no question, and manufacturers do not try to conceal the fact, that every plant in Detroit and Michigan can see the bottom of its coal bins. Ford's recent effort to bring coal from the Kentucky mines over his own railroad, met failure when the president of the Louisville and Nashville railroad refused to allow Ford's coal trains to use the Louisville and Nashville tracks from the mines to the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton road.

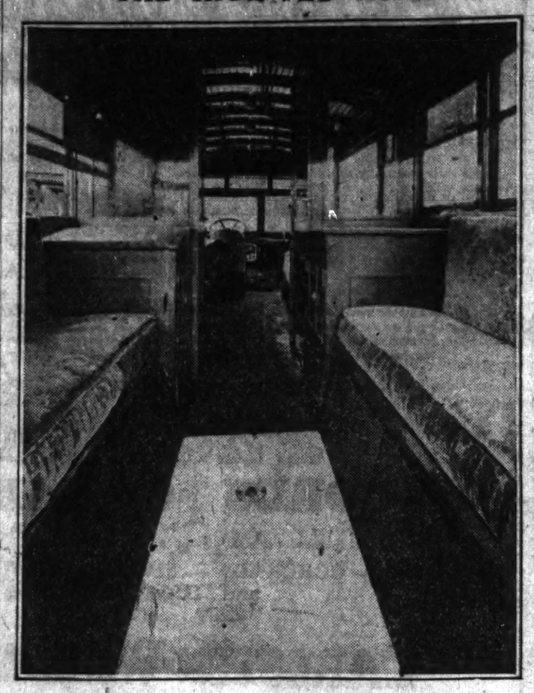
"Let Michigan and the automotive industry suffer with the rest," was the answer given by the Louisville and Nashville officials.

Apparently the automobile builders have decided to work at full speed until they are compelled to close down for want of fuel or railroad transportation for their finished product. Certainly they have shown no disposition to do otherwise up until the present time, but unless speedy relief is given it will be impossible to continue operations at the present high rate of speed for more than one more week.

In case the steel mills, on account of their inability to get a sufficient supply of coal, are compelled to shut down or at least curtail their supply of steel to the automobile industry, it will naturally have a serious effect upon the output. Inventories of both car and truck manufacturers are well balanced, but if steel is not to be had they can not continue indefinitely to turn out cars and trucks in large volume. Detroit and other Michigan automobile centers have not, to any great degree, felt the shortage of shipping facilities, but should such a condition arise, it would cause no great concern. The industry has learned from experience how to deliver its product by the famous driveways, although this involves considerable inconvenience. In the month of March, 1920, about 80,000 vehicles were driven from the Michigan plants into other states when railroad congestion was most acute.

Summed up, the most disturbing factor in the present situation is not lack of demand, but the possibility that the supplies of steel may be shut off. If steel is obtained in sufficient quantities, cars and trucks will go out, but if there is a serious slump in production it will be the direct result of inability to obtain supplies of essential material.

THE HIGHWAY HOME



Every convenience found in a modern bungalow has been included in this newest development of the automobile house, recently delivered by the General Motors Truck company to C. F. Rouze of Pontiac, Mich. The two long rows of seats, in addition to movable chairs, take care of fourteen people comfortably. At night the seats unfold to make beds. Kitchen utensils, a good sized stove and refrigerator are carried. Another unique equipment feature is a complete toilet, with bathtub and water running under pressure. The entire body is screened against flies and dust.

One noticeable effect of the numerous price reductions in passenger cars recently has been a break of several points in the motor stocks generally. Some financial writers are predicting a price war as a result of these reductions. Many dealers indicate their belief it is the beginning of keener competition than has ever before existed. From one eastern financial writer comes the statement that the condition is directed chiefly against the Durant and Studebaker productions, and that the next few months may see "a motor battle fought upon financial reserves and that the elimination of several companies, now operating upon too small a margin, may be brought about."

From Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car company, comes the statement, however, that it is quite incorrect to interpret the price readjustments as first moves of a price war. These readjustments, says Mr. Macauley, will not be general, but will be confined to these companies whose prices were named early in the year and before the trend of labor conditions and material became clearly apparent.

New Oil System.

Interest has been evidenced in motor car circles and among car owners in the new airplane system of motor lubrication. It has proved unusually efficient, the average mileage yield per quart of oil being well above 500 miles. It also has borne out the claims of its sponsors that it greatly reduces wear and tear on moving parts, thereby adding materially to the life of the motor.

Engineers of the Standard Motor Car company of Pittsburgh, are the first to apply the airplane system to the automobile. The oil is carried apart from the crankcase in a three gallon container anchored to the frame under the right front fender. Oil flows by gravity through a flexible tube to the crankcase, whence it is pumped upward to cylinders, bearings, rods and all other moving parts.

It then drops to the base of the engine and is pumped back into the container, being cooled and refiltered before again making its circuit through the motor.

Uncle Sam Pours $35,000,000 Extra Into Pavements

STATISTICS compiled by "Highways Information" Service, New York, show that for the first five months of 1922 a sum of $35,253,000 more has been awarded for road and street construction in the United States than for the corresponding period in 1921. In May, 1922, contracts let amounted to $9,626,000 more than the contracts let in May, 1921. The figures show that notwithstanding a late start this year the program of constructing better highways is progressing more rapidly than ever and that this favorable condition will continue until fall. Contracts awarded for road and street construction in the United States during the first five months of 1921 and 1922 were valued as follows:

January	$ 22,689,000	$ 17,397,000
February	13,578,000	18,074,000
March	29,504,000	38,820,000
April	49,487,000	46,539,000
May	63,426,000	52,596,000
Totals	$208,684,000	$173,426,000

The figures showed also that average prices, January to May, 1922, for road materials, were 20 per cent lower than for the same period of 1921.

In road building and street paving work the southern states are showing greater activity than at any time in their history. Contracts reported during the last four months aggregate in value about $40,000,000. Every state in the south is showing tremendous progress, especially in road improvement. Contracts awarded in the last four months include, in value, the following: Alabama, $1,870,000; Arkansas, $842,000; Florida, $4,800,000; Georgia, $780,000; Kentucky, $870,000; Louisiana, $932,000; Maryland, $966,000; Mississippi, $844,000; Missouri, $2,735,000; North Carolina, $7,750,000; Oklahoma, $1,975,000; South Carolina, $1,104,000; Tennessee, $833,000; Texas, $6,657,000; Virginia, $690,000; West Virginia, $4,523,000.

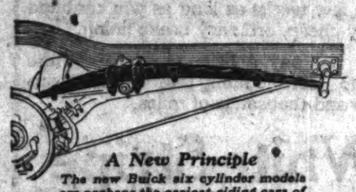
The Finest Model "45" Buick Ever Built



A New Principle
The new Buick six cylinder models are perhaps the easiest-riding cars of the day due to a distinctive development in cantilever spring construction

The 1923 Buick "45" has taken the country by storm. Always a favorite, this model reaches the highest pinnacle of value ever attained.

It is a beautiful car—it is luxurious—it is a mechanical masterpiece. Stand off and note the snappy lines, the higher hood, the full crown fenders, sturdy artillery wheels, drum type head and cowl lamps, the low khaki-lined top. Then sit in the car. Here is comfort equalled only in the costliest automobiles.

Look about you—the upholstery and trimming are of the finest quality, the instrument board is equipped with richly finished instruments, the control lever is at finger's end, the cowl ventilator control and windshield wiper are within easy reach.

And the chassis shows far-reaching improvements. Test the new rear cantilever springs—you will be amazed at the difference in riding comfort. Lock the handy transmission control and know that this feature, with others, gives Buick a low rating by insurance underwriters. Even the famous Buick Valve-in-Head motor shows important changes—higher cylinder block, larger connecting rods and pistons, larger crankshaft, with pressure feed to main bearings.

These are just a few of the sweeping improvements in the new Buick "45". From the newly designed radiator to the tail lamp with its novel Buick insignia the Buick "45" is a new and finer car—more than ever the standard of comparison.

The Buick Line for 1923 comprises fourteen models:

Four—7 Pass. Roadster, $865; 5 Pass. Touring, $885; 3 Pass. Coupe, $1175; 5 Pass. Sedan, $1395; 5 Pass. Touring Sedan, $1325. Six—7 Pass. Roadster, $1175; 5 Pass. Touring, $1195; 5 Pass. Sidewall Protection

Sidewall Protection—an exclusive feature

When you scrape the curb, travel through gravel, in ruts or down car tracks, your tire pays the penalty. It does unless it is a Corduroy Cord.

The sidewall protection of Corduroy Cords, with its armor of eight corrugations of resilient rubber, resists the action of these tire enemies. Result: much more mileage—at a lower cost per mile.

A few more select dealers can secure the Corduroy Cord franchise, providing their location is not in a district where we already have representation

FARM AND GARDEN

Community Gardens Promote Wealth, Health and Morals

By Frank Ridgway.

FIVE years' experience with community gardens has taught South Chicago business men and steel mill officials of the Pullman and Calumet districts the value of this project in Americanizing foreigners, keeping the town's back lots and alleys clean, and promoting thrift, health, and harmony among citizens. In their fenceless gardens in the steel mill districts, South Chicago gardeners have produced vegetables valued at more than $3,000 during the last five years. The vegetable bill of these men would average $16,000 a year if they had bought fresh products on the market.

City officials of South Chicago and those who have to do with crime suppose long enough this year to inspect their stock of good and bad citizens. They found that criminals were never found in the ranks of that great army of more than 300 South Chicago vegetable growers. Capt. Joseph Smith says his men find that the moral effect of community gardens is far reaching. His records show that the police have no trouble with children who work in gardens.

Improves Boys and Girls.

"Children who are brought into the station for delinquency are never of the gardening class," says the captain. "I notice great change in the handling of our child problem since community gardens were started here five years ago. Hundreds of children who used to play in the streets are now working in gardens. Our sanitary problems have been greatly lessened, too. Vacant lots and back yards that were once favorite spots for dump heaps are now covered with growing crops."

The captain, known to many South Chicagoans as Farmer Smith, grows enough vegetables for home use in his garden and always has a surplus for his neighbors.

Judge Howard Hayes of the South Chicago branch of the Municipal court says that working with vegetables, fruits, and flowers in the community gardens, has had much to do with improving the esthetic side of the boys and girls, and makes for better citizenship.

N. E. Christianson, a South Chicago business man, says the community gardens have done much to improve the physical aspects of the various neighborhoods in his district. "Several years ago, before this work was started, there were many spots that were hideous," he says. "They were dumps for garbage and refuse, but have since been changed into garden spots. This feature alone makes the effort well worth while."

Industrial chiefs, perhaps more than any others, have noticed the marked change brought about by the gardens. The opinion of J. F. Brown, chief civil engineer of the Illinois Steel company, is typical of many others. "The promotion of community gardens by the South Chicago Y. M. C. A. is a commendable work," he said. "It encourages industrious habits and keeps those so employed from spending their time in undesirable places. The gardens provide recreation and also give a financial return to our employes."

More than thirty acres, besides the hundreds of back yard gardens, are under cultivation in the South Chicago district. By draining and cultivating this land, that was once a swamp, more than 300 families grow enough vegetables in the community gardens to last them all summer, saving thousands of dollars. The plots are 25x125 feet, and through intensive cropping schemes or the handling of two or three plots many of the gardeners grow enough vegetables to last them the year around, canning the readily perishable products in the fall and storing the surplus root crops for winter. Some take several plots and grow sweet corn, using the roasting ears for home use and harvesting the stover for their milk cows.

Develops Neighborly Spirit.

It is common to see gardeners of many nationalities and of verious ages working in the same fields. L. B. Walker of the South Chicago Y. M. C. A., who is in immediate charge of the work, says that a good neighborly spirit is developed between people who come from many different countries.

Business men furnish the prizes and the board of education supplies the judges at the annual community vegetable show that is held by South Chicago gardeners every fall. The growers are already picking out their best specimens and speculating on the prizes they will win at the show, which will probably be held some time in September.

CHICAGO HIGH SCHOOL BOYS JUDGING LIVE STOCK.—"Learn by doing" is the slogan of the eighteen agricultural students of Parker High school, Chicago, who are taking a practical course in agriculture this summer at a camp on Edellen farm, owned by Thomas E. Wilson, near Lake Forest, Ill. The boys live in tents on the farm and work every day like regular farm hands. Live stock judging is only one of the things they are studying. They are shown judging three of Mr. Wilson's pure bred Shorthorn bulls.

Chi-Cook Fair to Hold a Milkmaids' Contest

If you have a hearty grip and are lucky enough to keep old bossy from kicking the pail out of your hand, you may win the milkmaid contest at the great Chi-Cook fair, Maywood, Ill., Aug. 26 to Sept. 4.

Julia Schifferer, Elgin, Ill., champion milkmaid, believes she can win the record for this section. She is willing to prove it and challenges all other fast milkers in Cook and neighboring counties to meet her in a contest at the Maywood fair on Checkerboard flying field.

Last May Julia made her first championship record when she competed with nine girls from Barrington, Hanover and Schaumburg townships at the Barrington festival. In 2 minutes 36 seconds she milked eight pounds and six ounces of milk, defeating Helen Gromer of Elgin by one pound.

She is 14 years old and has been helping milk on her father's farm since she was 9. For five years she has milked five cows every morning and evening.

Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools, and L. L. Heller, farm advisor, will have charge of the contest. Each division of the county will be represented by at least one milkmaid.

Cook County Fair at Palatine.

Arrangements have been started for the annual Cook county fair to be held at Palatine for five days, beginning Aug. 31. Horse racing, speed contests, and many other entertainment features will be introduced under the supervision of Walter Meakin. The fair's executive committee is made up of men from Chicago, Proviso, Maine, Wheeling, Barrington, Elk Grove, Palatine, New Trier, Niles, Evanston, Cicero, Thornton, Blue Island, Lemont, Lyons, and Jefferson.

Poultry Tips

The department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., has more than thirty different bulletins, dealing with all phases of poultry keeping, including breeds, management, housing, incubation, brooding, and culling. These books will be sent free to any person in the United States. That more and more people in city and country are becoming interested in poultry raising is indicated by the fact that the department of agriculture receives from fifty to seventy-five letters a day asking for poultry information.

Chicks that have to hustle for everything they eat are not likely to thrive. If good layers are to be picked from this season's pullets the flock must be fed liberally and kept in good shape.

Sept. 13 Is Soy Bean Day.

Northern Indiana farmers are planning to hold their soy bean day at A. E. Watson's farm, six miles south of Laporte, on Sept. 13. Leading farmers from eleven counties will attend, according to C. A. Buechner, county agricultural agent, who writes that this will be one of the most important events in the history of Laporte county.

Soy beans are being grown in a variety of ways in his county, and tours of inspection will be made by the farmers and expert agriculturists from various parts of Indiana. Six varieties of soy beans are growing in one field, to find out those best adapted to northern Indiana.

In another field oats were seeded on the soy bean land last year and alfalfa sown in the oats this year. Experiments are being conducted with practically every kind of soy bean and the results of these tests should be of practical value to farmers in this section of the middle west.

High School Boys Prove Apt Pupils Back on the Farm

"BACK to the farm" is the slogan of eighteen Chicago high school boys who are attending a six weeks' summer camp at Edellen farm, the well known estate opened by Thomas E. Wilson at Lake Forest, Ill. Every boy, city bred and broke, is out to do constructive work for the owner and for himself.

"Jack London would have termed this 'the call of the wild,'" said G. L. Noble, secretary of the national committee on boys' and girls' club work, who visited the Wilson farm recently. "These boys are willfully exposing themselves to farm conditions and are not out for a few weeks of idle leisure at a luxurious Lake Forest country home. The Thomas E. Wilson holding is one of the few country estates which is being operated on an honest to goodness practical basis and which is paying its owner a profit."

Getting a New Viewpoint.

F. B. Post, agricultural instructor at the Parker High school, in charge of the boys' camp and originator of this practical idea, says it is surprising to see how the boys take to farming. They learn quickly how to carry on farm operations and soon become hardened to regular work. He finds they are getting a new viewpoint of farming as a vocation, even though they may not follow it.

They work in the fields from 7 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, and from 4 until 6 they study or listen to lectures. Scientific and basic reasons are given for each day's operation.

Map Out the Farm.

The first job of these young farmers was to map out the 900 acre farm, showing the location of the buildings and fields and the crop rotation plan—a practical lesson in farm management. Plowing, planting and harvesting both field and vegetable garden crops followed in their regular order, furnishing a new job and a new lesson every day.

A few days ago when a group of agriculturists visited the farm the boys, who might have been riding their bikes on boulevards or playing ball in alleys, were helping bale rye straw. As they work from day to day they gather up all the weeds from the Canada thistle to rag weed, classify them, and write up the life history and means of control of each one of the pests.

Learn to Judge Cattle.

Being a firm believer in a well balanced program of live stock and crops in order that soil fertility may be maintained, Mr. Wilson has a large herd of pure bred live stock to be used by the boys in their judging work. They have ninety head of Shorthorn cattle to size up and catalogue good and bad points, besides Clydesdale horses, Ayrashire cattle, White Orpington chickens, ducks, turkeys, saddle horses, and hogs. Live stock judging has been emphasized in the course, and the boy who asked to see the "Bull Durham" breed of cattle when he first arrived at Edellen farm, now knows "there ain't no such animal," except those painted on billboards.

The camp is self sustaining. Each boy is given a regular wage according to his ability as a farm hand and his board and other incidental expenses are charged against his earnings. Although strict camp regulations, army style, are enforced from reveille to taps, the boys have their share of fun—pitching horseshoes, playing baseball, soccer ball, duck on the rock, and indoor baseball. The tenderfoots with sore muscles tune up the radio outfit while the others play their games. Mr. Wilson "set 'em up" to a T-bone steak the Fourth of July. The camp farmers have fallen heir to the job of kitchen police and washing their own clothes.

The success of the camp this year forecasts the operation of similar ones on a larger scale next summer.

Garden Notes

Clipping grass after it stops growing in the fall is detrimental to the lawn. A long growth of grass left on serves as a protective blanket in winter. If the grass is cut late in the season, leave the clippings on the lawn.

Questions are continually being asked about the proper time to transplant peonies. The most experienced gardeners claim they have the best luck when they set them during September. They are sometimes set the last week in August.

Fall is the best time to plant Japanese lilies, particularly the gold banded type. Lilium auratum and the speciosum are good varieties.

Type 61 Achieves Greatest Success in Cadillac History

IT was almost inevitable that Type 61 should bear out its reputation as the greatest Cadillac by establishing a remarkable sales record.

That much was apparent immediately following its introduction, when Type 61 enjoyed a reception such as is seldom accorded an automobile.

But in the last few months this initial enthusiasm for the new Cadillac quickened to a demand that was little short of phenomenal.

Seemingly the entire public had become intensely aware of Type 61 superiority, and sales attained a volume which promised to surpass all previous Cadillac records.

As month followed month, and the unprecedented demand for Type 61 increased, that promise became a fact and a certainty.

Now with the figures compiled, it is possible to announce that Cadillac in 1922 has achieved the greatest success in all its history.

We believe that this unparalleled advance in Cadillac business, and the continuing vogue of Type 61 among buyers of high grade cars, can mean but one thing:

It signifies that the public considers Type 61 the greatest motor car value in the world.

WANT TAX BILLS TO FIX RENTS IN SKYSCRAPERS

Will End Waste of Funds by Politicians.

Tax bills on large office buildings will decide the total amount of rent to be paid by tenants, with a proportionate increase or decrease, as the taxes dictate. This is the goal toward which the National Association of Building Owners and Managers is working.

By inserting a "tax participation" clause in all office building leases, the association avers, landlords will be rid of the tax problems and tenants will receive a liberal education in prevalent extravagance of municipal governments which will endow tenants with a decided interest in the use of their ballots in municipal elections.

Tax Clauses Here.

"Property taxes is one item in operating expenses which cannot be accurately estimated for any long period ahead," states Lewis B. Ermeling, executive secretary of the association. "And because of this condition, building managers have been unable to estimate accurately what total operating costs would be for their buildings. In Chicago the subject of who pays the increased taxes has been given consideration for some time, and some Chicago buildings started to use a tax participation clause in all new leases.

GEORGE M. OSBORN.

"The McCormick and Lumber Exchange buildings have had a tax participation clause in their leases for two years. Contrary to general belief, they have not encountered difficulty in closing leases with this clause. The use of a tax participation clause has merit, and is fair to both parties. Present rentals (based on accurate knowledge of costs) should not be increased by adding an arbitrary amount to cover the unknown item of property taxes if the tenant will agree to pay his share of the tax increase. The McCormick and Lumber Exchange buildings report that they have used the clause successfully.

"Aldis Browne has used a tax participation clause for the Railway Exchange, the Tower, and other buildings on all leases made for a term of over five years. This practice was started two years ago and the tenants have accepted it quite readily.

"George M. Osborn has used the tax participation clause in the New York Life building, of which he is manager, without opposition when the leases were signed by the tenants, and without objection or default when the tax increase payments were due."

Will End Political Waste.

"The justification for such a clause rests on the fact that taxes constitute the single element of the cost of space more susceptible to control by the tenant than by the landlord," writes Mr. Osborn in a bulletin just dispatched to members. "Labor and material costs, and to a lesser degree interest and depreciation charges, may be determined within rather definite limits by the wisdom and efficiency, or the reverse, exercised by the landlord in planning, operating, and bargaining. But it is in reality the tenants—tenants of one class or another comprising a majority of the voting population—who determine the character and cost of government and the consequent taxes levied on the landlord's property.

LEWIS B. ERMELING.

The political effect of widespread use of the tax participation principle is the best argument in favor of its adoption in all leases. No more effective curb on the prevalent extravagances of municipal governments could be devised. The demagogic oligarchies today controlling many of our large cities are founded, primarily, on the inability or refusal of the mass of the voters to comprehend either the magnitude of the existing abuses of governmental powers or the direct and immediate reflection of those abuses upon the welfare of the voters themselves. Possibly the most urgent political necessity of today is for an awakening of the electorate to the dangers attendant upon its indifference.

Property owners constitute but a small proportion of the electorate, while tenants of one class or another comprise a large and controlling proportion. The tax participation principle would at once endow these tenants with a vital, financial, and direct interest in the use of their votes.

Meets Abnormal Conditions.

The tax participation clause, in so far as it deals only with increases or decreases from some assumed "normal" amount of taxes, is to that extent an expedient designed to meet abnormal conditions. Logically, "tax participation" should provide for payment by the tenant, as an item distinct from his rent, of the entire pro rata amount of the general taxes apportionable to his space. Such will probably be the ultimate development of the clause.

While all very long term leases, particularly "ground" leases, provide that the tenant shall pay all taxes and legal imposts against the property, heretofore few if any office building or apartment leases have included provisions intended to protect the landlord against tax increases or to give the tenant proportionate benefit of tax decreases. Up to the last four or five years little necessity for such a provision seems to have existed in practice, since in most communities the increase in taxes from year to year has been comparatively small and the rate of increase fairly regular. Consequently, for leases of from one to five years in term the average tax factor in the rent could be estimated with a fair degree of precision, and the rent based accordingly.

Making a Factory Building Easy to Look At

One of the most attractive factory buildings in the city is now under way at Logan boulevard and Holly street, from plans by Architect David Saul Klafter, for E. Edelmann & Co., automobile supplies. It will be of concrete and steel, and will contain 45,000 square feet of floor space. The owners will move from their present plant, at 469 East Ohio street, by Nov. 1.

MIDSUMMER HAS NO EFFECT ON LEASE ACTIVITY

Midsummer has had no effect on the briskness of industrial and business house leases, which sometimes decline at this time of the year. The demand for space seems to keep step with early spring business, as is evidenced by deals just completed.

Among the important leases is that taken by Dayton Keith, distributor of the Wills Sainte Claire car, from Jacob Franke for the two story building at 2328-30 South Michigan avenue. The building, which is being remodeled at a cost of $25,000, was rented for a ten year term at a total rental of $120,000. H. H. Harper & Co. were the brokers.

The six story building on the southwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Franklin street is being remodeled for tenants, three of which will pay $57,000 for a term of years. The firms are M. Gimbel & Son, wholesale hatters; Granert & Rothschild, wholesale men's clothing, and Mayer Bros., manufacturers of boys' clothing. The lessor is the Syndicate Building corporation. John R. Magill & Co. represented all participants.

The Graham Paper company of St. Louis has leased from Bertha Korup, et al., the five story and basement brick building at 440-500 South Canal street, for an eight year term at an indicated $51,150. The building will be the third warehouse operated by the company in Chicago.

The northeast corner of 22d and Fisk streets has been leased by Ziff Bros., wholesale bottle jobbers, for a five year term at a reported $25,000. The property, which is improved with several one story structures, will be remodeled at the expense of the tenant. E. N. Duerlein & Co. handled the deal.

The Selfer Carpey Shops, Inc., chain store operators, have leased from Annie Miloslowsky and Louis Kraus the one story store building at 3126 Lincoln avenue for fifty-seven months at a term rental of $14,850. Mark Levy & Bros. represented all parties.

COMPLETE NEW M'VICKER'S IN 100 DAY RACE

Announcement of the completion of the new McVicker's theater, just 100 days after dismantling of the old structure was started, was made yesterday by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, the owners. Formal opening of the new theater will take place on about Sept. 11.

The old building was closed on April 30 and the following morning the first brick was dislodged. Yesterday the ceiling and wall decorations were completed along with the wall tapestry. The canopy and electric sign is up and the seats and carpeting will be completed within a week. The theater will seat 3,000.

Plan Another Subdivision Adjoining Park Ridge

Opening of an addition to the Hulbert Highlands subdivision will be effected soon as the result of the purchase by Thomas H. Hulbert of fifty acres of land north of Kenilworth avenue and east of Park Ridge. The lots will measure sixty and ninety feet in width. The district in which the property lies was annexed to Chicago at the election last June.

431 ACRES NET $1,185,250 IN CALUMET DEAL

Nickel Plate Road Is the Buyer.

The first sequence of the liquidation of the Calumet and Chicago Canal and Dock company to a syndicate headed by the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland for $1,687,500, which started an industrial boom in the Calumet region, took place yesterday with the purchase by the New York, Chicago and St. Louis railroad of 431 acres of land.

The price paid was $1,185,250. The land fronts 700 feet north on Ninety-fifth street and extends south to One Hundred and Twelfth street. The road's right of way is the eastern boundary and more than a mile and a half of its west frontage is Lake Calumet, the remainder being extended along Dorchester avenue, and with innumerable jottings in all directions. The yards of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad extend along the west side of the double right of way.

Foreshadows Improvement.

The purchase of this property by the Nickel Plate road foreshadows the extent of the development planned for the district. Officials of the road who took over the deed explained that the purchase was made to care for the increasing demands of the Calumet district for freight yard facilities and to meet present urgent requirements.

No Financing Contemplated.

It was stated that the road wishes to put itself in line for whatever the future may realize in the way of harbor development for Lake Calumet. Plans in the making call for the expenditure of millions for harbor improvements.

The sale of the property was handled through Hodge, Chandler & Nicholson, sales managers for the Calumet and Chicago Canal and Dock company. It was stated that no financing is contemplated by the sellers as the development of the land will finance all plans of the company.

North Side Motors Co. to Have $125,000 Salesroom

Erection of a new automobile salesroom and service station for the North Side Motors company at 5719-23 Broadway will be started at once, according to H. J. Rosenberg, president. There will be an elaborate frontage to the salesroom measuring two stories in height. The remainder of the structure, which will cost, together with the price of the land, $125,000, will be one story high. A. H. Magill negotiated the deal.

SAYS PRIORITY ABUSE CRIPPLES ALL BUILDING

Fair Freight Car Allotment Is Advocated.

Nonabuse of the priority orders of the interstate commerce commission so that the building industry will not be given a serious blow is urged by E. J. Brunner, editor of the American Contractor.

With the opening of the mines, Mr. Brunner argues, the demand for open top cars to handle coal will be tremendous, and unless the American public awakens to the fact that the construction industries must have enough cars to carry materials building activities in the entire United States will be placed at a standstill.

"A sharp ax hangs over the neck of the construction industry in the shape of priority orders," says Mr. Brunner. "If this ax falls the incalculable wrong has been done and the layer of 1922's golden eggs has ended its laying so the nation's broth may be warmed by coal.

Abuses of 1920.

"We must never forget that former car priorities have not been wholly productive of good results. While we know that the coal situation in 1920 was possibly more aggravated than any other time in the history of the country, the priority orders issued by the interstate commerce commission for the purpose of relieving conditions did in no sense do so. On the contrary they complicated matters by virtue of the fact that certain elements took advantage of the situation, and speculation resulted at the expense of honest construction activity. Car numbers were bought and sold and coal cars were held at terminals until the terminals were absolutely blocked to traffic.

"The speculative coal men secured possession of a large tonnage of coal, moved it to the terminals and held it there under demurrage for sale or reconsignment. The invoices and bills of lading changed hands from one speculator to another to the detriment of honest coal dealers and to the strangled construction industry.

Petition Relief.

"The Associated General Contractors of America go on record as being favorable to priority for coal for government uses, public utilities, medical supplies, and domestic consumption. But they have petitioned the commission to the effect:

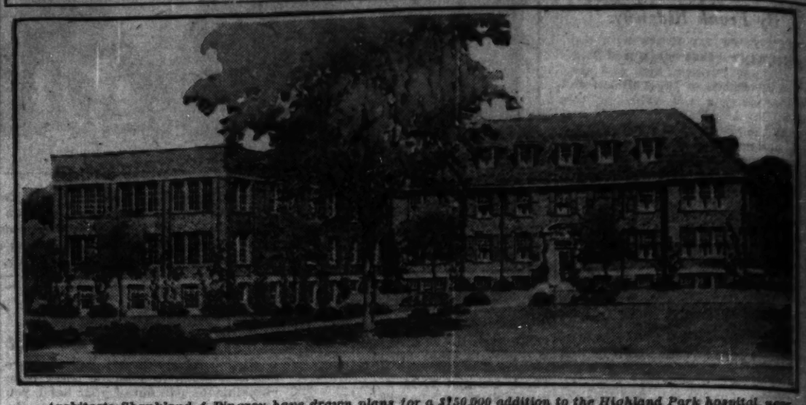
"With the enormous demand for coal which will accompany the reopening of the mines so few cars will be available for construction materials, under the terms of service order No. 23, that four-fifths of all construction projects east of the Mississippi river will be obliged to close down.

"Your petitioner respectfully prays that service order No. 23 be amended so as to provide that after the railroads have supplied open top equipment sufficient to carry the fuel required by the first four priority classes enumerated in said order that they be directed to supply open top equipment without preference to all other commodities, including coal."

"F. W. Dodge statistics on contracts awarded stand mute evidence of the hurt already suffered by the construction industry. For the week ending July 28 the valuation of contracts awarded east of the Missouri and north of the Ohio river was, in round numbers, $90,000,000. For the week ending Aug. 5 the valuation was only $60,000,000.

"There is no chance of present activity in building to continue, but why kill off the remaining chance? Chambers of commerce, all business organizations should watch for abuse of priority privileges and should do everything to help as much as possible the sustaining of construction activity."

Addition to Highland Park Hospital



Architects Shankland & Pingrey have drawn plans for a $150,000 addition to the Highland Park hospital, near the Exmoor Country club, work on which will start in the fall. It will be 40x150 and will contain forty-two beds, giving the hospital a total of sixty. The second floor will be devoted to maternity cases. The first part, shown above, with mansard roof, was built in 1918. Walter H. Baldwin is president of the hospital association. Other members of the executive committee are C. T. Boynton, Richmond Dean, S. M. Hastings, H. H. Hitchcock, George Pick, and E. V. Price. The committee already has raised $60,000, and a drive will be started in a week or so to raise the balance needed, $90,000.

Beg Your Pardon

The price of two apartment buildings at 7108-18 and 7120-28 Merrill avenue, reported in the real estate column last Wednesday, through a typographical error, was given at $230,000 subject to $210,000. It should have read $330,000, subject to $210,000. Also the name of Richard Fischer, attorney in the deal, should have been included.

Plan Co-Operative Flats for 615-31 Addison Street

Organization of a corporation to take over the twenty-seven apartment building at 615-31 Addison street on the co-operative plan is announced by H. H. Decker & Co., who recently acquired the property. The building will be sold to the tenants for $260,000, subject to $100,000. The structure adjoins the Pine Grove coöperative building which was taken over by its tenants last fall.

NEW FILLING STATION.

A new filling station is to be installed on the northeast corner of Roosevelt road and Clinton street by the Standard Oil company. The property was purchased from Charles O. Fetscher for an indicated $100,000.

FAKE BRICK IS MENACE TO LIFE, SAYS SCIENTIST

Warning to home builders against forms of substitute brick as a menace to human life is contained in a report submitted by Prof. R. H. Danforth of the Case School of Applied Science of Cleveland, after several laboratory tests. Prof. Danforth says he has found imitation brick made of sawdust and cinders bound together with various types of cementing substances.

Prof. Danforth states that he recently tested "brick" made of cinders and lime. His finding was that an average pressure of only 652 pounds was necessary to break one in half when supported at the ends, a real brick requiring an average pressure of 1,231 pounds to break it. The imitation brick also showed such an affinity for water that they absorbed over 23 per cent, and two specimens out of six swelled and bulged and developed cracks during immersion.

ARCHITECT BUYS APARTMENTS.

Helen R. Hecht, wife of Albert R. Hecht, architect, has purchased from Mary Jane Christiana street for a reported $87,500, subject to $58,500. Chulkow & Sachs were brokers. Herman Herson acting as attorney for the seller.

85 Years in the Heating Business

R & B Men are Specialists

Richardson Smokeless Boilers
One of many famous R & B Products

The real cost of a boiler is not its f. o. b. factory cost, but its cost on the job. Anybody can haul an R & B Boiler, so loading and hauling costs are low. The sectional construction permits erection at any time. Can be put through any standard width of doors. No need to put in the boiler when you dig the foundation.

Remarkably efficient. Natural fire travel and draft eliminates excessive heights in chimneys. Long smoke travel, without obstruction to flames, aids combustion to perfection point and uses maximum heat from fuel.

During the process of coking, gases are drawn back into a large chamber in front of bridgewall which has two portholes at the top, making it impossible for gases to explode. An air ejector admits air which is warmed as it passes over bridgewall and gives practically perfect combustion. That is why the boiler is called smokeless.

Boiler can be cleaned if ever necessary. Large firedoor, big enough for a man to enter, makes replacement of grates easy. Economical of fuel; large range of capacities.

When You Want an R & B Man
Phone
Franklin 2866

The man who wants to buy a heating plant from a manufacturer who he is sure will be in business ten years from now, will be interested to know that we have been making heating equipment for over 85 years.

We have learned a lot in that time. We finished experimenting years ago. We learned that nothing pays so well as a good heating system, well adapted to the building it is in. Today, we sell nothing else—and we have established the "R & B Man" service, which we believe is the most important free service ever offered to builders in and near Chicago.

Unbiased Heating Advice

"R & B Men" are specialists. They know heating. They have spent their lives at it. They know all kinds of heating—for we make all kinds—and they advise any builder on the type of heating plant for his building.

Call an "R & B Man." Show him your plans. Tell him your problems. There are four good ways of heating, one of which is better adapted for your building than all of the others. Call an "R & B Man" and save hundreds of dollars, possibly. For our men can choose for you from the merits of the following systems:

Warm Air

Its initial cost is the smallest of all systems. Warm air provides healthful heat; for it operates by means of the continual circulation of fresh, warmed air. It is adjustable to mild or severe weather. It is adapted to the usual house. Its cost of operation is low. It is economical of fuel and repairs.

Steam

Initial cost is more than for warm air installations, but is less than for other water systems. The pressure and temperature necessary to create steam make it a powerfully driven heat. It will heat the usual building, and it will heat a whole group of buildings.

Vapor Vacuum Pressure

The happy medium between steam and hot water. It is adapted to any type of house. It consumes less coal than either. It is distinguished by the accuracy and ease with which it can be controlled, and thus is equally effective in severe, changeable and mild weather.

Hot Water

Hot water heating requires larger pipes and radiators than steam. This makes a greater first cost, but assures a comfortable amount of warmth at all times. It operates with little attention, and its whole equipment is very durable. It is noted for economy of fuel. Will provide for any number of rooms.

Get an "R & B Man" to help you choose between these systems. Call on us for estimates or advice if you want anything in the following lines:

Co-operative Apartments for the North Shore

Plans to start the erection of a nine story cooperative apartment building with hotel service on the shore line near the outskirts of Kenilworth on about Oct. 1 were announced yesterday. The building is to cost about $1,600,000, according to the Beach Manor Real Estate Improvement corporation, which was organized for the purpose. Under the plan each lessee will also be a lessor. Operating expenses of the building will be paid by the community shops and stores on the ground floor of the structure, which will be owned by the owner-tenants. The following directors of the organization were elected yesterday: Edward C. Ryan, E. A. Burroughs, Patrick McArdle, Dr. G. L. Wagner, and Mrs. William H. Bender.

RAILROAD NOTES

Car loadings last week showed a general falling off, according to officials of roads operating from Chicago and St. Louis. The equipment of some roads is beginning to suffer from lack of attention, and the coal strike moreover is affecting many industries producing large tonnage so that taking all things into consideration the week showed a reactionary trend in rail business. Officials of southern roads report a smaller movement of grain to the gulf ports than at this time last year. The cotton movement is about normal, the general merchandise freight keeping up well.

The interstate commerce commission instituted an investigation to determine the reasonableness of action of the Indiana public utilities commission in fixing milk and cream express rates within that state. The federal commission pointed out that by its decision of 1920 it had authorized the increase of express rates on milk and cream by 20 per cent and said that subsequently the Indiana commission refused to allow the American Express company similar increases.

The Eastern Texas Railroad company was granted authority to discontinue operations and dismantle its tracks in a decision handed down in the Federal court at Austin by Judge Duval West of San Antonio. The decision was rendered on the ground that the road has operated at a net loss, and to compel it to continue operations would result in confiscation of its property.

The Seaboard Air Line was granted permission by the interstate commerce commission to assume liability for the payment of the interest and principal of $3,000,000 in equipment trust certificates. The securities will furnish funds to rebuild and buy new equipment for the railroad.

The city of Denver, through its official representatives, will urge a consolidation of the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad, the Denver and Salt Lake [Moffat] railroad and the Burlington at a hearing to be conducted some time between Sept. 15 and Nov. 1 by the interstate commerce commission.

The Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia railroad asked permission to extend its main line from the present terminus at Gadsden, Ala., a distance of thirty-four miles. The railroad explained it was desired to make a connection either with the Seaboard Air Line at Odenville, or a connection with the Central of Georgia at Margaret, both in Alabama, and asked the right to make either one of these points the terminus of the proposed extension.

TOBACCO CLIQUE SELLS INTEREST IN M. WARD & CO.

BY O. A. MATHER.

For several days rumors have been circulated in Wall and La Salle streets to the effects that a change would take place in control of Montgomery Ward & Co., and that "an important announcement" would be forthcoming next week.

It may be authoritatively stated that there will be no change in the control of the Chicago mail order house nor any consolidation with any other company. In fact, the Chicago-New York banking interests which have held a majority interest in the common stock of Montgomery Ward & Co. have increased their holdings by the purchase of 75,000 additional shares from the Duke-Whelan interests. It is understood the price paid for this block of stock was $22 a share and that the deal was concluded yesterday.

Present Control Strengthened.

As the result of this deal it is believed that the Duke-Whelan interests, including the United Retail Stores, now have practically divested themselves of all interest in the Chicago concern. It was the belief of Chicago bankers that whatever holdings of stock held by the Duke-Whelan group that were not sold in yesterday's deal have been disposed of in the market through the "pool" operations which recently have driven the market price to around $25 a share.

The Chicago-New York banking interests now hold about 700,000 shares of Montgomery-Ward common stock and in addition have under cantrol about 300,000 additional shares. This constitutes more than 80 per cent of the common stock outstanding, so there can be no question of control.

Republic Motor Truck Plan.

The bankers representing the bondholders of the Republic Motor Truck company and the creditors of the company have reached an agreement on the financial reorganization of the company. Details of the plan were not made public yesterday, but it was said that an official statement would probably be issued early next week.

Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman of the New York Trust company, representing the bondholders, said that the plan agreed on "would place the company in a strong financial position and assure its safe and continued operation." The only statement issued stated that an agreement was reached under which ample working capital will be provided for carrying on the business.

GRAIN MARKETS LACK SUPPORT AND GO LOWER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Lack of aggressive support rather than any material pressure was responsible for a break in all grains to new low figures for the season yesterday. Scattered liquidation was in evidence at times as tired longs let go, but in the main the break was due to the markets sinking under their own weight. Wheat closed with net losses of ⅝@1c, while corn was off ¼@1¼c, oats ⅜@⅝, and rye unchanged to ⅜c lower. Land finished with a loss of 5@7½c and short ribs 12½c.

Grain values were on the down grade the greater part of the week and numerous stop loss orders were uncovered. The general run of news was of a depressing character and with a lack of speculative interest and hedging pressure sentiment became decidedly bearish. At the last wheat showed 2⅝@3½c under the finish of the previous week while corn was off 3½@5½c, oats 2½@2⅝c, and rye 2@2¼c. Cancellations of export orders and the break in hogs affected provisions and lard closed with a loss of 15@22½c, and short ribs 15c.

September wheat went to a premium over the December, due to apprehension on the part of shorts as the result of a spreading of the rail strike. Lack of motive power is curtailing the movement in all sections of the country. Export business was not large and premiums on spot here little changed. The rally which came toward the close was due mainly to week end evening up on the part of shorts. Sentiment on the whole remains bearish.

Corn Undertone Easy.

Corn and oats showed an easy undertone, and while September corn acted independent of the new crop deliveries, due to persistent short covering on the rail strike, it had little effect on general sentiment. Later remains bearish, with a lack of speculative support, an outstanding feature. Country offerings to arrive are light, as interior shippers are having a hard time in filling the contracts they already have on hand.

Rye dull and easier, with wheat. Houses with seaboard connections were moderate buyers at times, while the northwest sold. No. 2 on track brought 2c over July.

Provisions Lower.

Scattered selling of provisions more than offset the strength in hogs and prices averaged lower. Cash trade was only fair. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregates 2,885,000, against 2,735,000 last year. Prices follow:

PRODUCE MARKETS

Good supplies of fruits and vegetables were on the market Saturday, with trade liberal. Butter, eggs, and poultry moved fairly at previous prices. Potatoes sold at 10@20c per 100 lbs decline. Arrivals increased to 66 cars.

A tieup of the railroads would leave the trade and consumers with only a few days' supply of fruits. There are ample stocks of butter, eggs, and poultry in cold storage.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Wheat crop is splendid throughout this territory," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Aistrin & Co. from Winnipeg. "Ripening fast. Some early fields being harvested. Canadian crop is made and I do not think any important reduction will be made from any cause. If weather continues favorable Manitoba will be marketing wheat by Sept. 1."

In Pembina county, N. D., yields of 35 to 40 bu per acre are being reported for spring wheat. Oats range from 45 to 70 bu and rye 50 to 60 bu. Near Gretna, Canada, several wheat fields returned 41 bu per acre to 63 lb grain.

Cutting of early wheat has started around Nakomis, Sask., according to K. W. Kinyon in his report to Jackson Bros. & Co., and it will be general next week. No black rust and very little sawfly. Crop is somewhat spotted due to dry weather earlier in the season.

WORLD'S-GRAIN MARKET-NEWS

Lowering of grain prices to new levels does not appear to bring any more buying from various sources as the local trading element see it. In wheat the trade appeared as bearish as ever and some seem to think that the turning point is not at hand. Hedging pressure was regarded as heavier, both in September and December. Seaboard exporters, foreigners, and shorts were the buyers on the break, causing only a small rally. Prices have been on the down grade, with but few reactions for a week, but this does not appear to change sentiment.

Buying of September wheat, corn, and oats by local traders in the main was to cover shorts, fearing a general tieup of the western railroads. It helped wheat and corn and rye, but was without effect on oats, due to the belief that the large stocks here will suffice for any demand that may come despite the fact that the price was the lowest in years.

December corn, although bought by a few of the largest shorts, met sufficient pressure to force prices to 6¼c under September, the widest discount so far. Reduction in stocks here, owing to lighter receipts, makes shorts in September nervous and good crop prospects encourages selling of the new crop futures.

Commission houses and traders continue to tell their customers and friends that grain prices are going lower, hence the buying power in the market is reduced to the lightest in years.

Chicago elevators loaded out 6,467,000 bu grain for the week ended Friday night. This included 3,209,000 bu wheat and 2,582,000 bu corn. Boats are under charter for 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 bu to load this week.

The trade has it that leading holders of wheat who have been favorable to the buying side of late have been the largest sellers of September and December for the last few days. Their selling yesterday was said by pit traders to be heavier than on any other day.

All futures of oats declined to the lowest since 1912. August oats were 29¾c; September, 30¾c; December, 33c, and May, 36½c.

Despite the car and motive power shortage of most western roads, arrivals of grain at Chicago and primary markets last week were above the average for this period of the last five years.

Four states, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, lead in rye production. Their aggregate crop is 52,752,000 bu, out of the total of 79,600,000 bu for the country. Last year they raised 32,587,000 bu out of a 58,000,000 bu crop.

A belief that the proposed Canadian wheat board will be dropped in view of the failure to obtain competent men to handle its affairs prevails amongst some of the Winnipeg traders. This view was responsible for a broadening in the speculative trade there during the day with exporters buying the October.

The barge canal elevator at New York, with a capacity of 2,000,000 bu, is expected to open for business tomorrow for barge business, and within a short time will be ready for ships. Charges will be ⅜c per bu for elevation and 15 days free storage.

"Financially crippled buyers abroad have dictated wheat prices," said William C. Weigand of the J. Rosenbaum Grain company. "So long as the world's surplus proves sufficient their purchasing power will remain dominating."

The New York Times.

New York, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—For the financial community today's hours of business ended, like many other days in the last fortnight, with almost complete lack of knowledge of just what action had been taken at the important labor conferences, yet with certainty that this information would be made public not many hours after the closing of the market.

People do not often look to a week-end market, especially in midsummer, for selection of financial impressions controlling the outlook; and today's inactivity suggested little except completely suspended judgment. On the stock market the day's changes in prices were fairly divided between advances and declines, mostly of negligible importance.

Hope and Strength Prevail.

At the end of a week in which, as in the week preceding, the drift of financial markets has indicated strength, not weakness, and hopefulness rather than despondency, it is natural to take account of the situation which would now exist if the labor struggle had not occurred in its present form or had been greatly settled.

The influences which would then have governed financial settlement and financial values are easily determined; they would be the remarkably abundant yield now indicated for the harvest, the presence of orders in the steel trade, the increasing railway traffic, the unexpectedly vast paying off of the "frozen credits," the distinct improvement of business conditions in the south and west, the surplus reserve of the country's banking system, and the consequent certainty of continued easy money.

No Evidence of Alarm.

This is a combination which, under ordinary circumstances, presumably would have insured financial hopefulness and rising markets. To what extent it has been counter balanced as an immediate influence by the possibilities of the labor deadlock was perhaps fairly measured by the halt which has occurred in the financial markets; a pause, however, accompanied by no outward evidence of reaction or misgiving.

As evidence of changing sentiment, today's foreign exchange market was more positive. Further recovery in French exchange brought the rate up to the price of a week before. Sterling regained most of its decline from the week's highest rate. The cabled statement of Great Britain's foreign trade in July showed substantial increases in exports over recent months and considerable reduction of imports.

Decrease in Bank Holdings.

The statement of actual condition of the clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $9,881,68 in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $819,990 from last week.

Loans and discounts decreased $52,205,000 and cash dropped $675,000. Net deposits fell off $52,994,000. Circulation decreased $70,000. Government changes were about $12,000,000 lower. Details of the statement follow, with comparisons:

FINANCIAL NOTES

The fact that the railway executives, in their session Friday, chose to negotiate a secret meeting with President Harding before telling the public about the possibilities of settlement, was held in railway quarters as indicative of a termination of the strike next week some time. While the proposed settlement is expected to call for some relaxation in the restoration of seniority rights, the returning workers will be taken on as new men, but will be gradually restored to their former standing in due course. Just what the position of the excess employes would be, was not mentioned by the professional clairvoyants of Wall street.

Steel prices continue upward and further advances are predicted in the trade. The average price of eight leading products was quoted at $48.11 a ton last week, an advance of $1.09 a ton, the gain being due to the rise in the price of pig iron, steel plates, beams and bars. The current level compares with a low of $42.12 established in the latter part of February, that level being the low point reached following the long period of declining steel prices which started in August, 1920, when the average stood at $85.02 a ton. Although finished steel and pig iron prices have been advancing moderately since February, the rise has been more rapid during the last month because of the coal situation.

In a normal year the automobile industry generally witnesses a rush of buying in the spring, followed by a falling off in demand around the first of July. Such a movement was witnessed this year, but the falling off in demand has not been as large as in other years, according to figures on production for July as furnished by the trade. A total of 246,000 cars and trucks were produced last month, according to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This is a record for any corresponding month in the history of the industry and the third largest of any month on record.

The report of the federal trade commission on its finding in connection with the recent investigation of the pending steel merger, is expected to be made public tomorrow, according to reports in the financial district yesterday. The report is expected to cover both combinations, namely, the Bethlehem Steel-Lackawanna Steel consolidation, and the Midvale Steel and Ordnance-Republic Iron and Steel-Inland Steel merger. It is generally expected that the report will be in favor of plans of those interested in the consolidations. There was a sharp advance in steel stocks. Lackawanna Steel gained 1¾ points in addition to a 2 point rain on Friday. Bethlehem Steel "B" rose 1¾ and Republic Steel was up ¾.

Probably one of the greatest dangers to be found in a currency system which is more or less inflated is the damage it causes to entirely innocent peoples when conditions in the market or within the country bring about an advance. Within four months the Czecho-Slovakia crown has advanced from 19 to 31 centimes, while the German mark has declined to new low levels. The result has been a serious check to trade and industry in Czecho-Slovakia, with many mills required to lay off hands. It is reported that Germany has been able to recapture markets in Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary and Roumania which Czecho-Slovakia naturally secured after the war.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Aug. 9 by 200 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $900,276,000, compared with $967,385,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $900,276,000, compared with $816,952,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Reorganization of the Temtor Corn and Fruit Products company at Granite City, Ill., will be effected by the formation of a new company to be known as the Midwest Corn Products company. The company has been in the hands of a receiver for about six months. Under the proposed reorganization the new company would have a capitalization of $2,800,000.

The Adirondack Power and Light company at a special meeting voted to increase the authorized capital stock from $23,100,000 to $35,000,000. The authorized common stock was increased from $6,500,000 to $12,000,000, the 7 per cent preferred stock was increased from $4,300,000 to $10,000,000, and the authorized 8 per cent preferred stock was decreased from $9,300,000 to $3,000,000.

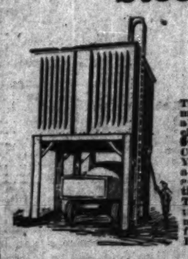
Steel Bins!!

For Sand, Gravel, Coal, Cinders, Etc.



$595

The steel bins we illustrate herewith measure 10 ft. x 12 ft. x 15 ft. and have a capacity of 70 cubic yards. Truck clearance is 10 ft. as illustrated. These bins are particularly adapted for Road Contractors, Material Yards and Coal Yards. The photograph indicates what a great time and labor saver they are, as trucks can be loaded in a very short time and eliminate double handling. Their portability is an added feature, as they are all bolted together in the field, no hot rivets being required. They are far superior to wood which soon decays. Price F. O. B., Chicago, $595.

Structural Steel!

We have large quantities of plates, ¼ inch and heavier, also round bars in all sizes. We can make you quick deliveries.

We have 7,000 Diamond Checkered Floor Plates, measuring 3-16 inch by 2 ft. x 4 ft., which we are quoting at a special price of $2 per plate.

We have a full stock of I beams from 3 inch to 24 inch; angles from 2 x 2 to 6 x 6; channels from 3 inch to 15 inch, which we will cut to length and deliver to site in the City of Chicago or surrounding territory.

Big lasting suds
—they give the water a "soapy feel" all through

Put your hand in a tub of Rinso suds. You can feel that the water is actually soapy all through.

This is one reason why Rinso soaks clothes clean without hard rubbing.

Many bar soaps make frothy, foamy suds. They look at first as if they were rich and lasting, but they disappear just as soon as you put the clothes into them, leaving the water as if soap had never touched it.

Rinso suds work down into every fold and fibre, loosening the dirt, without weakening a single thread. Just a light rubbing with dry Rinso on cuff edges, neck bands and the like, gets them clean—the dirt is so loosened.

Be sure to use enough Rinso to get the big lasting suds, that give the water a soapy feel all through.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world. It is sold everywhere. Get Rinso —at grocery and department stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Rinso does the family wash as wonderfully as Lux does fine things

NOTE: In hard water it takes from ¾ to 1 package (regular size) of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1¼ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

"And I knew at last I had found real beauty clay"

The Discovery that Ended Bad Complexions

Clay from the Far-Off British Isles Remakes the Skin in Forty Minutes. How it Came to America—Where to Get it.

Here is a real beauty secret—right out of the earth. From Wales, where a poor complexion is a curiosity.

Read how a chemist has made this beauty-blessing available to everybody. A new shipment has reached this country and is ready now.

Mr. Ryerson tells in this announcement the generous arrangements to supply the public direct.

By WILLIAM RYERSON
(Chief Chemist, Century Chemists)

I HAVE been besieged with letters asking if printed accounts of this wonder-working clay are really so. All the statements I have seen are substantially true. All reports from this laboratory have been based on scientific facts, and proved hundreds of times by our own tests, under our unhurried observation.

Forty Minute Beauty Clay is so named because it does beautify in forty minutes.

Its discovery is an interesting story. My daughter, attractive of feature, had a despairingly dull skin from childhood. Nothing would clear it up. On our trip through Wales her lack-lustre complexion was the more marked because of the skin perfection prevailing there. We did not see one native girl—or scarcely a woman of years—but what had skin of practically perfect tone, texture, color. Daughter was willing, I think, to try anything offering even a forlorn hope of improvement. Then Fortune smiled on her:

One afternoon she came face to face with the secret of perfect complexion. In the hills, by a stream, two young women were peculiarly engaged. One was wiping from her face and neck—clay. Her companion was plastering her features with more clay, scooped from the bed of the tiny stream.

Noting the striking tone and color of the maiden standing, my daughter made bold to question her. She learned of claying; how it was an accepted part of one's toilet in that land. Where artificial beautifiers were virtually unknown—indeed, it was with difficulty one found a cold cream in those towns—Nature had provided the most potent aid to beauty ever used! My daughter's complexion plight led the kindly peasants then and there to submit her to the claying process.

Clay was applied in a moment, and left to dry. Later it was wiped away, and she was invited to view the result. With many a delighted laugh, they received her exclamations of surprise. Could she have some of the precious clay? But, surely! And in her basket were placed two large crocks.

Almost running the three miles home, she rushed up and bade me look at her skin. Her enthusiasm was warranted—I was fairly startled at the transformation. To pleasing features had been added the glory of a creamy, colorful, radiant complexion. And I could see that the new beauty lay deeper than the surface stimulus of a beauty preparation! Her skin was clarified to its depths; pores were invisible in even that close scrutiny by sunlight. I plied her with questions. I spent the rest of that day (and many more days) with the contents of one of those jars. Of course, I had known of domestic clays and their vogue back home. I knew, too, that some of them bring quite remarkable temporary benefits to some skins. But if only this peculiar, naturally endowed clay could be given America! The problem was to hold those mystic elements strong and virulent in the clay. The way was found, although not until long after we had returned home, and I had access to my laboratory.

We applied the clay countless times, on every type of complexion, and watched results closely. In all the tests it never failed. Some cases required nearly an hour; sometimes ten or twelve minutes, but the average was forty—so we designated it as Forty Minute Clay. Naturally, requests for the clay have mounted by leaps and bounds. What woman would not give five dollars for a certain method of bringing her skin to practical perfection—permanently so—by so simple and pleasant a sensation—all done in part of an hour! Four times we have run out of clay; but another liberal shipment is at hand, and my associates have agreed to a rather unusual offer for the present.

Because of so many who still ask "can these marvelous things about English clay be true?" I will send the clay to anyone who has not yet proved it herself—at a ridiculously small charge to compensate us for the actual outlay—an outlay which we naturally could not afford to make out of our own pockets in so many thousands of cases. Here is my offer:

FREE TRIAL of $5 Jar of 40-Minute Beauty Clay!

Don't send any money to the laboratory, but merely advise them of your wish to receive a full-sized jar of Forty-Minute Beauty Clay—the regular $5 jar.

There will be no charge, and there will be no obligation, unless you are grateful beyond words for the real and lasting benefit brought by the very first application of this amazing clay.

Your good faith will be established by paying the postman who places the jar in your hands, just what covers shipping tariffs, compounding, refining and packaging this product. I have made $1.87 plus postage cover all! You may keep the entire $5 jar if you pay these nominal charges of just $1.87 and postage. Or you may have every penny back if every miraculous improvement you have hoped for is not brought about.

This offer is my answer to your questions, or wishes for proof. It will bring an avalanche of applications, but we shall fill them all, in the order they come! You may, if handier, enclose $2 for the jar prepaid; my guarantee is the same.

THE CENTURY CHEMISTS, Dept. 39
Century Building, Chicago:

I accept your "No Profit" offer. Please send me a full-sized regular $5.00 jar of Forty Minute Beauty Clay at the net laboratory cost price of $1.87, plus postage, which I will pay postman on delivery. My money back unless only one application proves completely satisfactory.

go on. The night was fearfully dark; snow was falling, as it had been all day. The snow was light and we sank into it up to our waists. Our guides, one boy half paralyzed, but the other one a sturdy young fellow of 16, decided to drag our things on a sledge, and we were to follow as best we could on foot.

We started to walk, but it seemed almost impossible to make any headway. It was simply a continual stumbling and falling and pulling one another out of holes. We soon got hot and out of breath, and had to sit and rest in the snow. At last, after a long time, we reached the top of a hill where less snow had fallen and found the shelter of some trees. We found ourselves quite in a wilderness in the northern part of Russia, near the lakes. My husband began to show signs of intense weakness and giving in. He suffered dreadfully and it was a painful effort for him to drag his swollen feet along.

It was far into the night when we reached the village where we were to stop and rest once more. We found ourselves again in another village hut. This time we found more old men, all of them asleep on the top of an oven. The Russian oven, which is to be found in every peasant's house, is a gigantic affair, built of tiles on which the entire family could easily sleep. The heat was dreadful; fresh air had surely never penetrated that room.

They offered us some milk to drink and suggested that we wait until it became light enough to go on. We dozed on the wooden benches until 4 o'clock, tormented by vermin all the time, and then we began our bit of the last twelve versts of the journey towards the frontier.

We were told it was not far, and we must have courage to keep up our strength, trusting God and all would be well. I never for one moment lost hope. I felt sure, somehow, that as we had come so far and passed so many dangers we should reach the other side safely. I did my best to hold up and encourage my husband to bear up. We were accompanied by two of the old men and one of the boys from the last village. These last versts were too dreadful. We were starved, hungry, and weak, and I tried not to show how discouraged I was. However, we dragged ourselves on, how I do not know or understand now. It seemed almost a miracle. Once my husband collapsed entirely and wished to remain where he lay. He bid us good-by and told me how happy we had always been together, but I made him, by mere force, again pull himself together.

Just before reaching the last village on the Finnish frontier we saw traces of skis and disturbed snow. It looked to me as if some soldiers had been resting. Our guides suspected there might be Red guards about and went on ahead, saying they would send some one to fetch us from the village if all was well. It was, however, only traces of the "Ingerman Land"—White soldiers.

The Ingerman Land were Finnish soldiers of the volunteer army, but Russian subjects, most of them natives of the province of Petrograd, adjoining the Finnish frontier. They were in entire sympathy with the "White army."

We proceeded on our way as best we could, until we reached the hovel where we were to rest again more dead than alive. My husband was in a pitiful condition—"unconscious"—and I finished.

I threw myself on a bed in the kitchen and knew nothing more. I faintly remember hearing a great deal later on; quite indistinctly the people of the house tell us that we could not stay there, that we must turn back, that the Finnish frontier only a few days before was utterly closed to all Russians.

The peasant woman in whose house we stopped said it was impossible to keep us—it was too dangerous. Any moment the Reds might come. But she must have seen that we were unable to go any further and that what remained of our hearts was broken. My poor Miriam, tired and hungry, having walked the whole night, still was determined to reach the frontier. She offered a peasant woman in the house two thousand rubles if she would take her right up to the Finnish frontier, and so that poor child started off.

IT was agreed between us that she should try to get for us the permission somehow to enter Finland, and if she could not return that night, we should try somehow to cross the frontier the next morning and wait somewhere for her. She hoped to be lucky enough to hire a horse and a sledge to fetch us. She told me afterwards that before she left I shortened her skirt, which was wet and covered with mud and snow, and helped her to pin it up, but I had remembered nothing, and only had a feeling that I could endure no more that day.

She had three more versts to walk to the frontier. Those three versts were the worst of the entire journey. Once on the frontier, the woman who had accompanied her said, "I am going back now, I have had enough." And my poor child was left entirely alone. Nothing was to be seen but snow, up to one's waist everywhere, not even traces of skis.

She trudged on and on in the direction the woman had pointed out to her. At last she heard a voice, it seemed to be the voice of a child, singing, trying to cheer itself up, and such a voice. A little girl about 12 years old came up to her dressed in rags, wearing a poor little coat, which was much too small for her. Her head was covered with a dirty shawl and on her feet were two odd shoes, much too large, and both made to fit the same foot, tied on anyhow. She was no bigger than a pint of bitters.

This little creature was a Russian Finn who had been left in Russia by her mother who had successfully escaped to Finland, and this poor little one, if you please, had been earning her own living. She told the guards, who questioned her later, that she was a children's governess.

The Finn turned his horse's head and drove off as fast as he could go.

Miriam said to herself, "Here's my mascot." Our fates are thrown together. The little thing spoke Russian and they began to search for the road that would take them up to the Finnish frontier. A number of times they lost their way and had to turn back. As it was growing dark, suddenly two "White army" soldiers appeared and ordered them to stop. Miriam explained to them that she was a Russian subject and the little girl a Finn, and that they wanted to go to the nearest military post. The soldiers said that on no account could they allow a Russian to pass the frontier; only the little one could pass.

"You can do with me as you please," said Miriam. "I will not turn back. Nothing on God's earth could make me." One of the soldiers answered, "Very well, pass on; but further on you will meet the Finnish soldiers, who surely will send you back."

The two girls went on until at last they met a Finnish soldier who stood with pointed gun waiting for them. Seeing his hard, relentless face, Miriam felt that here was indeed an insurmountable obstacle. After examining her papers, he told her she could not pass. "If you make three steps I'll shoot you dead," and pointed his gun so near to her that she felt the muzzle near her chest. She started to run, then turning round she threw open her coat and shouted to him, "Go on, shoot!"

To die right there was preferable to returning to be shot a few days later in Russia. He was impressed by her determination, and not having the courage to shoot her, made them walk fifteen versts that night to the staff, he on skis and they floundering along after him in the deep snow.

They arrived in the night and were put in barracks with the soldiers, while one of the guards went to report their arrest. Most of the men were sleeping and the two girls sat in a corner huddled together on a stool waiting for somebody to come and question them. At last a pleasant looking young Finnish lieutenant came in with an N. C. O. who spoke fragments of Russian. Miriam told him who she was, who her father was, how we had a year old permission to pass through to Denmark and Sweden in case we should be able to escape some day. He told her kindly that he had not any right to let her remain in Finland, that his orders were very strict, but that he would telegraph just the same to headquarters, and ask for their orders.

In the meantime she and the little mascot were given over to the care of a dear old Finnish woman in whose house the Finnish officer lived, and she washed and put them both to bed like babies after giving them plenty to eat. It was agreed that the little mascot was to put on skis the next day and be sent to fetch us, as they could not allow Miriam, being a Russian subject, to pass the frontier a second time.

Meantime the woman who had guided my daughter to the frontier had returned to us and was questioned by my husband. She could find nothing better to tell him than that after she had left my daughter many shots were fired, which made us fear the worst. I was so completely dazed that I could not properly grasp anything. I remember only that straw and leaves were put down on the floor near the stove, blankets spread over them and we were told we might go to bed. The man and his wife got into their little old wooden bed that was fixed against the wall and in another corner was a bed for the woman who helped in the house.

It being Saturday night, they had all had Russian steam baths and returned looking like lobsters after having been lying in steam for an hour. The room was stuffy; the only breath of air that came in was when they went in and out of the door. The windows were completely frozen from the outside and sealed from the wind.

We had been asleep a short time. I doubt if my husband had even closed his eyes, when two soldiers arrived, letting the butt end of their guns drop heavily on the floor. For the first time they stood and saluted. The woman who had taken my daughter to the frontier exclaimed, "They are ours." At first we did not know if "ours" meant Reds or Whites, as we were still in the land of the Reds. I whispered to her, "Reds or Whites?" "Whites, Whites," she replied.

THESE boys proved to be our salvation. They were two young, fresh, pink cheeked "Ingerman Land" soldiers who were constantly crossing the frontier back and forth taking over poor runaway aristocrats. My husband told them our plans and they promised to return next morning at daylight and take us safely across the frontier. It seemed as if the good Lord had sent them. We gave them some bread and milk and they left for the next village, promising to come back at 6 in the morning.

They kept their word, but when they entered the room in the dim morning light, it gave us another fright until we recognised them, for whenever we saw a soldier with a gun, we were paralysed with fear, and cold chills ran up and down our backs.

We started on those last three versts towards the frontier. The two soldiers, on skis, put our heavy sacks on their backs and went ahead, not taking the usual road. The landlord and another man of the house were to accompany us; my husband, myself, and Krasnavitza. It was a terribly hard tug. The snow seemed deeper than ever. We were less able to do the tramps. My husband's jaw had fallen, his eyes were glassy, he looked as if his end had really come. I kept telling him that I could see the soldiers awaiting for us, that freedom now lay so close to us. I really think that if the soldiers had not from time to time dragged him along, he would have died. I expected it at any moment. The snow was so deep that I had to keep the little dog on my shoulder or she would have been lost.

Every ten yards or so, we had to sit down exhausted, and then the soldiers prodded us on again and set us going. At last towards evening we saw a tiny house in the distance, which we vaguely felt must be our goal. Soldiers came out to meet us with a smile. Our joy, our emotion, was too great for words. They built a big bonfire and we sat by it drying ourselves, for we were wet to the neck floundering in the snow.

We sat warming ourselves as happy as we could be to be at last free. Two soldiers left on skis promising to go to the next village and bring us back a sleigh. I was wondering what happened to our poor child Miriam, and suddenly great fear came over me. The little dog, who had been quiet for a long time lying in my lap, suddenly became very excited and jumped down into the deep snow and made for the back of the hut. I got up to go after her and I saw in the distance a sledge coming and in it Miriam herself. It was as if it had all been planned, even to the minute. The N. C. O. was in the sledge with her and the little mascot was driving the horse.

We said an affectionate good-bye to our soldier friends at the hut, crawled into the sledge as best we could with our bundles and sacks, and drove towards freedom. Free at last—how that felt! No more walking! We drove the fifteen remaining versts to the little house where my daughter had been made so comfortable the night before. What good things we had to eat! The white bread tasted so delicious; real yellow butter, coffee and real cream—the things we had not tasted for more than a year.

Our Escape from the Bolshevists

by Beulah Artsimovitch

Being the True Account of the Flight from Red Russia of a Russian Noble, His American Wife, and Their Daughter.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

With a Little Dog's Aid.

WE waited I don't know how long for our Finn's arrival. At last we heard the sound of horses' hoofs and the crunch of a sledge in the snow. Miriam immediately recognized the man she had spoken to three days ago. He ordered us to get into the sledge, but when he saw the dog he positively refused to take it, saying that people going on such journeys and who wish to save their lives don't take yelping pets. We insisted on keeping Krassavitza and assured him that she would keep quiet. He said, of course, "How can you trust your dog not to bark?" and we had to guarantee that we were absolutely sure that she would not make a sound.

He was very surly, but after much grumbling finally told us to get in. The bottom of the sledge was full of straw and in we got, made ourselves as comfortable as possible in this primitive vehicle, and started off. We drove on and on past trees in the deep snow for miles and miles, through an endless forest; not a single living soul nor a house did we see.

The dreariness of the Russian forest, the feeling that anything might happen, and not a soul there to save us, was awful. At last the Finn looked round and spoke for the first time since we started. "Are you sure of your dog?" he asked Miriam. "We are about to approach and to pass, if possible, the most dangerous post; your father passed it without disturbing the guards. You must not speak"—addressing me—"on any account. Keep your dog very quiet." He had hardly finished speaking when two Bashkir red soldiers stepped out of the darkness and pointed their guns into our faces and ordered us to stop. The first words they uttered were, "We must take you to the staff." Horrors!

Our Finn showed great nervousness; he explained stammeringly to the Bashkirs that he was a wounded red soldier and was driving two peasant women to the next village. They said they must examine our bags. My blood ran cold as they pounced on my sack. In it were our old passports, the money to pay the Finn—half a million rubles—everything that would certainly give us away if discovered.

Just as one of the Bashkirs was reaching for my sack, by chance he put his hand on the little dog. She jumped up, expecting to be petted, and while they were laughing at her, calling her "little monkey" and petting her, I had a chance to throw my coat over my sack and they opened instead one of Miriam's bags. She told them it was only food. We had some black bread, a little sugar, and a quarter of a tin of beef given to us by our dear friend, Mrs. F. "What's this?" the Bashkir soldier asked, taking up the tin, at the same time putting his finger into it, and then thrusting a big piece into his mouth. "Meat," said Miriam.

It must have tasted heavenly to them, as they also were more than half starved. One ran away off with the tin of meat and the second soldier started off after him, leaving us free to go on our way—thanks to Mlle. Chrisanteme, our dog, and the beef. What wonderful luck we had! If they had taken us to the staff, as they first said, and had searched us there, they would have found sewn up in one of my boots a small piece of paper, a receipt for money I had given to feed English prisoners in Petrograd last year.

The Finn pushed us into the next room, not even daring to close the door lest the soldier or soldiers should hear a sound and suspect something. We sat on the bed of the Finn couple. In the corner somebody was fast asleep and snoring loudly. We never found out who he was. There we waited motionless, hardly daring to breathe. However, all ended well. The soldier had only dropped in for a friendly visit on his rounds. They laughed and chatted for half an hour and he left enchanted with the sewing machine. The Finn and his wife prepared to go to bed, gave us a straw mattress to put on the floor, and told us we might sleep until 4 o'clock. At that hour Miriam was to wake him and then we would continue our journey.

"Go on, shoot!"

Mrs. F., saying good-by to me, had said, "The greatest fear I have for you is that you should be stopped and searched and that paper found on you would mean execution on the spot, it being a proof of your connection with the English."

The Finn whipped up his poor tired horse and on we went again till past midnight. We came to a little hut half buried in the snow, which the Finn told us was his house. Here we were to stop and rest for a few hours before going on. He told us to be very quiet, to wait in the barn, and cover ourselves with straw, as he did not trust any one, not even his wife. The neighbors had been told that he was bringing a sewing machine (it had been one of the hard, silent friends nudging and bumping us in the sledge) and his friends might be in the kitchen waiting for his return with this great treasure. He must make sure that no one should see us.

After a while he returned and took us into the house. His wife was waiting for us and had prepared us some warm milk; she gave us bread and we all sat down to the table to eat. The room was small and low, smelly and stiflingly hot—the usual peasant's kitchen, with a little room adjoining. We had just begun to eat with great appetite, being dreadfully hungry, when steps were heard outside, and the to us unmistakable thud of a butt end of a gun brought down on the door step. It could be nothing else but a soldier.

There was no real sleep possible for us as dead tired as we were. We dosed a little and at 4 o'clock Miriam called the Finn. It was time to start. He asked us to pay him his money before starting again, so we sat at the table and I counted out the large sum of money we had agreed upon, ruble for ruble.

AT last we all were ready. We got into the sledge and he, half dazed with sleep, cautiously opened the barn doors and drove out into the darkness. Suddenly there was a crack of a shot and a piece of branch fell into the sledge. We did not know where it came from, but it sounded dreadfully near to us. The Finn hurriedly turned the horse's head and drove off in the opposite direction as fast as he could go. I cannot understand how we managed to not fall out. We drove over snow fields and into such deep holes that the horse could hardly pull us out of them.

Miriam now for the first time lost courage. "Mother, I fear it is all up with us. He seems to be taking us back where we came from." It certainly looked as if he, having received from me the large sum of money, intended quietly to drive us back to the station where we had come from; but we trusted to luck and waited. Again we drove on and on and on, never meeting any one nor even seeing a house; through a complete wilderness. Suddenly he looked around and said, "In a few minutes we must pass the last dangerous post. Are you sure of your dog?"

He then told us my husband had passed both of these posts without disturbing the guards, but we were to be less fortunate. A soldier rushed out as we passed, pointed his gun at us, and told us to stop. The Finn was so nervous that had I been this soldier I should have felt sure that something was wrong with us. He again told his pet story of driving two peasant women to the next village. I took Krassavitza on my lap, remembering how she had helped to save us the time before. The soldier patted her head and probably thought that we were very innocent peasants, not aristocrats trying to escape.

"Pass." The Finn was mad with joy. In his way he was an honest fellow. He turned around and almost embraced us. He said, "You are free, practically free. The rest is less dangerous and you will be received on the Finnish frontier with roses." Imagine?

We drove on for a long time, for hours and hours—it was difficult to tell how long—until we came to a little village. On the outskirts we came to a hut and the Finn stopped at the door and gave us over to an old peasant with two daughters, whom, he told us, would take care of us for the rest of the journey. He hurriedly said good-by to us and left.

The girls informed us that from now on we must walk to reach a certain given place before daylight the following morning. They put our heavy packages on their backs and told us to follow them. They seemed to know the way, although there was no road and the snow came up well above our knees. They went quickly ahead of us. We followed as best we could, stumbling and falling again and again in the snow with our guides far in front of us. They seemed to think that if there were Red soldiers about who discovered us, it would be possible for them at least to get safely away with all our belongings.

On and on we trudged, falling and falling, picking ourselves up again, until at last in the dim distance we saw a small light, which appeared to be a window of a little house. That was our goal. We had at last reached the next village. When we entered that kitchen the heat was suffocating; all around on the floor and benches, living beings, as they seemed to be, were sleeping. The light had been put out as we entered the hut and the woman who met us at the door pretended that she had no candles, no kerosene, and that the light had simply gone out by itself.

The two girls who had carried our bundles demanded 2,000 rubles, saying that our Finn had not paid them. By the light of the half dying fire in the stove I managed with difficulty to get out some money to pay them. They said good-by and left, giving us over to the care of two boys.

The woman now lighted the lamp and suddenly I saw my husband sitting up on one of the benches, rubbing his eyes. He was even too exhausted to show any signs of joy. He had been hiding in this little house for two days, waiting anxiously for us. He was too numbed even to suffer. The kind old woman, mother of the two boys, who were to take us on our way, had done everything to make him comfortable, hiding him from the Red guards under the hay in a corner and giving him plenty of nourishment. The reason he waited for us was that he had not money enough to pay for his further journey and so could not go on; whereas the Finn had told us that the money we paid to him should take us three to the Finnish frontier.

As it was, it all happened for the best. My husband was too ill to attempt the last part of that terrible journey alone. We decided to stay here one day. It was already commencing to get light on the following morning when the two boys said it was too dangerous to go through the village, we might be seen by the Red soldiers who came to buy bread there every morning. There had been a snowstorm, which, as usual, had obliterated every sign of our road. Our little house slowly disappeared in the snow. We were concealed in the loft, covered with old rags and mattresses and left there in hiding all day. It delayed for the moment our escape, but we were so exhausted that we were thankful to rest our weary limbs. I slept like the dead.

At 10 o'clock that night we decided to

Etching one of the copper cylinders which print COLORoto

What COLORoto means to Advertisers

IN ordinary printing the ink is applied to raised surfaces, which then press it upon paper. In rotogravure printing the ink is applied to an etched copper cylinder. It is then scraped off all the raised surfaces by a steel knife and absorbed from the etched hollows by paper. The effect of this rotogravure process is far richer and softer, particularly in the reproduction of photographs and paintings.

In magazine color printing a sheet of paper is printed in one color, allowed to dry, printed in a second color, etc. This process is too slow for newspaper use. Newspapers, being forced to shoot rolls of paper at high speed between cylinders which rapidly pressed one color on top of another, found it impossible to attain satisfactory color reproduction.

At least, it seemed impossible until The Tribune invented, patented, and applied the COLORoto process by which this mazagine section is printed. For soft yet vivid color printing we invite comparison with any current periodicals.

And consider the difference in cost to the advertiser. For instance:

	BACK PAGE IN 4 COLORS
COLORoto Magazine of	Price	Circulation
The Sunday Tribune	$2,500	787,000
Good Housekeeping	5,000	709,000
Literary Digest	8,000	1,381,000
American Magazine	8,500	1,635,000
Ladies Home Journal	15,000	1,724,000

This means that for each thousand four-color pages distributed the advertiser pays as follows:

COLORoto Magazine	$3.20
American Magazine	5.20
Literary Digest	5.80
Good Housekeeping	7.00
Ladies Home Journal	8.70

In other words, The Tribune is now equipped to sell the best of color advertising at the lowest of prices.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

FRED, THE PET PINCHING BUG, GETS INTO TROUBLE.

BY Wm. DONAHEY.

THE Lover twins had a great deal of fun with their pet pinching bug which had been given them. The bug was quite tame and he would romp with the twins just like a big puppy dog. Fred was his name and he soon learned to come when his name was called and he would quickly answer the twins' whistle. Fred seemed to be full of life and he never tired of chasing sticks and stones. It was quite true that he was rather destructive, for he sometimes chewed up brooms and mops, and one day he pulled several sheets off the clothes line where they were drying, tearing them badly and covering them with dirt. In spite of these tricks he was a mighty good watch bug and in a few days after he came to live under the rose bush he had chased all the ants away. Being so full of life, Fred wanted to play all the time and he soon made a lot of trouble in the Teenie Weenie village. He had one very bad habit of jumping up on folks. One day he jumped up on the Lady of Fashion, knocking that dainty little person over, covering her clean dress with his muddy foot prints, and scaring the tiny woman half out of her wits. Poor Fred did not mean to be rude, he was only playing, and he seemed quite hurt when he was punished by being shut in his bughouse for the rest of the day.

One day he sneaked into the Teenie Weenie kitchen, back of the shoehouse, while the Cook was out, and picking up a baked bean the Cook had prepared for supper he carried it off and chewed it up. The Cook was certainly a most angry Teenie Weenie and he threatened to beat Fred with a match if he saw him around the kitchen again. One day Grandpa left his tiny cane out on the front porch and Fred had it half chewed up before the old gentleman discovered it.

"He ought to be shot!" cried Grandpa, when he saw his ruined cane. "He's just a worthless no account hound."

"Ah, you mustn't be angry with Fred," laughed the General. "He's just a puppy bug and doesn't know any better." However, the day soon came when the General grew very angry at Fred, and this is how it happened.

One hot afternoon the General sat down on the front porch of the shoehouse to rest. He took off his plumed hat and set it on the porch beside him. Presently he began to nod, and Fred, who had been watching him from the roof of the porch, crawled down the post and grabbed the hat. The General awakened just in time to see Fred disappear under the instep of the shoehouse with his hat, and he quickly ran after him.

"Come on out and give me that hat, Freddie, nice Freddie," said the General, peering under the house, but all the General could see was Fred's green eyes shining under the dark instep.

The General secured a straw and quickly poked Fred out, but this didn't help things a bit, for Fred made straight for the schoolhouse with the General in fast pursuit. Reaching the old hat about four jumps ahead of the Teenie Weenie, the bug quickly climbed to the roof. Several of the Teenie Weenies had been attracted by the noise, for the General had been shouting lustily, and soon a number of the little folks were gathered about the schoolhouse watching the bug shake the General's hat.

"Get a ladder!" bellowed the General. "He'll ruin my hat if we don't stop him!"

Several of the men soon secured a ladder and the Policeman quickly climbed after the bug.

"Come on, nice buggie, nice buggie," cried the Policeman. "Give me the hat." But Fred only growled and shook the hat harder.

"Turn the fire hose on him," suggested the Dunce.

"Shoot him," cried Grandpa. "That's what he deserves—the good for nothing hound."

At Grandpa's words the Lover twins began to cry and Fred, attracted by the noise let the hat drop. It fell to the ground and the General found it had not been hurt much but he was quite angry and he ordered the twins to catch their bug and chain him up for a week. The twins promised, but it took a long time to get Fred to come down to the ground, for he knew he had been naughty and very likely felt that he would be punished. He was finally coaxed down with a tempting cake crumb and carried off to his bughouse where he was chained up for a week.

"But don't you see," said Mrs. Bavin, "what it was made for?"

Of Course You've Heard of the Seagull Links and of Edgerley Moore. He's the Golfer Who—But That Would Be Revealing the Secret!

I CANNOT tell the story of Edgerley Moore without telling also the story of our golf club, for one is complementary to the other. The Seagull links is only five years old, yet it has become after a fashion famous, as has also Edgerley Moore, and their sporting immortalities go together. Times and fashions change, but the royal and ancient game has reached a point, I suppose, where it changes not.

A hundred years from now people will doubtless be playing it with the same implements, the same rules, the same profanity, the same alternating currents of triumph and self-pity. And a hundred years from now some resident of Cape Harbor, tooling a house guest over to the links in his molecular power monoplane runabout, will remark as he drops her vertically to that landing plane behind the clubhouse where we now park our gasoline power automobiles:

"Sporty little links—all natural hazards. Here's where Edgerley Moore was developed. You've heard of him. The golfer who——" But I withhold the end of that quotation lest I betray my story.

Hitherto only four people have known the whole truth about Mr. Moore's career, however much the public thought it knew—Dr. Carrington, Mrs. Bavin, John B. Gillespie, and I. And last week an inconspicuous item in the sporting page announced the death of "John B. Gillespie—the trainer who——" but here I must stop again. Edgerley Moore is already dead. And Mrs. Bavin and Dr. Carrington say there's no reason they know of why I should not make public the inside of this remarkable episode in amateur sport.

THE Seagull links really owes its existence to the fact that we were getting too old for tennis. We all reached that stage within a year or so of each other. None of us admitted it publicly, but the Seagull links was our private admission. Mrs. Bavin first had the idea; she generates most of the bright thoughts in our town. Madge Bavin is one of the benevolently restless of her sex. Her husband, Bob, has some job in the management of a string of banks. Most of the summer he is traveling; he gets to Cape Harbor only for a week-end now and then. Bringing up her three children doesn't employ a third of her splendid energies; she works off the rest in public service.

Mrs. Bavin found that the old Cowan place was for sale. It embraced ninety acres of harderrabble hill land, a large and decaying farmhouse, some disintegrating stone fences, and a patch of pear and apple orchard so long neglected that the trees had flattened out like Japanese shrubs and bore mainly thorns. I first heard of Mrs. Bavin's idea when she invited me mysteriously on a drive, commanded me to dismount beside the Cowan house, and bade me view the landscape.

"It's very pretty," said I, rolling my eye over the Japanesque effects of beach plum bushes, sumac, and gnarled apple trees. "It's very pretty," I repeated, "but——"

"But don't you see," said Mrs. Bavin in her quick, nervous way, "what it was made for?" She didn't wait for my reply; she seemed too afraid lest I guess wrong. "A golf links! A perfect nine hole course. Look—a short hole over there on the knoll—wonderfully sporty—there's your fairway—the pasture there—isn't it perfect? And the brook for a water hazard."

"Looks good to me," said I. "But of course if a real golf course architect looked it over——"

"He has," said Mrs. Bavin, "and he's wild about it. He's a young fellow just from Scotland. He says golf was played originally on this kind of ground—hill country beside the sea. He says this is just like St. Andrew's—St. Andrew's!" Mrs. Bavin repeated impressively. "He says he'll need scarcely a single artificial hazard—it will be much more interesting that way — and we can swing the whole thing—the purchase and his estimate and making the house livable for——" Here Mrs. Bavin came down with a figure which made me gasp and whistle.

"Well," said Mrs. Bavin, "we don't have to pay for it all at once, do we? Bonds and loans and assessments and things—we'll scarcely notice them."

I wasn't really enthusiastic then. But I'd found by experience that it was no use opposing Madge Bavin in her creative and executive mood. Too often I'd tried that and seen the measure which I had discouraged in the beginning turn out an unqualified success. "If the rest are willing to plunge, I am," I said at the end of the chapter. Mrs. Bavin, I learned afterward, got a dozen others out to the Cowan place in the course of the next ten days. All came to about the same terms with her efficiency as I had done—they would if the rest would. We held a meeting—and it was all done but the assessments. Another week and the architect was at work. By autumn we were playing on a rough fairway, with ground rules about lifting from holes and hoof marks; by the middle of the next season that fairway had begun to look really like a lawn. And our third hole, since famous, was attracting attention.

Then Mrs. Bavin seemed to feel that her chicken was grown up and needed no more brooding; she left us to struggle on for ourselves, while she plunged into a Community Circus. But not before she had conducted a membership drive of her own. She, and Cape Harbor in general, went at this matter of membership in characteristic fashion. Local traditions are curiously persistent. Now our town—away back in the seventeenth century, when it was just a row of log cabins in a howling wilderness, it was famous for its tolerance. It still is; neither the permanent inhabitants nor yet the summer people—who own their villas, have been coming there all their lives, and consider themselves as citizens—have ever troubled themselves a great deal about social distinctions.

At Goreham, a dozen miles or so up the coast, it's done differently. The old crowd—"our set"—has had an eighteen hole links for the last thirty years. Most of the members were born before golf was known in America, but they were born to the Goreham Golf club just the same. Some of the more antique fossils of Goreham never attend the county tournament when it is played on their course, because that might involve meeting persons whom one doesn't know socially.

But every one in Cape Harbor with the price and the desire was eligible for our club. That is how our membership came to include persons so diverse in origin and circumstance as Edgerley Moore and John B. Gillespie. Edgerley Moore would have been eligible even under the standards of Goreham. The money behind him had ripened for three generations, which implies aristocracy in this democratic land. In his transition he had inherited some two or three hundred thousand dollars from his father and invested most of it conservatively in a business with a by product. The by product suddenly boomed through no merit of Edgerley Moore. In a few years he doubled his money and more. After which he put the whole thing into an annuity and retired, planted himself, and went to seed. He didn't work at anything except a good deal of dull and useless reading; he didn't play at anything except pottering with his gardener about the roses on his place. Of winters he and the perfectly colorless Mrs. Moore used to go to Florida, or California, or Europe, where the vegetating process flourished on alien soil.

I never knew a man who brought less back from foreign travel than Edgerley Moore. When, about five years before we started the Seagull links, his wife died, I suspect that he experienced the first emotion which had gone deeper than his skin in a quarter of a century. But by a fortnight later he had resumed his routine of reading and rose gardening. If he hadn't vegetated physically, as he had mentally, it was because of that same work in the garden.

He was now fifty-nine years old and looked older. His hair and his sea lion mustache were as glistening white as granulated sugar; he was rather tall, but decidedly spare; his shoulders drooped and he seemed to favor his back when he walked. For the rest, he dressed rather youthfully in rough English tweeds, voted regular in politics, and was given socially to long spells of silence between long monologues on books he had just read, wherein he made a dull subject duller.

Edgerley Moore, when Mrs. Bavin called on him concerning the golf club, announced flatly that he'd never seen anything in the game and had never tried it. He started a dissertation to prove that a similar game had been played in ancient Egypt, which Mrs. Bavin had to interrupt to remind him that other people in Cape Harbor wanted to play, and that he owed it to the community. Moved by that argument, Mr. Moore joined and even promised to look in on the links some day.

IT was a different matter with John B. Gillespie. In a more choosy community I doubt whether he would have been asked to join at all. He had blown into that town about a year before, built a new house, bright and varnished, over on the hills beyond the Cowan place, and started immediately to get himself solid with the townspeople and with us. He was a bachelor—at least I never heard of any Mrs. Gillespie—and there arose scandalous whispers about some of his house parties.

Six months later his purpose was revealed. He had bought three old and nearly useless farms on the hills surrounding his new house and was marketing lots in Gillespie's Addition—"a high class residence district," as his advertising expressed it. We even heard rumors that he intended to put up a modern country hotel. This proceeding did not tend to make him popular; we had always feared the day when Cape Harbor would become semi-fashionable and you'd no longer feel sleep on the club the other day; and he'd grumbled at the handicap, because he owed forty; outside two hundred. Old friend! So are you! I want a pink drawing room. Pink makes you cheerful. You can choose the dining room things, but I'll advise you. Only nothing must be green. Green's unlucky. Was there any green on your airplane? Are you tired, Jack?"

"Just the excitement of seeing you, dear."

"Well, you'll have to get used to that, won't you? I mean to be cheerful and back you up. And I'll see if I can't give you a shock. To make you hear, you know. I'm going to write a shock for you to read after I've left."

She wrote a few words on a slate, holding it out of his reach.

"You're not to read it till I have gone," she wrote on the other slate. "I'm going to put it out of your reach; and you can tell Sister—isn't she a dear—to get it for you then. Where shall I put it? I see."

She jumped up and went to his bag—where the other slates were.

"No; no!" he cried, sharply. "Not there. Don't touch that."

She looked round in astonishment at his peremptory, almost angry tone; stood still for a moment; then went and put the slate on the mantel shelf, face to the wall. She stood there for a moment before she walked slowly back to him and picked up the other slate.

"You aren't cross," she wrote, "are you? Only tired?"

"So tired," he said. "Forgive me, dear. I'm not strong yet—only tired."

"Go to sleep for a little while. I'll like to watch you."

She lifted his head, and shook up his pillows, and laid his head down again.

"Kiss me," he said.

She kissed him; and he went to sleep. She sat and stared at the bag.

"I wonder what's in it," she thought over and over again. "A portrait, I expect. Somebody—if she's in the past I suppose it wouldn't matter much. I couldn't bring it up against him now he's—crippled. It is being crippled, really. But if it's somebody new; somebody since me? And if he likes her best? I wonder if I should find Sister. Some nurses are—well, like that. She isn't exactly pretty; but she is attractive. I shouldn't have thought her mean. It was funny his not writing for me for such a long time. Mother said I ought to make sure that he still wanted me. He made no excuse. She made one for him. I think I ought to know. It would be horrid to look while he's asleep; caddish. I could ask him when he wakes. But if he doesn't want me he'll say he does. He's bound to say it. The boys would."

Amy had brothers near her own age; and she had acquired a schoolboy's standard of honor from them. No bad thing for a girl to acquire.

"He's bound to say he wants me," she told herself again; "and I think there are times when you have to do things that are wrong, in a way. He's fast asleep."

She rose suddenly and crossed the room to the bag. Unlocked—only a letter—and three slates. She took them out; read them carefully one after the other; put them back; returned to her chair beside his bed. Her face was as pale as Sister's; and still.

"Soldierworth," she said. "Yes. I thought it would be the Sister, if it was any one. Well——"

She picked up the slate beside her and wrote; slowly and precisely now. Read what she had written carefully; sighed and substituted the fresh slate for the slate on the mantelpiece; washed that clean. "I love you so much." That was what she sponged off.

Then she looked at him for some time; bent and kissed his forehead gently; and went.

"He is fast asleep," she told the matron, "and I would not rouse him to say good-bye. Will you ask the Sister to show him the slate as soon as he wakes. May I send you some flowers?"

"When you come again——" the matron began.

"I shall never come again."

"My dear——"

"I looked in his bag and saw the three slates. I expect you wrote one?"

"My dear——"

"You were right, of course. I have written that I am glad to know that he cares for the Sister, because I care for some one else."

"Is that true?" the matron asked sharply.

"O, no! It is not true. But he won't worry if he thinks so. Good-bye."

"My dear! My dear! I'm nearly old enough to be your mother; and I have had trouble. There, there! There, there! Soldierworth!"

"Only just—just sporting. Thank you."

She kissed the matron and went. The matron watched her from the window—a beautiful girl, and holding her head high.

"Ah!" she muttered. "The best soldier of us all! If I were he, it wouldn't be Cicely Barker. Still, it's no use blaming them. When you care for any one you do. No use worrying them, either. I shan't tell them what she said."

She rang a bell.

"Ask Sister Barker to come to me," she ordered.

"Cicely," she said, "he is asleep. Miss Russell has gone without waking him. She has left a message on a slate to be shown to him directly he wakes. Don't let any one else see it. You can read it. I think it's for you, too."

"You don't mean——" Sister gasped. "You don't mean——"

"I do. Good luck to both of you."

Sister ran to the room; read the message on the slate; held it in front of him, and shook his arm to wake him.

"Dear Jack: I looked in your bag, because I thought it best to know. I am glad you love Sister, because I love some one else; only I couldn't tell you if you wanted me, because I, too, try to be soldierworth. Good-bye; and God bless you. Yours with true regard, AMY."

"Cicely!" he cried. "My darling!"

"Jack! My boy!"

He gripped her fiercely.

"I heard that," he almost screamed. "Heard! My hearing is coming back."

"Thank God! O, thank God! Are you sure, my dear?"

"Sure. I suppose it was the shock."

"Of losing her! Did you hear that?"

"Yes. I mean the shock of winning you! Did you hear? I shall call the fifth freckle 'Missus.' Soon, eh? I must write and thank her."

"Fancy," Sister cried, "her liking any one else better than you! And when you were in trouble, too! I'll be a better soldier for you than she was, Jack! Though I'm just a little frump compared to her!"

"I don't see you with my eyes," he told her, "but with my heart. I say! That's quite poetical. I've always heard that being in love made you a poet! But I didn't believe it before. Well, I'm jolly glad Amy's happy as well. You know, I think she was the best soldier of the three of us; carried it off so well. Quite took me in! O, yes! Amy's soldierworth!"

THE GAMBLE

by J. H. ROSNY AINE Translated by WILLIAM L. McPHERSON

WHEN Pierre Labriche thought about his good fortune he found it as incomprehensible as it was marvelous. He was the first to recognize that desert had played no part in it. It was due entirely to chance and circumstances.

In 1887 he had accepted a place as tutor in the family of J. Lawrence Willoughby, one of the most daring of the speculators who operate in the region between St. Paul's and London Bridge, between the Bank and the Stock Exchange. In America Willoughby was known as the Tea King. Pierre was to hammer the French language into the brains of the junior Willoughbys and to give them some idea of the arts of drawing and painting.

The young Frenchman belonged to a family which had lost its money. He still owned—and it was his entire inheritance—a block of bonds worth 60,000 francs. Since he had no aptitude for business and possessed only a mediocre talent as a painter, his lack of resources condemned him to some sort of personal service. Preferring teaching to a government clerkship, and wishing to see the world, he took his chances in the country of Pluto.

His first chance was James Lawrence, and it wasn't a bad one. The Willoughby home was luxurious. He had short working hours. Cold glances were offset by excellent appointments. The family treated him with a decorously veiled contempt. Willoughby put him on exactly the same level as the cook or the hairdresser. But inasmuch as his relations with his pupils were regulated by a rigid etiquette, Pierre would not have been worried by his employers' private opinion of him had it not been for Miss Corisande, whose attractions he had had the weakness to appreciate too keenly.

Miss Corisande was one of those English women of mixed blood whose complexions of pearl, silver, and white silk are heightened by the deepest of raven locks. She walked with a gait as languorous as that of the daughters of Cadiz. She had those beautiful cheeks which Homer attributes to youthful queens and to goddesses, and a brilliant little mouth, of which one couldn't tell whether the color of the lips or the whiteness of the teeth was the more charming. Pierre was neither presumptuous nor a fool. But he had just passed his twenty-second birthday anniversary. Without believing that the dainty English girl could cast a look of compassion on him, he nevertheless became a victim of cruel laws of nature. Willoughby, who was discerning, perceived this, and one morning he called the tutor into his office:

"Why do you make yourself ridiculous?" he said bluntly. "I engaged you to teach my boys French and drawing, and not to give them an opportunity to make sport of you. They will make sport of you if you continue to be so stupid. And I shall have to discharge you."

Pierre turned scarlet. He felt the rebuke was deserved. He said nothing. His silence didn't displease Willoughby, who went on:

"You understand that if Miss Corisande finds it out, your position will become even more embarrassing. She is mischievous. She will join the boys in playing pranks on you. And I couldn't blame them. Take your indiscretion by the neck and do me the favor of throwing it over the parapet of London Bridge."

Although this advice produced a great effect on Pierre, it couldn't destroy his love for Miss Corisande. He merely tried to hide it more cleverly.

SIX or seven months passed. Pierre's passion had grown. He became thin. His eyes had a feverish gleam. But his attitude was so correct that Willoughby let him alone.

One afternoon, however, after lessons, as he was about to leave the house, he was summoned to appear before James Lawrence. The Tea King received him gruffly, and said:

"Well, you haven't stopped making a fool of yourself! You have even been taking off flesh, as if you were training for some athletic event. What am I going to do with you?"

"Do what you think best," Pierre answered mildly. "But I believe I have always behaved properly."

"Yes, your behavior has been good," Willoughby growled, condescendingly. "Nevertheless, this can't last. It must be ended one way or another."

"You are right. I must go."

"I think so, too," said James Lawrence.

He looked at the young man with a curious air, in which there was a mixture of disdain and anxiety. Then he said:

"It is a strange thing, but I have a great deal of sympathy for you. It is perfectly absurd, for you are a person of the sort which nature turns out wholesale in her factories. But you must escape from your beggarly situation. And I want to know whether you have any grit. If I understand what you told me some time ago, you saved something out of the wreck of your family estate. How much was it?"

"Sixty thousand francs," Pierre answered, much astonished.

"Is it in ready cash? Or in good securities?"

"Yes—in government bonds."

Willoughby broke into a laugh—his rough laugh of a pirate. He continued:

"Good, that's something. I am engaged in a marvelous speculation, but also a dangerous one. Do you want to put your money into it? In a month you will not have a farthing or you will be worth twenty-five thousand pounds. Say yes or no. If it's yes, go out and get your securities. If it's no, go and pack your belongings."

Pierre, whose astonishment was now beyond bounds, answered mechanically:

"I'll go and get my securities."

"All right," replied Willoughby, coldly. "And say to yourself three or four times as you go down the stairs, that its heads or tails—ruin or freedom."

A MONTH went by. Willoughby had told Pierre to drop the lessons. He entertained him as a guest and treated him as a gentleman. He must have told some extraordinary story to Miss Corisande, for the young girl suddenly began to take an interest in Pierre. At the end of the month James Lawrence again summoned the tutor to his office.

"The operation is over," he said, in a glacial tone.

Pierre felt his heart sink. The pirate's harsh expression presaged ruin. But, pulling himself together, the expectant victim said mildly:

"I suppose I lost."

"You would have made a failure in the augurs' college," Willoughby answered. "No, young man, you have won—even a little more than I foresaw. You have to your credit exactly thirty-five thousand pounds. You can now live like a gentleman and marry my daughter, whom I have counseled to fall in love with you and who has followed my advice."

Poor Pierre could hardly help fainting with joy. He married Corisande. That magnificent English girl brought him a happiness as perfect as a human being could desire. Pierre accepted his good luck. But, never having understood how it happened to come to him, he holds it to be a primordial truth that chance is the grand master of the world.

When he exposes this theory before James Lawrence, the latter laughs with an air of indulgent pity. He remembers well the cause of Pierre Labriche's happiness. The only person to whom he ever revealed it was his brother, Augustus, when the latter returned from his famous expedition to Adelia, where he had gone to hunt for gold, silver and copper deposits. Augustus expressed astonishment that James Lawrence had given his daughter to a needy little Frenchman. James pounded the table with his fist and explained:

"I did it, Augustus, because I am, after all, an honest corsair. This young fellow saved my life. When I summoned him here, in May, 1888, I was six fathoms beyond my depth in the great deal over Southong blues. I had to swim out or perish. I was prepared. My revolver was loaded with six good cartridges. The crisis was to come the next day. I had had to meet within a month payments of eight hundred thousand pounds. There were only three settlements left, one for ten thousand, one for six thousand, and one for five thousand. A bagatelle! But I was at the end of my string.

"No one, Augustus, absolutely no one, neither my best friend nor my worst enemy, would have lent me a thousand pounds. And you were lost somewhere among the icebergs and the seals. All our jewels and objects of art were disposed of, under one pretext or another. After having removed the rocks I found myself, as often happens, held up by a mere pebble. I needed just two thousand pounds. And I had no means of raising it. Rumors had spread. People said I had been driven into a corner. It was noised about that I wouldn't pay. They were only waiting for a default to fall on me like a pack of wolves and devour me.

"It was then that I recalled some vague words of this young man. I sent for him and induced him to put his patrimony on this devil's roulette table. He didn't hesitate—the little Frenchman. He brought me his securities on the run. The next day I played up to the last farthing. I had a month's respite. And what a month! Colonial purchases, hysterical demands doubled my fortune. You must admit that I could well afford to throw a piece of cake to the innocent fellow who saved me without knowing it."

like going over to the postoffice in your sweater. Gillespie, I suppose, knew that, and it set him to work all the harder at the job of gathering popularity.

He was a tall man in his late forties, with something theatrically distinguished in his general makeup. His black hair was turning gray at the temples. His firm and slightly jowly cheeks seemed always, even when he was newly shaved, to be peppered with the powder marks of his stiff, black beard. Yet after all the first thing you noticed about his countenance was a pair of searching, direct, light brown eyes with lighter edges round the rims of the iris.

If you looked his clothes over in detail you realized they were as quiet as any one's; yet he always gave somehow the effect of loud dressing. The women called him, in their confidential moments, a little vulgar—why, they could never explain. It was an effect as subtle and indefinable as that apparent loudness of his clothes. With the men he was amusing enough, but the best things he said gave always the impression of set pieces, as though he had them card catalogued in his mind to spring on the proper occasion.

As might have been expected, Mr. Gillespie leaped at the proposal for a country club. Every one understood his motive—it was a great selling point for Gillespie's Addition. He took up golf at once; was playing a moderately good duffer's game before the links were much better than rough hill and meadow.

I was privileged to be present at a much more important event on our links, one of those little, unconsidered moments which one recognises as the beginning of history. I saw Edgerley Moore make his first attempt. It was Billy Means, one of our golf fiends, who lured him away from his garden, tempted him, and put a driver into his hands. I was waiting at the first tee for a partner when, after a few minutes of instruction about not trying to hit it too hard and keeping his eye on the ball, he made his first swing. Of course, he sent it straight down the fairway, without a suggestion of slice or hook, for a good hundred and fifty yards. Something like that always happens when you first try golf. It is a device of Satan, I think, to lead you on toward profanity and Sabbath breaking.

I met him in the clubhouse afterward; more excited than I had ever seen him before.

"There's something in the game," he said. "Billy Means says——"

"Eighty-five for the nine holes—that's all!" put in Billy. "I ask you if that isn't good for the first time he ever touched a golf club."

We congratulated Mr. Moore hypocritically—we'd all been through that stage of the triumphant, initial round—and dodged away to escape a dissertation which he was beginning on the game of golf among the early kings of Scotland.

I noted him a few days later, going round with Jock Ransome, our pro. That night Jock was wrapping my driver and indulging in shop talk, and he touched on Mr. Moore.

"Pity he wasn't caught young," said Jock. "'Course he can't do anything much now—started too old. But he's got natural form—I can't teach him anything about swinging. And he's a nut on the game." From his tone, Jock was mentioning this last fact not in the spirit of criticism but of warm approval. But you, Mr. Langford, with that natural eye of yours——"

Edgerley Moore drifted out of my thoughts while I bathed in Jock's flattery.

However, this conversation did serve to make me notice thereafter the ways of Mr. Moore. Jock was perfectly right. The next day I lost a ball on our third hole and signaled Moore to go through.

Edgerley Moore was playing around alone. He had at least the deliberation which marks the perfect golfer. It seemed to me that he fiddled for fifteen minutes building and rebuilding tees and taking practice swings before he gave a long address to the ball—and sent it low, straight into the bunker. As he plodded past me he did not look up, but his back registered utter discouragement.

He descended into the bunker, spent two minutes deciding on a niblick, and finally whacked at the ball. He sliced it terribly. It was bounding across the strip of fairway, when it struck some obstacle, gave another bound almost at right angles and dribbled on to the edge of the putting green. He ran up the slope like a boy; made, after a great deal more fiddling, a fair approach putt, and holed out in four. Then he became aware—for the first time it seemed—of my presence, and emitted a senile crowing.

"I suppose when you've made him hole out you're going to kill him."

"One above par!" he cackled, waving his putter, "and from the bunker at that!" His ruddy face above his white mustache was glowing like the sun on winter snows. It occurred to me then that a belated ambition is a terrible thing. Through all his calm, well fed life he had entirely escaped the exciting but perturbing desire to excel. It had struck him at last; and all the harder because so long delayed.

ONE afternoon early in October he toddled into the clubhouse bowed with deep melancholy—a score of 70 or so for the nine holes written on his countenance. The dining room had closed, though the steward remained to sell tobacco and soft drinks; and most of our summer crowd had scattered. Only a few permanent residents and two or three loafers like me were still playing.

We had assembled in the grill room, getting from soft drinks what conviviality one may in these days when the eighteenth amendment has killed the nineteenth hole—Billy Means, John B. Gillespie, Dr. Carrington, and I. The approach of Mr. Moore, the certainty that if we gave him half an opening we should have to listen to the detailed story of his solitary round, set us all to chattering. Dr. Carrington, apparently grabbing at the first idea which came into his head, remarked—as he had often remarked before:

"Golf's at least three-quarters mental, and less than a quarter physical."

"Don't believe it. That's theory," said Billy Means, grouchily. "I've heard that stuff and tried it out. It doesn't work. I say to myself, 'Now I will hit that ball——' and I top it and roll it about three feet or slice it into the next lot."

"Jock would tell you that it's because you were gritting your teeth and pressing," said Dr. Carrington. "I prefer to put it in another way. It's as though you were trying to drive with your putter. You've taken the wrong club out of your intellectual bag—that's all. It isn't the mere conscious mind—the kind we're overworking just now in this little argument. It's the old subconscious mind—the master and the mystery."

"Is that the mind one uses in golf?" asked John B. Gillespie suddenly.

"Certainly——" began the doctor. And at this moment he was interrupted by the entrance of Jock Ransome, the pro, who had come in to get some tobacco.

"Jock," said Dr. Carrington, "isn't golf more mental than physical?"

"Su-sure!" said Jock. "That's what I've been telling you all summer, but you wouldn't listen." Jock was leaving us; he had been engaged for next season with a far richer and more fashionable club, so that he could afford to be frank. "Most anybody has the physique to play good golf. That ain't the point. Col. Riordan up at Hollymount—he's in the artillery—did some figuring on traj—muzzle—well, whatever you call it——"

"You mean trajectory and muzzle velocity," said the doctor.

"That's it. It's the same thing a shell does. He told me he'd proved that a ball hit right on the button started eight times as fast as one hit a hair's breadth to the side. That's distance. A child or an old man who got that trick wouldn't have to take a whole lot from Abe Mitchell. How could you get it? Mind. Same thing with accuracy. There's days when you're going good. Say you've got a seventy-five yard approach. Well, some way your mind tells you just where to hit and how hard to hit and you run her up dead to the pin. And then," Jock added morosely, "there's other days."

"I suppose, then, that if you had a long thinking session with yourself just before you hit the ball you'd make a par stroke every time?" inquired the doctor.

"Nope," answered Jock, stepping right into the trap, "'taint that kind of mind."

At these words—such a perfect, unconscious repetition of the doctor's—we laughed.

"If you would try to learn something instead of making golf a joke," snapped Jock as he pocketed his tobacco and withdrew.

Mr. Moore had not laughed. He still stood, as he had at the beginning of the conversation, leaning morosely against our denatured bar, every line of his face drooping to match the droop of his white sea lion mustache.

"Well, I'd come pretty near selling my soul to the devil to get that kind of mind," he said. "Why today—when I started to drive I said to myself——" and promptly Billy Means' chair scraped on the floor. The doctor remembered that he was late to dinner; I followed without any excuse whatever, leaving Mr. Moore still standing at the bar droning, Mr. Gillespie still sitting in the corner twirling his glass and seeming to make polite pretense of listening.

IT was evening of a wind swept October day when, for the last time that season, I observed Edgerley Moore golfing. As I plodded over to begin the weary search for a lost ball on the third hole, I glanced up. Two players were putting on the tee, silhouetted against the pink and ashen sky. An effect of light and atmosphere made them seem for the moment like visions, born of the clouds. Ours is the old witch land, and I thought of them, in this sudden moment of observation, as children of the air stirring some devil broth on that summit of a lonely hill. Then I caught fair sight of them. The witch semblance vanished, and I realised that Mr. Moore was playing around with John B. Gillespie.

By the time we opened the summer greens next season that pair had become a fixture on our links. I remembered afterward that I never saw Moore playing with any one except Gillespie, who was apparently taking the game as seriously as his senile partner.

John B. Gillespie attracted attention that spring in another way. Suddenly his addition to Case Harbor began to boom. A great signboard advertising the addition went up across from the station; one morning there was a half page advertisement in all the city papers. In this, as in the sign which now blotched the clean greenery of the forest patch across the railroad track, "sporty, picturesque, and convenient golf links," blazed out in large letters. I didn't like it at all; it seemed to me—to name the most definite objection—scarcely clubby. I talked it over freely round the clubhouse when Gillespie was not present, and found opinion divided and mixed. The proceeding was rather loud and presumptuous—agreed. But—and although no one went further, I could supplement that "but." Most of us owned our houses. While none had any idea of selling, it was still pleasant to realise that your bit of land had doubled in value. Which was probably what would happen if Gillespie's addition became a success.

But Madge Bavin, whom I found just mounting the seat of her roadster, rendered a short and emphatic minority report.

"It's horrid," she said, "perfectly horrid! We couldn't be really fashionable here even if we wanted to. But to be semi-fashionable—a lot of profiteers and their stall fed wives and their silly, expensive, flapper daughters——" Mrs. Bavin had been adjusting levers and keys preparatory to starting. Her blue eyes—determined without hardness, firm without coldness—looked directly into my eyes.

"How do you like him?" she asked.

"O, so-so!" I replied.

"Jimmy Langford, you know you don't like him! He gives me the crawls somehow, and he always has," said Mrs. Bavin. She dropped her foot on to the self-starter, and, as the roadster slid away into the distance, I reflected that here, eventually, was the finish of John B. Gillespie. Mrs. Bavin had a way of getting things done. Also I wondered just how much of her motive was jealousy for her own leadership among us.

On my way back to the clubhouse I met Billy Means, carrying the notice of handicaps for the club tournament to post on the bulletin board. I was down for 15-10. But just below my name came Moore, Edgerley—and I whistled. He was down for 12-8, which means cards running about 90.

"What's this?" said I. "You don't mean to say that venerable goof is doing the eighteen holes lower than I?"

"The handicap committee operates in dark secrecy," replied Billy. "But I'm telling you that we gave ourselves the benefit of the doubt. If we'd believed his cards, he'd have gone lower."

"Who scored for him?" I asked.

"Gillespie, of course. They always play together."

"That's the answer," I said. "I suppose Mr. Gillespie is somewhere near scratch."

"No," replied Billy, ignoring my sarcasm, "he isn't entered. He says he's going to caddy for the old sea lion. And he's dropping hints that his boy champion is a wonder."

The next day we got the first thrill. I was only fair that day, even for me, and from the last hole I rushed over to the bulletin board to see whether I had qualified. I found a crowd. In its center stood Mr. Moore and John B. Gillespie. They were gesticulating and chattering. And through it I caught the one sentence—"Moore in seventy-two—whadda you think of that!"

"Seventy-two net?" I asked.

"Net nothing——" snapped back the answer of John B. Gillespie, "seventy-two gross—just par for the course! If you don't believe it, look at that!" He waved the card under my nose. I inspected it. There it was, signed by Gillespie and Dr. Carrington. It wasn't one of Gillespie's heavy handed jokes, then. The precise, definite minded Carrington was not that kind of man.

"There ain't no such score," said I. "The man's a golf machine."

I turned to the ancient hero; I congratugot silence. But the crowd never bothered Mr. Moore. His blue eyes seemed to pop from his head with concentration; as he walked forward to the next shot they fairly crackled like ball. Once I spoke to him, a be arranging everything for our club. With the ex-champion arrived not only the glamour of the purse but certain other strange is loud, tight fitting clothes and with hard jowls. All during the match the ele-tentives for me, and they did some more work. He was——" Mrs. Bavin's voice grew now almost choked—"he was a stage hypnotist! Half fake and half real!"

"Is there such a thing?" I asked, lightly.

derstand when you talk. And I don't want to watch your mouth. It drives me mad."

She picked up another slate and wrote:

"God bless you both. You are lucky in her."

He grabbed the pencil from her.

"Don't write any more of that rubbish. You know——"

"Seh!" He read that from her lips.

"Damn! Damn!"

She put her hand over his mouth and talked to him seriously.

"I can't understand," he protested; "not half. She's all the saints in the calendar, I know; and all the beauties out of it. I don't want her. I want you. You're a funny, bossy little devil, aren't you? But I can't get on without you. I can't. Do you know how I watch you? A poor deaf beggar with just one thing in the world—a poor deaf devil that——"

"Don't! Don't!"

He could read that from her lips.

"Well, I am. A poor devil with only one pleasure in life, to lie here and watch you. You're just—just the map of the world. And don't I know it! You've five freckles, haven't you. The one just behind your left ear is hope. The one——"

"Don't; don't; don't! She's lovely; and I——"

"If you must say things, write them, so that I can understand."

She wrote.

"There's just nothing to say, dear, because you are an honorable gentleman. Keep the slate on which she wrote to you. That will remind you what a dear girl she is. Look! 'That's that.'"

"That's that!" he said, after an interval. "Yes. She may be only sticking to me from a sense of duty, you know." Sister shook her head. "Well, I'm going to find out. You'll teach me lip reading every day till I go, won't you? I'll fag at it like the old gentleman with horns!"

"Ye-es; but you must practice with her, too."

"Write it. I don't look upon your mouth as made for a gramophone, but for something else!"

She wrote.

"You never can understand when you don't want to, can you? You must practice with her, too."

"I won't. Promise me one thing for a consolation prize. Two things. Will you?"

"If I can."

"Don't let anybody know I'm learning lip reading from you, or suggest it. Promise."

She considered.

"On condition that you talk to her and to other people as well as to me," she wrote, "instead of writing to them."

"Very well; if you promise me the other thing. You'll kiss me before I go. I mean kiss; not just be kissed."

She nodded.

"God help us," he said.

She nodded again.

"Now I must go," she wrote.

She washed the slate and went as far as the door. He called then.

"Sister!"

She came slowly to him.

"The freckle on your left cheek is Delilah," he said; "and the one beside your mouth is mercy—mercy to a poor——"

She stooped suddenly and kissed him.

"I think I shall break my heart over you," she sobbed.

He could not read the words; but he thought they were something like that. He lay still, staring at the wall, after she had gone.

"I mustn't ask her for a kiss again," he decided; "not till I go. Then we couldn't help it. It will only make things worse for her if I kiss her. I'll learn lip reading harder than I'll let her know even. If I can understand what people say I shall find out whether Amy is just sticking to me because she's—what she is—or because she cares for me. I never thought she did so much. The engagement seemed just—just the sort of thing you do in wartime. Of course, if she's got fond of me. . . . A girl has the right to get fond of the chap she's engaged to. She's a pretty kid, too. But Sister's little face! Freckle No. 4 is honor. I've got that one."

Sister had written on the slate before she brought it to him the next morning.

I could not love you, dear, so much,
Loved I not honor more.

"That's what I call the freckle on your little chin," he said. "But I don't know what to call you. Sister? 'Tell me—chiefly that I may mention it in my prayers—what is your name?'"

"Cicely," she said.

"I can't lip read it."

"Try," she begged.

"Try? I could read that. Say it again, then. I don't mean 'Sister.' Wrong? Do it again, then. It looks like Silly. You are, aren't you? Mouth it again, my dear. Sissy, then? I'm no good at lip reading. Try? I am trying! Cicely? Is it? Cicely, Cicely, Cicely! I like saying it. Say 'Jack' and see if I can read that? You might mention Jack in your prayers. They seem to take no notice of mine. Don't cry, Cicely! Cicely, darling, don't cry! I can't read that. Write it."

"They don't forget, Jack. There's a song for a brave man that I'll bring you this evening, if I can find it."

She could not find the song. So she wrote out the words from memory in her neat little hand, which looked almost like engraving:

SOLDIERWORTH.

Let us give thanks to God:
Not for the level ways
Our easy feet have trod,
But for the hills that raise
The weary footed clod
To heights whence souls may gaze,
When we are under sod.

Let us give thanks to God:
Not that we rested soft,
But for the loaded hod
We panted 'neath so oft;
Not for the task fulfilled,
The building reared aloft—
But that He lets us build!

Aye! Let us thank the Lord:
Not for our place on earth,
Not for our living breath,
But that He doth accord
Our spirit soldierworth;
Honored to bear a sword,
And fight on to the death!

"Very fine sounding rot," he grumbled.

"You don't really think it's rot?" she wrote.

"No-o. . . . No. Put the slate away in my bag, Cicely. I'll keep it. If I'm soldierworth it will be because I'm your soldier. You're on top of my slate, all right. One kiss?"

"No, no! Not till we part. It will seem like the end of the world, won't it? Only one, dear!"

"You kiss me, too. My dear! My dear! Put the slate in my bag. I shall keep it always. Wait. I want you to write on it first. Right on top. There's room. It's my army order, and you're my general and I'm your troops. So write just what I tell you: 'The following order is issued to the troops under my command. CICELY.'"

She wrote it.

"Now give it to me," he said; and he wrote at the bottom:

"Noted. JOHN GRAY."

"O, girlie!" he cried. "You can make a jest of anything, but—put it in my bag."

The next day Gray spoke to the doctor. The doctor was so pleased at his finding speech that he phoned to the specialist; and the specialist was so pleased that he motored to the hospital on purpose to have Gray speak to him. After they had conversed for a time—the specialist doing his share on a slate—he asked Sister for a fresh one. He wrote on it:

"Be hopeful and keep on trying. Don't despair even of your hearing. A shock may awake the faculties that a shock put to sleep. Just as the visit of the girl you love has given back your speech, so something else may give you back your hearing; your marriage, perhaps, or your first child. Make effort, and trust to God for the result."

"Put that with his things to keep, Sister," he said.

The Sister put it in the bag with the other slate.

"He thinks it was seeing Amy," Gray remarked, when the specialist had gone; "but we know who gave me back my speech, don't we, Cicely! Mercy looks so merciful! And Delilah seems to be winking."

"No, no! Remember my slate."

"I couldn't lip read what you said. Come closer, so that I can watch your lips."

"No, no!"

"Did you say 'two, two?' Cicely?"

"It isn't right."

"Just one."

"One, then."

"Let me hold your hand. It isn't long we'll have each other. This little time we'll be together is our lives, you know. The rest won't be life."

"It isn't right, dear."

"Such a little hand! Little mother Cicely!"

"My big baby!"

"Of course, if I found out that Amy didn't really care for me? She might be doing it just from duty." Sister shook her head. "If she does care for me—I'm governed by the army order; your army order. There's no getting out of it, is there?"

Cicely.

"None—none."

"Our cursed luck. You may be thankful for hills, et cetera, in verse; but you can't be in prose!"

"You can be soldierworth in prose, dear. We just have to be."

"Yes—yes."

The next day he talked to the matron. He found she was wise and kind. Before she went she wrote this: "I, too, have had trouble; and I feel for you, and for Sister."

He stared then.

"Ah!" he said. "Umph! You've spotted us? Of course, I'm engaged to Miss Russell; and if she wants me—an engagement is an engagement; even a war engagement! I've got to marry her."

"It isn't much good to a girl to have a husband who loves some one else," the matron wrote. "It would probably be best for all if you told your fiancée the truth. That is obvious to every one here. Don't think Sister has mentioned it."

"It isn't my idea of honor," he told her.

"Of course," she wrote, "you must follow your own light, even if it's a will o' the wisp! God bless you. I must wash this off before Sister comes."

She was walking across the room; but Sister came just then.

"Give her the slate," Gray said.

"Yes," the matron wrote. "I knew you'd show it to Cicely. I think she knows I am fond of her. You love each other. I advise you to tell Miss Russell so."

He wrote under that before he passed the slate to Cicely:

"Not my idea of honor. JOHN GRAY."

Sister held out her hand for the pencil when she had read and wrote underneath:

"Or mine. CICELY BARKER."

"Put it in the bag," Gray said. "Army order No. 3!"

"I haven't done," cried the matron; and she wrote again.

"It would be hers. Honor pledged your heart. You propose to cheat her with a substitute. She wouldn't wish it."

"She mustn't know," Cicely wrote.

"She shan't know," Gray scrawled underneath. "Now, put it in the bag. Show matron 'Soldierworth,' Cicely."

The matron said that the better the soldier the more harm he did when he fought for the wrong cause, "but God bless and keep you both, my dear soldiers."

Cicely allowed him two kisses that day; because they wouldn't have much longer together, and it was soldier pay.

The next afternoon Amy came to see him again. It was a journey of three hours each way. That was the only reason why she did not come oftener.

"You must be very, very nice to her," Sister wrote to him, "and make her think that you love her very much. It's no use unless you do that. And, in time, you must really love her. I shall pray for it."

"You can't take them in like that up there," Gray commented. "They'll know you don't mean it."

"I shall pray till I do. So will you. We're both soldierworth, Jack."

"Both soldierworth. Yes. Let me kiss Mercy and Delilah. O! My girl!"

"O, Jack! Not any more. Not any more."

Amy was dressed in bright things that day, and she looked wondrous sweet. She had a great armful of chrysanthemums; and they were for Sister.

"She is lying down," the matron said, "and you won't make me wake her, will you? She's had a lot of night duty and she's not strong." She knew that it would hurt Sister to see Amy. "She will be so pleased. How lovely they are!"

"Next time," Amy smiled, "I will bring you some. I may, mayn't I? Will you give her my love; and say I brought them because she is so good to my boy?"

"I will tell her that," the matron promised.

Which was a deliberate and absolute prevarication!

"You are much better," Amy told the invalid—on his slate. "Quite a naughty boy, aren't you?"

He had put his arm round her, following instructions.

"And fancy your talking," she scrawled. "The doctor says it was the shock of seeing me. Fancy calling me a shock! He says another shock might give you your hearing. I wondered if it would shock you enough if I said I'd give you up. But you'd know I didn't mean it, wouldn't you? Are you glad to see me?"

"Very," Gray said. He held her closer; shut his eyes; tried to fancy that he held Sister. He could find no other way to put warmth into his caress. He must be much in love with his Cicely, he thought, to have no desire to hold all this loveliness and charm. Unfortunately, his thought was correct. He was much in love with Sister. There's no explaining love. It just is.

Amy snuggled up to him when he held her closer; stroked his hair; laughed; talked.

"But you can't hear, can you?" she wrote. "I haven't shocked you enough. Here's a shock. I shall never kiss you unless you ask me to. But you may always ask me."

He asked her; thought that his kiss seemed cold to hers, shut his eyes, and tried desperately to fancy that she was Sister.

"And it's a damnable thing to do!" he told himself; "an insult to both! And Cicely's up in her bedroom, knowing I'm canoodling with another girl, and breaking her little heart. I can see her clutching at things. O, my God!"

He always felt that he went through hell that afternoon. Amy was so kind and so sweet; so anxious to interest him; smiled and moved her head and her hands; bobbed her lovely head down to him whenever he asked for a kiss. "Barkis is willing," she wrote once.

She wrote and wrote and wrote. Such childish stuff, some of it. Her childishness was what made him sorriest for her; sorry that she should have a husband who didn't love her.

"I must write smaller, mustn't I, now I shall have to write such a lot? I'll put the basin close by, ready to wash the slate. One hardly dries before I finish the other. We'll have a lot of slates—six, I think. Miggs had three kittens. Such dears; but we only kept one. It's grown exactly like Tarzan next door. So we think. He always did take notice of Miggs. Dad won the billiard han-like going over to the postoffice in your sweater. Gillespie, I suppose, knew that, and it set him to work all the harder at the job of gathering popularity.

He was a tall man in his late forties, with something theatrically distinguished in his general makeup. His black hair was turning made them seem for the moment like visions, born of the clouds. Ours is the old witch land, and I thought of them, in this sudden moment of observation, as children of the air stirring some devil broth on that summit of a lonely hill. Then I caught fair sight of them. The witch semblance van-minded Carrington was not that kind of man.

"There ain't no such score," said I. "The man's a golf machine."

I turned to the ancient hero; I congratulated him, expecting to start a flood of conversation—either the detailed account of the match or a dissertation on some thrilling bit of knowledge like the history of the Byzantine emperors. He merely gave me a warm but flaccid hand and continued to smile foolishly. Then John B. Gillespie spoke up:

"The champion must have his rub down," said he; and both started for the clubhouse, leaving us gaping after them. Only then did I recover my egotism and discover that I had just qualified.

That was Saturday. The Sunday newspapers reach Case Harbor at about 8 o'clock; if you want them for breakfast you drive over to the drug store and get them yourself. As I entered that Sunday morning I met Mrs. Bavin coming out. Her face, between her smart sailor hat and her trim summer cape, was serious, but her eyes were snapping. And before I could speak she shoved a section of the Sunday Bulletin into my face. My eyes centered on a photograph of Edgerley Moore, two columns front page, sporting section, before I took in the head:

ELDERLY GOLFER
SHOOTS IN PAR

Edgerley Moore, Aged 60, Who Took Up Game a Year Ago, Performs Amazing Feat on Seagull Links.

"Do you see!" exclaimed Mrs. Bavin. "Did you ever read more than a four inch item about any of our tournaments before? The city papers usually just telephone to the steward for the score. But now—and I passed John B. Gillespie when I was driving down from the city last night. I'll just bet——" and here Mrs. Bavin resumed her tumbling of the newspapers. "Here it is—the real estate section—he hasn't been advertising lately and—yes! Look at that!"

Across a half page splashed an advertisement for Gillespie's Addition to Case Harbor, with special mention of the prettiest, sportiest golf links on the Atlantic coast.

"We're done!" exclaimed Mrs. Bavin morosely. "We might as well move away. O, why did I ever start that club?"

"Well, it's apparently hatched a champion anyway," I said.

"Yes, I suppose so," replied Mrs. Bavin. I had a sense that she was leaving volumes unsaid. Then, as though only the backfin of her thought was coming to the surface, she added:

"Did you know that Mr. Gillespie has closed his house for the summer and gone to live with Mr. Moore?"

"Well, I must say that this Damon and Pythias act is the best thing I know about Gillespie," I replied. "Any one who has the patience to endure that ghastly old bore——"

"Yes," said Mrs. Bavin, drawing out the word in a manner which registered again a world of thoughts in reserve.

WHEN, at the end of that week, we played off the matches, Edgerley Moore proved that he was no accident. He ran through all opposition like water through a filter. I was struck by my one and only spasm of real golf, and stayed to the semi-finals, when I blew up. So I didn't see him at work until the finals, where I helped police the course — for we had drawn a crowd. Not only had our links been for the first time invaded by the press but enthusiasts motored from links twenty-five miles away to see if it could be true—and found that it was. Mr. Moore was up against Harry Babson, our best golfer, who is handicapped at six in match play. Babson was in form that day and played his head off—a birdie on the second hole, mostly par on all the first round—but what could he do against a handicap of twelve and mechanically perfect golf? Mr. Moore won, two up, one to play.

The general result was a foregone conclusion to me before they had finished the first nine holes. Moore simply couldn't be beaten—I felt that in my bones. I had said it. The man was a golf machine. His driving was astonishing—fully as long as that of Harry Babson who is a stalwart ex-football player in his early thirties. An old phrase kept glancing in and out of my mind—he was playing like one possessed. The gallery grew toward the last a little disorderly, so that twice Harry Babson straightened up as he was addressing a ball and glared until he got silence. But the crowd never bothered Mr. Moore. His blue eyes seemed to pop from his head with concentration; as he walked forward to the next shot they fairly transfixed the ball. Once I spoke to him, a pleasant word of congratulation.

"I never talk while I am playing," he said shortly. Ten minutes later I heard some stranger in the crowd address him and get the same answer. He did not even throw a word to John B. Gillespie, his caddy. Gillespie himself spoke little—just now and then a brief, quiet word of advice as he handed out the proper club, like "Drop her over that bunker," or "Now run her down."

"He's the greatest thing ever uncovered in golf," said John B. Gillespie when the match was over. "The amateur champion at sixty—standing right here in these shoes."

"Going to enter in the county tournament?" asked some one. That event was coming off a fortnight hence at Goreham; it always brings out a large entry of high quality, for there are two or three famous courses to our north.

"I've already entered him," said John B. Gillespie, "and in the state tournament, too. Maybe the national can wait this year." Half of the gallery laughed at that, and half, like me, didn't.

When I emerged from the clubhouse, after talking over this nine day wonder from forty different angles, I met Mrs. Bavin standing by the corner of the parking place.

"Look!" she said, and gave a wide, impatient gesture of one of her long arms toward the door of the pro's quarters. There, entirely surrounded by golf writers and news photographers, stood John B. Gillespie talking genially and with theatrical gestures.

"You can see the papers tomorrow, can't you?" said Mrs. Bavin. "The quaint Seagull links and the beauty of the Harbor at the head of every item!"

I opened the newspapers next morning to realize that Mrs. Bavin had called the turn. Somehow, the beauty of the coast view from the Seagull links and the story of how the course had been made from a rough farm in a year, figured in every account. So, in two of them, did the amazing friendship between Mr. Moore and his caddy, coach, and manager, John B. Gillespie.

I must hurry through the next stage of this extraordinary career. Mr. Moore went up to Goreham, and won quite handily the county championship. By tradition, that is a handicap affair. The Goreham committee, like ours, couldn't really believe it, and handicapped him at 9 and 6. At these figures he raced through the tournament, defeating on the way Maurice Naylor, who has twice been runnerup in the national amateur championship.

He is a picturesque figure in golf, this Naylor. His defeat in the semi-finals by the sixty year old unknown brought Mr. Moore to the attention of the New York newspapers. It was, I understood, the dull and silly season of the year when journalism is looking for a sensation. Newspapers, magazines, syndicates—all turned toward Case Harbor. Every train seemed to bring spruce young men with roving eyes who carried canes slung over their forearms, and less spruce young men with big black cameras. Daily Mr. Moore was interviewed, photographed, filmed.

One thing about this interviewing process struck me as curious. Evidently he refused to talk about golf. True, he was quoted extensively by one yellow syndicate on the method by which a middle aged man could improve his game, but this bore the earmarks of fake; and Dr. Carrington recognized it as a rewriting of some articles by a famous Scotch professional which had been printed ten years before. But apparently he chattered genially, diffusely, and quite in his old manner of things in general. When the second wave of interviewers came over the top, Mr. Moore had been reading a book on the cave dwellings of the Dordogne. This newly acquired knowledge he droned out while the reporters employed every dodge to make him talk golf. On the way back to the station, some genius among them conceived a brilliant idea to dress up his interview, which he indiscreetly imparted to the rest. And next Sunday's papers had a new tag for Edgerley Moore—"The Distinguished Anthropologist Who Became a Champion Golfer."

NEXT Saturday Tommie Crowder, twice national amateur champion, came over for a special eighteen hole match. John B. Gillespie arranged it—he seemed by now to be arranging everything for our club. With the ex-champion arrived not only the gentlemen of the press but certain other strangers in loud, tight fitting clothes and with hard jowls. All during the match this element squirmed through the enormous gallery. I did not classify them until I saw the flash of a greenback, heard a whispered phrase about odds. Then I saw that we were drawing the professional gamblers. How they laid their money I had no idea; if they were backing Tommie Crowder, they lost. He played perfect golf that day—with one slip. On both rounds at the dog's leg fourth, he tried to drive over the rough instead of going round—a dangerous thing, for the carry is too long for anything but a freak drive. He succeeded the first time; but the second time he got into difficulties and had to pick up. That was the turning point; he was against a golf machine, running perfectly. On that hole Mr. Moore went one up and stayed there to the end. His card was 70, breaking the record for the course, held by himself.

When the shouting and the tumult were over there arose scandalized whispers about those gamblers. But public opinion had not quite crystallized as yet. Most felt, I suppose, as I did—that the state championship was only a fortnight away and that we didn't want to mar our chances. However, on top of that came an announcement which nearly brought action. Willie Carr, the famous British professional, then touring the country, was matched with our man on the following Saturday—a kind of final tuning up for the state championship. The public would be admitted—profits, over and above Willie Carr's fee, to go to the town hospital fund.

On the morning before that match I was practicing approach shots on the ninth green—for, like all the rest of us, I had been filled with inordinate ambition by the rise of Mr. Moore and felt in my heart that if the old dodo could do it I could. I had already reduced my card to 90. I looked up across the fairway and saw that Mrs. Bavin was approaching with her quick, striding walk.

"Jimmie," she said, "don't you really think this thing has gone far enough?" Her wave of the hand seemed to indicate the Seagull links, but I knew what she meant. Mrs. Bavin is so splendidly candid that she often pulls the truth straight out of you. What had been a mere distaste in me became suddenly a definite aversion, and I answered:

"I suppose it has. I suppose we must have a cleanup after he has played in the state championship," I said, temporizing.

"Jimmie Langford," announced Madge Bavin, definitely, "we're going to have a cleanup today!"

I looked her square in the eyes. They showed that she meant it. Now, her tone changed. It became serious, almost awed.

"Jimmie," she said, "I've got to have some one stand by me this afternoon. And Bob can't come on—he's held in Cleveland by a really important matter—it would be throwing down the firm if he did. And Jimmie, I'm coming to you—that sounds like asking a great deal, but it's really a compliment. I know I can depend on you—if you'll help."

"Of course I'll help!" I said rather impulsively. Mrs. Bavin gave me no chance to take that back.

"I knew you would," she said. "Begin by believing me—I've got something strange to tell you. Don't make objections until I've finished. Well, I've had John B. Gillespie looked up—he'd already been looked up by the information department of Bob's firm. He applied for a loan when he started Gillespie's Addition. And they turned him down. He got his loan later from the Speche outfit—you know about them—regular banking bucket shop—a pawnbroker's interest and long chances. But Bob's people refused him mainly because he wasn't a good moral risk."

"What was the matter with him?" I asked.

"Well, Gillespie isn't his name to begin with. That's almost enough. Before that he was known as Prof. Hansen—and that probably wasn't his real name, either. It's simply irritating the way those bank reports leave out the most interesting and important things. All they had to say about his past was that he'd left vaudeville because of the curious death of an assistant on the stage."

"Vaudeville!" said I.

"Wait," she said. "Bob saw the firm's detectives for me, and they did some more work. He was——" Mrs. Bavin's voice grew now almost choked—"he was a stage hypnotist! Half fake and half real!"

"Is there such a thing?" I asked, lightly.

"There is, indeed," replied Mrs. Bavin, still serious. "I've looked that up, too. He used to show in the west. One night down in Texas he picked some hick out of the audience and put him through all kinds of fancy gymnastic stunts. The poor fellow never came out of the trance—he had a weak heart and the performance finished him. That's the best construction of the story. But there are hints of a worse construction—at any rate, Prof. Hansen was tried for manslaughter. He crawled out of it somehow—but he quit the stage. It appears that stage hypnotism has gone out of fashion any way. Then he showed up in Minnesota under this name—boom real estate business, always with a crooked slant. And now he's among us. Do you begin to see, Jimmie?"

A LITTLE breath of the truth blew across my mind; for a second I felt a drawing sensation in the roots of my hair. Mrs. Bavin was studying my expression; it seemed to satisfy her, for she went on:

"Jimmie, it isn't ladylike to listen to servants' gossip, but it isn't ladylike to get into a fight, either. And when a woman's in a fight up to her ears—she's no lady. Mose, the colored boy who takes care of Mr. Moore—he's in love with my Cordelia. Of course, he tells her everything. I've pumped Cordelia. Do you know that since those two men went to live together Mr. Moore has lain on the sofa for hours seeming to be asleep, and that Mr. Gillespie has sat by his side talking to him?"

"But how——" I managed to falter.

"Yes," said Mrs. Bavin, "I thought of that. It's why I've been going to Dr. King in the city—you know—the great authority on hypnotism. He said at first that it was just possible—now he admits it must be so. Listen, Jimmie—I'm full of the subject. Hypnotism is only getting hold of the subconscious mind, making it take control. It's miraculous, the subconscious mind. It frightens you to think you're carrying such a thing around on your inside. When a real subject is really hypnotised—the third degree or whatever you call it—he does things he couldn't dream of doing when he was awake. It isn't exactly that Mr. Gillespie is playing Mr. Moore's game of golf for him. It's that Mr. Moore is a remarkable subject—you ought to know that, he's such an old dope—and his subconscious mind—with nothing in the way—is playing the game——"

"My heavens!" I put in suddenly. "My heavens!" For a picture suddenly sprang out of my memory—that autumn evening in the clubhouse when Dr. Carrington had delivered his dissertation on the mental factor in golf—the remark of Edgerley Moore.

"I'd come pretty near selling my soul to the devil to get that kind of mind"—and—yes, we had left Moore and Gillespie together in the clubhouse. All this I told in broken phrases to Mrs. Bavin. When I had finished we two middle aged people sat there on the warm, green fairway with the August sunlight streaming about us, and shivered like children who have been telling ghost stories in the winter darkness.

"What's the end of this game?" I asked finally.

"The end," Mrs. Bavin said, "will come when he's sold off Gillespie's Addition and cleaned up with his gamblers. That's where he went too far—dragging in the gamblers—crooks always do go too far."

"But how can he get rid of Mr. Moore—without giving the whole thing away?" I persisted.

Mrs. Bavin grew serious again.

"Well, suicide could be suggested to him, couldn't it? Suicide when Mr. Gillespie was a hundred miles away with a perfect alibi—the man is capable of anything—don't you see that I'm probably saving the life of poor, foolish old Mr. Moore?"

"What are you going to do?" I asked, believing her.

"You're head policeman for the course this afternoon, aren't you? I want you to keep me in front of the gallery—close up."

"That's easy; I can give you a badge and make you my assistant."

"Fine! And wait—wait until I'm ready. I won't act until I know which way he's playing his money today. I want to finish him there, too. I think," she added mus-

Soldierworth
by Owen Oliver

Broken by the War, the Aviator Loved One Woman and Was Pledged to Marry Another; Then Came the Test of Soldierworth.

IT was in the last days of the great offensive that Jack Gray went down. He was enfilading a German trench from an airplane and a machine gunner caught him. The wounded man and the wounded machine got back to the British lines, but the strength of one or the other failed when it came to the final descent. After that he lost some weeks from his life.

No big bones were broken, and the doctors said that his wounds would soon heal. "The concussion's the trouble," the specialist at the base pronounced. "It's stunned all the nerve centers. And how far they'll get going again—well, time must show!"

When Gray was first in the hospital in France he neither moved, nor saw, nor heard, nor spoke. Sight came back suddenly; but he was like a baby, scarcely realising what he saw till he was home in England. Then he began to take notice. What he noticed first and most was the pale little Sister who had charge of him. She looked so clean and so kind, and she found out what he wanted so much better than any one else. He felt toward her much as a child feels toward its mother. He hadn't many memories then to compete with her; and when they returned they did not compete successfully.

One morning, when he had come to move his limbs easily, she brought him a slate and put a pencil in his hand. As he only stared at her, she took the pencil and wrote on the slate in a small and precise hand:

"If you can't talk, write on this."

"You talk," he wrote shakily.

He saw her little mouth open and shut; but he did not hear.

"Am I deaf, too?" he penciled.

"At present," she wrote.

"Anything else?"

"You will soon get quite well, except perhaps your hearing. The doctor thinks you can speak now, if you try. Try."

He thought that he spoke, but he did not hear anything. He hated speaking into silence. It felt like throwing things into a bottomless pit. So he decided he wouldn't do it, but hold his conversations on the slate. Then he would know what he had said.

After a day or two, when he had begun to write fluently and to take an interest in his food, and to ask for things, Sister wrote: "Name and address of any one you want to see."

"I don't," he scribbled.

Somehow Sister was glad that he didn't.

"Try to talk," she wrote then.

"I won't."

"Then I won't talk to you."

"Stay a little while and write."

"If I stay will you be good and do what I tell you?"

"What is it?"

"Two things. You're to try to understand when I talk. Lip reading, you know."

"That means my hearing's gone, eh?"

"We hope it will come back; but it would pass the time to learn lip reading."

"Humbug! You mean I shan't ever hear."

"I hope you will. I've a book on lip reading. Will you read it?"

"If you teach me."

"Yes. I'll speak things and write them on the slate; and you must watch my mouth and throat and try to learn to recognise the words without looking at the writing."

"All right," he penciled.

He did not feel that he wanted to learn lip reading; but it would be nice to lie and watch Sister's little mouth and her little face. He had learned that anyhow! There were five freckles on it. He knew them all. Other people didn't call Sister specially good looking, but he did. Everything on her face was exactly in the right place and ought to be there!

"You must not write on the slate, but speak. You can; if you make up your mind. The doctor says so."

"Doctors are liars," he stated—slatewise "Try."

"I don't want to."

"I want you to, so that I can help you—please!"

"I'll try to talk to you, but not to any one else," he wrote.

"Then," the home specialist said, when she reported to him, "you must give him as much time as you possibly can. Some one must coax him somehow to find and use such capacities as he has left. Goodness knows what they are. I don't. I hope he may regain everything but hearing—that isn't likely—if you're patient with him. The will has been stunned with the rest. He'll be a difficulty to himself. You seem able to manage him a bit, Sister. Make him your pet baby for the time being."

She had done that already. So she only continued to do so.

Gray studied lip reading zealously, because he liked watching Sister's mouth and her face and the rest of her. She made him talk a little, as the price of her presence; but even to her he would not speak if he could help it. He loathed casting his words into the unheard. To other people he always talked on the slate; and he usually said, "Want Sister?"

"He is like a big baby," she declared. "My big baby!" she thought. Sister liked being watched by Maj. Gray nearly as much as he liked watching her! She did not want any one else to help her look after him; but she thought that his people ought to know about him.

"Isn't there any one you want to see?" she wrote one afternoon. His lip reading was not yet nearly good enough to read a whole sentence from her lips.

"I don't want to see her," he wrote.

"Her!" Sister's pale face grew a trifle paler. She bent over the slate to hide it while she wrote.

"Ought you to?"

He considered; held out his hand for the slate.

"No," she denied. "You must speak."

"It was a war engagement," he said, slowly. "We just fell into it. Like lots of fools did! I shan't hold her to it. Not now I'm messed up."

"She will hold you to it," Sister wrote, "if she's a true woman."

"O," he said, "she's all right. Fine girl, I should think. Sporting! I dare say she'd be sport enough to stay by the wreck, if I wanted her to. But I don't."

"Suppose," Sister wrote, "she wants to? That doesn't require an answer, does it? Write her name and address, and I'll send for her."

She gave him the slate; went and looked out of the window while he wrote. "What a fool I am," she told herself. "What a little fool! He seemed like my big baby."

"Sister!" he called. "Sister!"

He gave her the slate.

"Wait till I'm stronger," he had written. "I can't stand strangers yet."

"She can't be a stranger, as you're engaged to her," she wrote.

"Only a war engagement. You know how people tumbled into them."

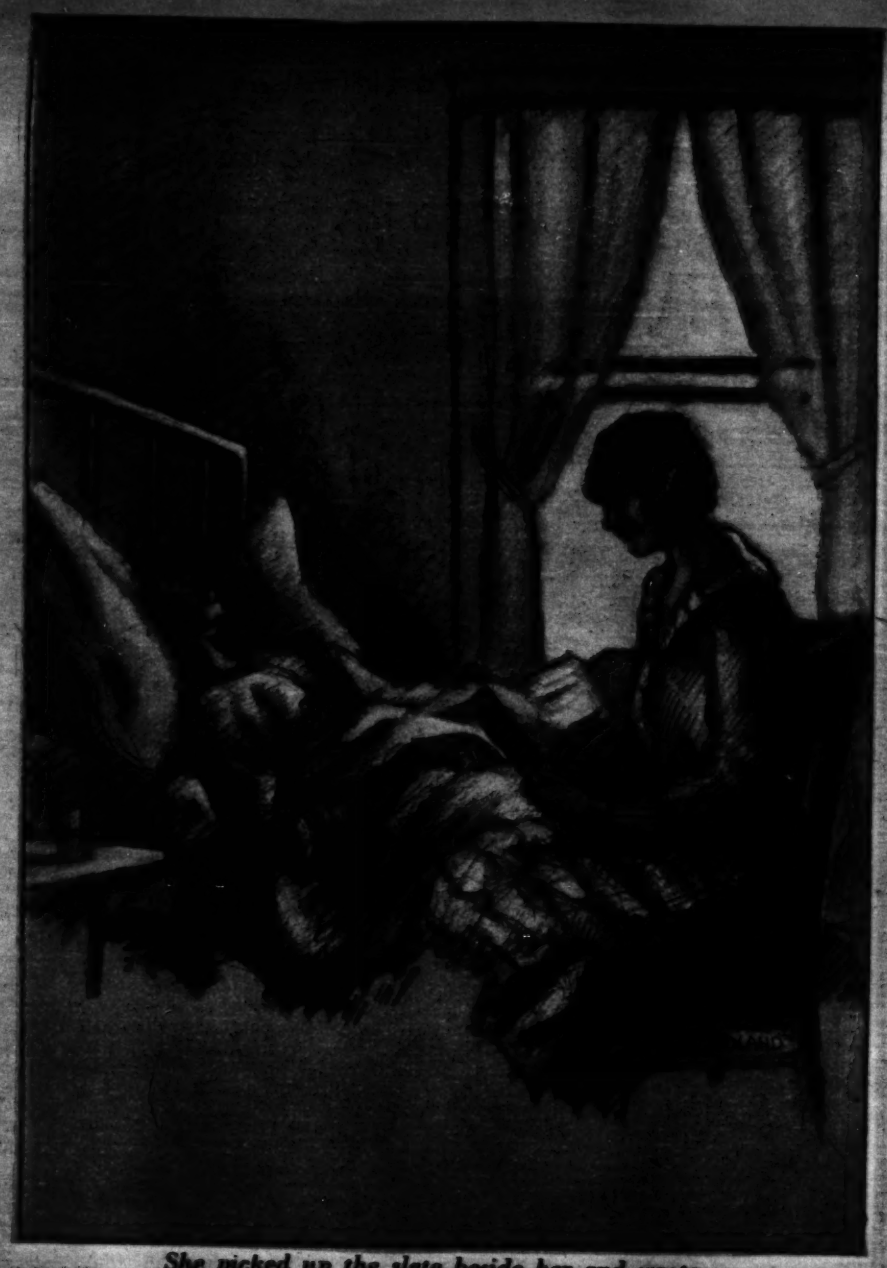
"When you see her——"

He snatched the slate away.

"I won't. If you bother me about her I won't speak; not even to you."

He threatened to become excited, and the specialist always said that he must not be worried on any account; and he was her big baby. So she said he should wait a little while, till the scars had gone and he "looked pretty again."

It was a fortnight before she made him write to "Miss Amy Russell, 2 Elm Grove, Badderly." He was well enough to write himself by then; and she would not help him with the letter. He said he should offer the girl her freedom, and she did not tell him not to do so.



She picked up the slate beside her and wrote.

"If she wants to be free," she reasoned to herself, "he'll be just as well without her. A wife is no use to any one like that unless she cares very much for him. I dare say the girl's some giddy, thoughtless creature who won't want a poor dear fellow who can't hear. Girls forget that the men were crippled for England—for us. I expect she's that sort."

However, Amy Russell did not turn out to be that sort. As a plain matter of fact, she was a very, very nice girl indeed, even if she was a trifle foolish and impulsive and had tumbled recklessly into a war engagement. She had no idea of tumbling out because her fiancé was wounded. She looked upon his injuries just as something which must bind them closer and make her nicer to him. She came by the first train after she had the letter. She was dressed in black, because he had been in the lists as "missing and probably killed," being confused with another Gray. Sister's heart sank directly she saw her. Such a little lady! And so good looking! Sister was sorely afraid that she was as good as she looked.

"O, why, why, why," she cried, "didn't you send for me before?"

"He wanted his scars to heal first," Sister explained. "Perhaps you should take that as a compliment. He has had a most severe shock, and it is only passing off slowly. In time we hope it will all pass, except the deafness; but at present he is neurasthenic; hasn't a grip of himself. So we have to humor him. He is rather—rather like a big baby. You won't be cross with him, will you?"

"Cross with him?" The girl opened her lovely blue eyes wide. "I! Poor boy, no! May I go in?"

Sister took her in, or, rather, to the door. She did not enter the room to see the meeting, but went away to her own room and cried.

"But I'm glad that he has some one so lovely," she told herself. "She won't be so good to him as I would have been; but she'll try to be, though. No, I won't be a mean, spiteful cat. There's no 'though.' She's ever so nice; and so beautiful! I felt a common little thing beside her. He won't think of me any more, now she's come. But I—I used to laugh at people falling in love. Now I shan't. I don't think I shall laugh at anything any more. God bless him. I don't matter."

Amy smiled a little and cried a little over the wounded man; jabbered a great deal, and then remembered that he could not hear, and picked up the slate and penciled on it in a big, sprawling hand. Somehow the sprawl annoyed him after Sister's tiny, precise writing.

"Of course it will make no difference to me. I shall be able to talk as much as I like without boring you. Rather nice!"

She dabbed her eyes and then laughed. They had been a laughing boy and girl, and had principally laughed themselves into their engagement.

He answered on the slate. He didn't mean to speak to anybody but Sister.

"It will make a difference, and you won't be able to stick it. Shan't blame you for calling off. You can't live on a slate."

She snatched the pencil.

"Of course I can. I want to. It's awfully hard for you, poor boy; but I'll make it as easy as I can."

He shook his head.

"You're a real sport, Amy; but it will be better for both to cry off."

"Is there any one else?" she wrote swiftly.

"No." (What else could he write?)

"Then I shan't cry off. That's that. Be a good boy and don't worry any more. Now tell me all about how it happened. Write it in this notebook. The slate won't do. I want it to keep."

When she had gone he wrote "Sister" at the bottom of the slate, and, when she came, he handed it to her. She carried it over to the basin and picked up the sponge.

"Read it," he called sharply.

She shook her head and dipped the sponge in the water.

"For God's sake, read it," he begged hoarsely. "It's easier than telling you."

She read; presently turned and spoke; but he shook his head.

"Write it," he begged. "I can't half unangly, "that he's playing Mr. Moore to win. The time for the double cross hasn't come yet. He'll do that at the state championship or some big affair. But you can't be sure——"

By now, curiosity had overcome every other impulse in me and again I asked squarely:

"Madge Bavin, what is it you are going to do?"

"Jimmie," she said, "I've worked hard lashing myself up to what I'm going to do. If any one interposed a single objection I'd get scared, probably, and back out at the last moment—I'm just that much of a poor, weak woman. Keep me to the front of the crowd—keep close to me—and stand by even if it means a real fight——"

I AM afraid I slacked my duty as head policeman that afternoon, but nearly every playing member of our club was helping, and we kept the clamorous populace back of the rope somehow. Glancing over the gallery as we prepared to start, I saw that the gamblers were with us again in added force and that all the golfing world of New England seemed to be represented. Willie Carr was first to the tee—a tall, supple Briton with clay colored hair and mustache, noted for his utter imperturbability. I had never seen him play before, and even in my condition of suppressed anxiety I watched with interest to see how he got his famous Big Bertha drives with his equally famous short back swing. A flick of the wrists seemed to do it; the ball screeched like a sea gull and stopped rolling beyond a ridge which I had never before seen carried by a drive. That is a 490 yard hole, the last shot uphill. I saw that an accurate iron shot with power like Carr's would easily lay it on the green in two. Our man—or should I say our men—couldn't do that. This was a matter of muscle, not mind. You had to be born with such wrists as Carr's.

John B. Gillespie, caddying, teed the ball, handed Mr. Moore his driver, straightened up, spoke in a quiet, even tone such as an expert horse trainer uses to command his animal.

"Just your regular drive—low and to the right of the tree yonder," he said. And my sporting sense became absorbed in the deeper interest. Mr. Moore seemed to reach for the club automatically; and automatically he swung back, swung forward, his gaze fixed, intent. The ball swept not ten feet at any time from the grass, and seemed to roll forever. It stopped at length a good bit beyond the two hundred yard mark.

As we followed up, I watched Moore and Gillespie and called myself an ass not to have suspected before. The caddy was hanging as close to the champion as a policeman to a captured thief. Moore walked mechanically, his eyes fixed on the distant ball; the roving and piercing eye of Gillespie, now grown sinister to me because of my knowledge, searched fairway, bunkers, and distant green as though he were playing the game—as indeed he was. Arrived at the ball, he took out a brassie spoon, handed it to his man, and, "Full length over that little bunker," he said. He had scarcely finished speaking before Mr. Moore addressed the ball and sent it fair and true, first soaring and then running over the low, untrapped bunker. He lay some seventy-five yards from the green with a nasty, tricky approach if he elected—or Gillespie elected—to pitch and run.

The Briton was a bit of a golf machine himself. The advance guard of the gallery had scarcely reached him before, with one keen, appraising glance toward the green, he had given his short back swing, flicked with his wrists, and—the cheer that began in the main gallery was echoed by an offshoot of the crowd which had gathered up by the green to see final results. The Briton was on in two. Beyond the bunker John B. Gillespie drew out a mashie niblick. I couldn't hear all he said, so quiet and even was his tone, but I caught "a chip"—and "a yard uphill from the pin."

We found that the Englishman had just made the green—he had a putt of forty feet or more across two nasty undulations—and Moore lay not five feet from the pin. The English pro, who already had practically a birdie, tried to make it an eagle and almost succeeded; his approach putt died a foot from the cup. "Just roll it into that hole—gently!" said Gillespie. The automaton did it. The Englishman, taking as much care as though he had a forty foot putt, holed out. Mechanical steadiness had just stood off brilliance. They had halved for a birdie four.

I shan't try to describe the match in detail—I shan't try to describe in detail anything about the next two hours. Everything—emotions, memories, impressions—are too mixed. I understand now why men who have been in battle can never tell you much of anything that happened after they went over the top. I remember a sense of sinister quality in Gillespie which grew almost to horror. I began with a horror of Moore, too—a man made into a flabby machine—but that changed to a kind of protecting pity. Then there was the irritation of waiting, waiting, for Mrs. Bavin, hope of the situation, to act. But she didn't—just ignored her duty as policewoman to the course, clung close to the rope and to me, and watched. I remember a wonder, which became an obsessing curiosity, as to what she intended doing.

As I look over my copy of the card to that immortal match, I realize that I must have come out of the haze which fogs my memory at the sixteenth hole. Still perfect, mechanical golf was standing off strength and genius. They were all square. The card shows that ten holes had already been halved. Here, a streak of genius blazed from the Englishman. He made his longest drive of the day; holed his iron approach not for a birdie but for an eagle. Our champion barely laid his second shot to the edge of the green. Instead of picking up—Moore—I might almost say Gillespie—approached and ran down in a four. Watching Gillespie intently I could see that he was disturbed. His eyes glanced hesitantly from right to left. The score occurred to me. If they halved the remaining two holes as they had been doing, the Briton had won. I spoke to Mrs. Bavin then—I believe it was the first word I had addressed to her that afternoon.

"It's Moore he's betting on," I whispered.

"Yes—I saw——" she whispered back, almost impatiently.

But on the seventeenth, brilliance paid for itself, as it usually does. The Briton hooked to the rough in an impossible lie; he had to chop downward almost perpendicularly to get it out at all. He took five; the golf machine holed out in four, and they were all square with one to play. When the tiny plunk of Mr. Moore's ball on the metal of the cup started the gallery cheering, a sway of Mrs. Bavin's figure brought her shoulder against mine. She was trembling. I looked down and realized that it was not the tremor of awe such as we had experienced that morning on the links, but rather the quiver of a thoroughbred waiting for the signal to start. Why didn't she start? I felt an irritation of impatience toward Mrs. Bavin. There was only one more hole to play—and if Mr. Moore won it——

That last hole is rather long for par four. The calm, unemotional Englishman hit too far; I saw the white dot of the ball leap into the air and disappear behind a clump of low bushes. Moore laid his drive with meticulous accuracy dead on the strip of fairway, got his full distance with perfect direction on his wooden second, and laid it not six yards from the edge of the green. Breathless, the gallery watched the professional study the situation for a full two minutes. A second shot to the green was impossible; a bush had him completely blocked. He accepted the inevitable, popped out with his mashie niblick. I suppose the uncanny, supernatural accuracy of Mr. Moore's performance was getting on even his sturdy British nerves; for the next shot, which he chose to make with a cleek, ran too fast to the green, skidded over it, rolled down the bank and into the road. He was a shot behind with a bad lie. I glanced at Mrs. Bavin. She was quivering again. And now she addressed me for the first time.

"Keep me close and listen to what Gillespie says," she whispered. "If he tells Mr. Moore to try to hole out——"

The Briton's chip shot from that tricky lie went wild. It stopped just at the edge of the long, undulating green at least fifty feet from the hole and with two ridges to carry. He was shooting five and Moore three; in all probability only by a miracle putt could the visitor even get a half and carry the match to extra holes.

Mrs. Bavin and I, ducking through the ropes, as was our right, crowded close to where Gillespie stood studying the terrain with his light, intent eyes. He drew out an approaching club and spoke at last in that even, almost monotonous tone:

"Run it up there; a yard or so below the hole." I heard a long breath escape Mrs. Bavin.

Mechanically, Moore laid the ball as specified. A premature cheer, rudely checked by the ushers, escaped from the crowd as Willie Carr, the Briton, daring a superb chance, tried to make it and ran his approach shot eight feet beyond the hole. Mr. Moore had only a three foot putt to win.

And then, as Gillespie drew the putter from his bag, handed it to Mr. Moore, Mrs. Bavin stepped forward and touched Gillespie on the arm; he started so violently that his head jerked backward. She spoke in his ear; but I heard.

"I suppose when you've made him hole out you're going to kill him—as you did that man in Texas—you murderer!" she said. Gillespie had been holding the golf bag loosely by the handle. His fingers seemed to go limp; the clubs clattered on to the green. At this sound I saw a nervous jerk or so from the heads of the gallery beyond the ropes; then all eyes went back to Mr. Moore. I realized that the presence of Madge and me inside the ropes was attracting no attention; we were policing the course and had that privilege. All this in the instant while Madge Bavin drew her breath to add:

"Stay just where you are, Prof. Hansen. If you make one move or say one word I'll tell your record to the crowd—give your whole game away!"

The jaw of John B. Gillespie went slack, his complexion turned green. I saw that he was paralyzed, silenced, and needed no further present attention. I turned, and so did Madge Bavin, toward Edgerley Moore. He had been standing like a statue over his Schenectady putter; and you could hear the breathing of the gallery as they waited for him to make that one easy stroke which meant victory. But now he raised up a little and turned his head uncertainly in our direction with the look of an old dog who is expecting his master's call. The motion released the tension of the crowd; a faint buzz of whispers broke out. And Madge Bavin strolled past Mr. Moore with the casual air of an official who is seeing that all is well. As she passed she spoke. Her voice, I suppose, was lower than when she addressed Gillespie—it could not have carried to the crowd behind the ropes. Yet at the moment it seemed to me that the whole town must hear it. Even, monotonous—yet how it rang!

"Drive it over the bulletin board there," she said. "Drive it as far as you can!"

Mr. Moore straightened his shoulders; I saw the wooden head of his putter come up with a perfect, slow back swing; saw it sweep down, saw a divot spring from the surface of the green. The ball soared over the bulletin board, over the driveway—was lost to view. It landed, I learned later, in the brook a good hundred and forty yards away. The fixed eyes of the gaping gallery followed the ball. Before they looked back Mrs. Bavin had spoken again to Mr. Moore:

"You will sit down. You will go to sleep—but you can still walk——" By the time the gallery turned back its gaze to the enactor of this remarkable performance, Mr. Moore had sunk down on the green with something of the motion of a baby who is learning to walk, and his eyes slowly closed. Then babel broke out; people began to come through the ropes; but Mrs. Bavin, leaning over Edgerley Moore, cried—in her natural tone now:

"Give him air—send Dr. Carrington here!" Almost as soon as she spoke the doctor was at her side.

"He can walk, doctor—get him to the clubhouse," she said—and then, in Moore's ear: "Get up when the doctor helps you. Go with him!" Moore, the doctor supporting him, struggled to his feet. His eyes were still closed. "Mr. Gillespie—help on the other side," she whipped out—"and Jimmie"—this in an aside to me—"keep them off—but join us inside." All the way I fought a desperate rear guard action with the press and the gamblers. I succeeded somehow; when I arrived in the bedroom to which they had taken Mr. Moore I saw that some one—either Gillespie or Mrs. Bavin—had awakened him from trance. He lay on the bed looking bewildered but normal. And no sooner had I slammed and locked the door than Mrs. Bavin turned on John B. Gillespie.

"You have twenty-four hours to leave this town—and take your addition with you——" she began. The rest was splendid—but what with my anxiety lest the reporters clamoring in the hall break in on us, what with my general emotional upheaval, only flashes stick in my memory, like: "The full story of that Texas episode—I've been working with Dr. King, I tell you—a subject in the third stage of hypnosis will take suggestion from any one—I did it publicly so that I'd have the proof in case you should try one single trick on me—you're to say to the reporters that this is a nervous collapse—I tell you, if you make a move I don't like I'll give the full story to the newspapers—that's all, Mr. Gillespie—go and don't come back!"

I remember the face of Gillespie—pale, the lines fallen, the power gone from his eyes. I remember that he babbled out a futile word of denial or protest here and there, which Mrs. Bavin stopped instantly with her own steely tones. At this final command she turned to me. And I, moving as though myself hypnotized, unlocked the door, somehow jammed the unresisting Gillespie into a cranny of the crowd of questioning reporters, dammed the flood by main force, and locked the door again.

Madge Bavin turned to Edgerley Moore. "Now," she said with all the mother of her in her tone, "we'll take care of your case. Don't worry. We're going to get you out of this so that no one will ever suspect."

MADGE BAVIN carried the operation through to the end; however, the next week was a period of strain not only for her but for Carrington and me, her committee on suppression. We got Mr. Moore to Carrington's private hospital under charge of a head nurse, who is officially deaf, dumb, and blind. The doctor and I were always on guard; and we managed to put over our story to the press—that the strain of a tournament season had been too much for a man of Edgerley Moore's advanced years; that a sudden mental aberration made him drive on the last green instead of putting, and then collapse. It wasn't all a lie. He had been under an awful strain of another kind; and when, explaining as to a child, we got into his dopey old mind the full enormity of what he had done, he was frightfully broken up. Mr. Moore was hazy on every subject except archaeology, and especially so on the ethics of amateur sport.

A week later the creditors swooped down on the offices of the missing Gillespie and found that the whole proposition was a shell. He had driven the last nail into his own coffin when he scraped all his ready cash together to bet on Mr. Moore against Willie Carr. In that rush of the crowd over the green after Mr. Moore's singular performance, some unknown person—one of the gamblers beyond doubt—stole Willie Carr's ball so that the match was never finished and all bets were off. Long afterward a detective in Bob Bavin's firm learned that Gillespie's betting commissioners hung on to his money. They believed that he had double crossed them and shrewdly suspected that he would never dare make a protest.

But the news of Mr. Gillespie's failure and disappearance drew the attention of the newspapers momentarily away from Mr. Moore and gave us our opening. That night we motored our patient down to New York and put him on a steamer for England. He never came back.

Dr. Carrington was in London the next year and ran across him in New Oxford street. He had settled down near the British Museum, which has more odd and dull books of useless fact than any other library in the world. He was reading eight hours a day, had other dopes of his own class to talk with of evenings and was quite contented and happy. Dr. Carrington took him to luncheon and, following an almost irresistible impulse, turned the conversation indelicately toward Mr. Moore's career at golf.

The doctor said afterward that he felt a little conscience stricken when he did this; but he certainly paid high. The disagreeable episode which closed his career as champion had evaporated from Mr. Moore's mind; he remembered only his glories. He held Dr. Carrington until nearly 4 o'clock while he droned out the full details of every round he had ever played. As a device for breaking away Dr. Carrington dragged in a reference to Gillespie and the climax of the last match. At that Mr. Moore's eyes flickered and his expression grew for a moment sheepish. But he recovered almost instantly.

"Well, anyhow," he cackled, "this old dog had his day!"

The World Outside

by Harold MacGrath

"In a dead world like this."

THE STORY THUS FAR.

AN adventure for $10,000—this is the bizarre offer made to Collingswood Jeremiah Bancroft, who has just inherited his father's $7,000,000, by a stranger who says he represents the Great Adventure company, and who is tossed into Jerry's ramshackle dwelling by a terrific storm. Jerry, sitting among his curios and the 1,200 books he is reading, at first scoffs and then ponders, recalling his father's mysterious death, yet to be solved, and his own sheltered, uneventful 24 years. He fails to notice the malevolent looks that the stranger darts at him. The man explains that he has sold many successful adventures and that Jerry's is to begin at once, provided he signs a contract to go into the great world outside and meet it.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

A Girl in Distress.

"ASK as many questions as you like," said the seller of adventure in response to Bancroft's query.

"Supposing I signed a contract for an adventure," said Bancroft. "Later I fall in love. Wouldn't it be likely for me to distrust her as one of your paid puppets? How about that?"

"You read the prospectus a little hurriedly. All we offer is man-stuff. 'For love is not a subject of reasoning but of feeling, and therefore there are no common principles upon which one can persuade another concerning it.' So says our mutual friend, Boswell. If a young and pretty woman entered the game, she would enter it naturally, in the true adventurous style. And if the right sort, your ten thousand will have been well invested."

"You have an answer for everything."

"A man who sells anything should have. Well, I'll leave the prospectus, a photograph of George Bellman, who bought one of our adventures, together with a synopsis of what befell him. Understand, part of the adventure is ours, part of it the natural sequence of events." The adventurer placed the photograph and synopsis on the desk. "Here is our regular address."

"The Bolivia Emerald company," read Bancroft, "West Forty-second, near Broadway."

"That is the sign on our doors. We should hesitate to use the Great Adventure company, for reasons already explained. Ostensibly we are manipulating—not promoting—a small emerald mine from which we are really taking a quantity of marketable emeralds. These stones cover our expenses during dull times, when we find nothing but wishy-washy youth."

Bancroft grinned. "If I could go on an adventure with you as a side partner, why, I don't say."

"Then it would become a Cook's tour. Still, I'm obliged for the thought," the adventurer added dryly. "We may get together. Who can say?" He strapped the portfolio and rose.

At this moment there came a tremendous rumble of thunder; forked lightning darted hither and yon; the wind rose to tempest strength, and the old house trembled. The two men stood listening, abstractedly perhaps. The adventurer turned, his eyes twinkling with fictitious merriment.

"All that is needed," he said, shifting the portfolio under his arm, "to perfect the moment is for me to vanish in a cloud of sulphurous smoke."

"I wonder if it would astonish me?" said Bancroft, laughing. Then he observed Mrs. Horne in the doorway. Her attitude was hesitant.

"Supper is on the table, sir," she announced.

"I say," said Bancroft, with that ready hospitality which is still to be found among the country folk, "have supper with me. Come along. The local hotel is pretty poor, and I can give you steak, fried potatoes, salad, and some apple pie to remember. The worst of the blow will be over in an hour."

"Supper?" The adventurer's head came about with a jerk. "Supper—here?"

Another tableau, except for three roving glances: there was diffidence in old Mrs. Horne's, tolerance in Bancroft's; but in the glances of the adventurer there was something akin to the look of a marauding wolf who unexpectedly finds himself caught in a trap.

"YES; come and have supper," urged Bancroft, who wouldn't have turned forth a tramp into such a storm. Not that this charitable instinct was wholly accountable for the present invitation. There was a sudden-born craving for company and entertainment; and this odd stranger, he would be both. "Come along. It's a quarter of a mile from here to the hotel, and the walk will be no picnic in this downpour."

Bancroft was young. He had by constant study acquired a formidable array of facts, even digested them; but as yet few of these facts had been exercised. He was, then, something like a fine book, waiting for some one to cut the leaves. Those outside forces which sharpen a man's wits and strengthen his defenses had not yet touched him save in a negligible degree. His knowledge of physiognomy was at present ordinary, in no wise curious or deliberate. He had never had any cause to study the human countenance. Here, in the village, he knew everybody by their acts; their faces were indicative of this or that person, not of this or that character. So then, throughout this remarkable interview he missed the cold menace which from time to time revealed itself behind the smiling blue eyes of the unknown.

Who suddenly began to laugh.

Now, while it is true that Bancroft's eyes were untrained in the art of reading expression on human faces, his ears were sharp enough in the translation of sounds. Once more he sensed the hollowness of this laughter, the wall or dark cavern from behind which or out of which it came. There was however, one visible point: the laughter, which began abruptly and ended arruptly, did not signal its approach by a smile nor its passing.

"You are asking me to stay to supper?"

"Sure; there's plenty."

The stranger became conscious of an unalterable fact, that this boy was no fool, that he was educated far beyond his years; that if he were romantical he regulated such flights by the leash of reason. He might be reckless, but he would never be absurd. Refuse the supper, and the boy would forget all about the Great Adventure company. He must, then, in order to promote his sinister plans, photograph himself indelibly upon the youngster's memory. But to break bread under this roof! He flung his portfolio upon the chair.

"Hang it!" he said, with a gayety which would have deceived the Cumaean Sibyl; "I'll go you. I feel that I shall be perfectly at home!"

"Another plate, Mrs. Horne."

"I put another one on, sir, not knowing——"

"Come along, then, Boswell," said Bancroft, jovially. "I say, do you drink?"

"Occasionally; but I am more or less a temperate man, Mr. Bancroft."

"The cellar is full of the stuff, though I've never opened any of it. Sometimes, in the fields during harvest, I've taken my glass of eggnog, made with hard cider."

"Nobody in the village told me your father drank."

"He didn't. He was a teetotaler."

"Ah! Another one of those foreclosures."

"Possibly. I'll take the candle and we'll explore. You can pick out the brand you like."

"That's royal, I must say. Lead on."

Inwardly the adventurer smiled. He reached into the other's mind and opened the nebulous idea forming there, as he might have opened a ripe plum. Get him drunk, eh, so he would babble? Decidedly the boy had an old head on his shoulders.

The whole south end of the cellar was lined with sloping racks, upon which reposed three or four hundred bottles, covered with dust and cobwebs. The adventurer seized the candle and bent to scrutinize a bottle. Romanee Conti. So the wine was here, too? Romanee Conti, Clos de Vougeot, and Chateau Yquem! He leaned against an apple barrel and began to chuckle, unmindful that the tallow from the candle dripped upon his shoes.

"In a dead world like this!" he said. "Have you any opinion of what you have got here?"

"No."

"How long has it been here?"

"O, ever since I can remember. Pick out your bottle. The steak will be getting cold."

The adventurer returned the candle and selected a bottle of Romanee Conti, which he wrapped in his handkerchief, careless of the dust, and tucked under his arm. He followed Bancroft into the dining room.

"You will have to drink it out of an ordinary goblet," said Bancroft. "I suppose there are some formalities, some ceremonial, in opening a bottle of this stuff; but I'm a green hand on that score."

"Will you join me?"

"Well, I don't suppose a glass will be my utter damnation."

"You never can tell."

"How much is the stuff worth?"

"Somewhere around ten thousand."

BANCROFT'S sensation was one of indifference; and he began immediately to analyze this indifference. Not so long ago the information would have wrenched a shout of incredulity out of him, while now he accepted it as something ordinarily possible. A millionaire, why shouldn't his wine cellar be worth something?

"I could sell it for you tomorrow," said the adventurer.

"Bootleg it?"

"Something like that, of course."

Bancroft laughed contentedly, and began to attack his steak.

But the significance of the laughter did not escape the keen ears of his guest. "There are bootleggers and bootleggers," he said gravely. "You know nothing about real wine, and I do. It will be a crime to permit this nectar eventually to turn to sediment and bitterness. Wines die, young man, the same as human beings. A certain number of years, and they reach the top of their vigor; then they begin to decline. O, I know what is going on in the back of your head. You have written me down some kind of a crook, and your suspicions have been confirmed by my offer to take the wine off your hands."

Bancroft was conscious of a warmth in his cheeks. "Honestly, now, can you blame me?"

"All right. We'll say no more about the Great Adventure company. Keep the prospectus and laugh over it in the days to come."

There are some retreats which surpass in advantages the most tenacious defenses. A man who had something to sell and did not care particularly whether you bought it or not. Bancroft was impressed. He eyed his goblet of wine, took a swallow, and found it good. A mellow fire seemed to set about invading every vein in his body.

"Fine lot of chairs."

"What?" said Bancroft, who had been studying his sensations.

"These chairs here. A fine lot of Dutch cherry, worth about three hundred each;

SECRET STUFF

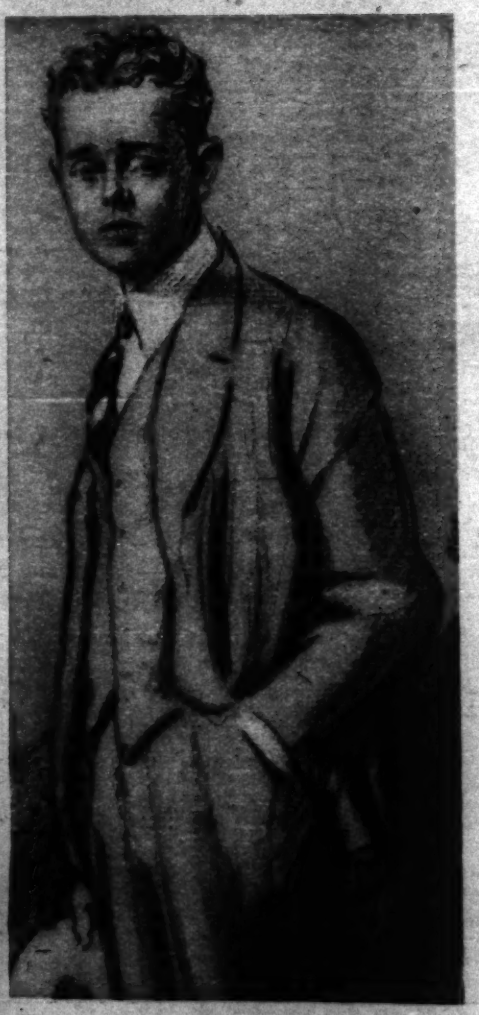
By W. E. HILL.

(Copyright: 1931: by the Chicago Tribune)

The party wire. You'd be surprised how many secrets leak out in East Turtleville. For instance, when Miss Pecan, the school teacher, phoned Johnny Horton's mamma, in strictest privacy, all about how Johnny said "Damn" right out before the principal, it was all over town before night. Some there are who say Miss Pecan should never have told Johnny's mamma over a party wire.

Of course Edna's engagement to Joe is a dead secret. No one would ever dream that they were in love with each other when Joe looks long and earnestly at Edna. Any one with half an eye can see that they're just good friends!

"She told me in the strictest confidence, but I feel sure she'd want you to know about it!" A secret is a secret until two or three are gathered together, and then the strain is too great. Mrs. Mattie Powers is telling verbatim, with maybe just a few little extra touches, the minister's wife's version of the latest parish scandal, for the benefit of two chosen members of the Ladies' Aid.



The secretive nature. Harry's family has an awful time keeping tabs on his goings and comings. Harry's motto, where the members of his family are concerned, seems to be "Secrecy first." He never tells them anything. Consequently Harry's mamma suspects the worst at all times.

probably more, since the set is complete. My word, this house is like Ali Baba's cave: the further you go, the more wonderful it becomes. Romance Conti and antique Dutch!"

"And both are over my head," Bancroft confessed. "Yet I have always admired these chairs—without knowing why."

The adventurer rose and shifted the chair about in his hands, with loving tenderness. It occurred to Bancroft that a lover might thus smooth a woman's hand. He glanced at the neighboring chair, but could not see what there was to fondle.

"By the way," said the adventurer, setting down the chair. "I believe I saw a volume back there on antiques."

"The one book I never took much interest in."

"I'll get it." He was gone but a minute. It struck Bancroft as odd the ease with which the man found the book. "See?" said the guest, as he laid the open volume at the side on Bancroft's plate. "Hang me, but here's a photograph of the identical chairs!"

"Does it say who owned them?" asked Bancroft, with an eagerness all out of proportion with his actual interest in the chairs. He had always been curious about the books, the vases, and the chairs. They did not belong in a house of this ordinary quality.

"It says here that the chairs are owned by the author." The adventurer turned back to the title page. "Well, that doesn't get us anywhere. C. J. K. Of course, the publishers would know who C. J. K. is or was." The adventurer returned to his chair. "Antiques are not valuable, because they are old, but for two reasons: the artistry of the maker and the shadowy associations which cling to the objects. Take that chair there with the arms. Three hundred years old. You have imagination. Think of—conjure up—all the women who have sat in that chair, their bright faces, their lace caps . . . and some of them with a child in their arms."

To Bancroft's wonder, the smile for which he had been waiting broke. It was directed at the chair—a smile that was tender and wistful, lending a strange beauty to the harsh face. Bancroft decided that his opinion of the man must undergo considerable reconstruction. No rogue could smile like that. Still, when the face came around again there was mockery in the eyes.

"I suppose there must be a casket about filled with pearls and rubies and diamonds."

"I doubt it," said Bancroft.

"How did you two get on?"

"O, tolerably. He was not what you would call companionable; but the aloofness was serene. He left early in the morning and returnd late in the day. In the summer he would sit for a while on the porch; in the winter, before the fire there. He always went to bed at half-past eight. Then I'd steal in and begin my reading. I was always a little afriad of him, though I don't know why I should have been."

"Did he ever give you any reason for living in this hole?"

"No. He never confided in me in the least. He never laughed, hummed tunes, or seemed to take any interest in the actions going on about him. Though he often smiled. His attitude was always that of a man deeply absorbed in thought."

"Did he ever answer the bell?"

"No. Either I or Mrs. Horne answered the bell. He had signified that he wanted nothing to do with the villagers, who called him miser, which doubtless he was; for he had the miser's instincts of frugality. I never hated him; and now I feel sorry for him. Not a friend in the world, so far as I know."

The adventurer stared into his wine.

"Take the Merchant of Venice," went on Bancroft, defensively. "Why does the world hate him so? They took his money and they took his daughter. What did he get out of that deal that all should detest him?"

The adventurer emptied his glass of Burgundy and refilled it. He looked inquiringly at Bancroft, who pushed his goblet toward the bottle.

"How about the time they stoned you?"

"So you heard about that? If I hate anything, it will be this town and its inhabitants. Though, I wish no harm to either."

"And you never felt the desire to clear out and see what the world was like?"

"A thousand times. But caution always held me in. Supposing I failed, and had to come slinking back? It was the fear that I might fail miserably that kept me here. That sounds like timidity. Perhaps it is. I am no judge. But it will be seen that I lost nothing by having patience. I'm young. The law of averages gives me plenty of time to go a-venturing. But how about you? You must have seen something of this world."

The adventurer welcomed this opening with secret satisfaction. To thrill this young mind, tantalize it, bewilder it. So he spoke of Europe, Asia, Africa, the South Seas; books, the great picture galleries, cathedrals, and temples. Through it all, Bancroft sipped his wine and tried to visualize these verbal enchantments. Here were the places he had dreamed of when a boy—the great and glowing world outside. A temple in the Burma dust, a smiling lagoon in the summer seas . . .

"I am going to give you a little advice," concluded the narrator. "Go away for a few months."

"Why?"

"Because, as soon as the world learns about your riches, all manner of mendicants will be milling in your hallway. Crooks in foreign cars, charity committees, relief organizations, oil promoters, book agents, female vampires, ordinary thugs in hopes of your being fool enough to keep large sums of money about. Your mail will mount waist-high, for you will be on every sucker list in the country. There will be ten thousand ingenious plans to separate you from your money, and nine thousand of them within the law. You call the Great Adventure company preposterous: wait until you see some of the other prospects! And you will fall for some of them. Why? Because you can afford to risk a few thousands out of curiosity. Go away, and inside of six months you will have been forgotten; some other millionaire's son will be the target. Go to New York—the New Bagdad!—and take another name; learn something about human beings. Contact. All the learning there ever was is worthless without contact. What's in your head now? Lumber. Contact will turn it into polished citron."

TO print, his personality indelibly upon this receptive mind: he believed he had accomplished this. Now to get the boy out of these protective environs, where he could say Come in or Go out, where there was confidence and serenity. To get him into New York, where diffidence would jostle him on one side and confusion on the other.

The boy had a pleasant, attractive face, singularly clear in the skin; steady, gray eyes. Some day, when these eyes began to observe and weigh humanities, they would be difficult to bemuse. He was well set-up, too. So then, to excite his imagination and lure him away from this stronghold.

The two glasses of wine had exhilarated Bancroft. He felt expansively charitable toward the future, toward the past, toward this entertaining adventurer, the most interesting man he had ever met. There was a mischievous inclination to get the ten thousand, toss it beside the man's plate and demand a contract, if only to see how he would sustain the shock; but immediately he comprehended that it was the wine which was urging him to make a fool of himself. He laughed.

"What's the joke?"

"You are!"

"Well, nothing could be franker than that. I had proposed that we forget all about the Great Adventure company; but evidently you are still mulling it over."

"Only as a whimsical absurdity."

"Six months in a war camp has trained you to skepticism," said the adventurer, wisely shifting the subject. "Queer thing. You made no real friendships among the boys. You were a highbrow to them, and all the while you were crazy to mix in, but didn't know how. Lumber; all you had learned from books was lumber, since it hadn't taught you to be a mixer. When you went into town—the one nearest your camp—you went alone and hung around the public library. You didn't drink or shoot craps or curse the powers that be. You escaped brawls because your buddies found out at the start that you could use your fisties. That's where your one-eyed pugilist came in. But you never preached and you never acted. Nobody liked you, but all respected you because you made a tiptop soldier by the time the war blew up. But you ought to thank your stars that you never got as far as Hoboken."

"I wanted to get into it."

"A war medal to bring home and flaunt

"I'm going with you."

at the villagers. You didn't want mud and death; you wanted glamour, the excitement of crossing the ocean, of seeing foreign cities, the pretty girls, and all that. What this? Real apple pie, as I live, with cinnamon!"

"And a second piece, if you want it, sir," said Mrs. Horne, bustling out.

"Would you like another bottle?" asked Bancroft, with sly intent.

"Would you? No, young man, you could not get me drunk under four bottles, and by that time you would be under the table. I use my education, and it tells me 'ware of strong drink. A little exhilaration now and then will not hurt any one. But how few of us are strong enough to halt this side of the line? Would you like another bottle?"

"No," said Bancroft, readily admitting his failure, but free of chagrin.

"What are you going to do with all this money?"

Bancroft's hand went to his brow, his fingers into his thick brown hair. "I don't know. Spend some of it, give some of it away. I don't want to waste it; I want to do good with it, and I want to have a decent good time, too. But how and where to begin—that's what bewilders me. With an income of ten thousand a year, I should be very happy. But more than a quarter of a million, when a twenty-dollar bill still looks as big as all outdoors! If you had set your adventure at a million, I might have jumped at it."

"My mistake," said the other, dryly. "You can still offer it, however. You are a free agent. Your father's will was without bequests or conditions."

"I can spend it like a sailor, or go on accumulating it. Did you see the will?"

"No; but I was given a gist of it."

"It's a literary curiosity: one of the shortest wills on record. Whenever I feel myself getting foggy I take out my copy and read it. Here, read it yourself, and tell me what you think of it."

He sailed the envelope across the table. The adventurer stared at it, rather stonily.

"Go on, read it," said Bancroft, impatiently. "It's worth reading."

Thus urged, the stranger drew the envelope toward him and extracted the instrument, and smoothed it out upon the table cloth.

KNOW ALL BY THESE PRESENTS:

Being hale and sound mentally, whatever my body may be, I leave to my son, Collingswood Jeremiah Bancroft, all my real and personal property, unconditionally, without let or hindrance. There will be no debts to pay. I had twenty odd years of intensive pleasure in gathering these funds and properties. My son, if so he pleases, may dissipate it in as many months.

Copy. SILAS BANCROFT.

"No debts to pay," mused the adventurer, his roving glance touching the chairs, the books in the room beyond, the vases. He returned the will to its envelope.

"No bequests. Even Mrs. Horne, who has been housekeeping since I was a baby, received nothing. All mine—to ride to hell with, if I want to!"

Bitterness, eh? The wine had rent a corner of the reserve. The boy was bitter in his soul? So much the better. In New York, with this bitterness which was bred of loneliness, and a thousand temptations at his elbow. . . . No debts to pay!

"Well, what do you think of it?" asked Bancroft.

"Do you want the truth; or rather, do you want my honest opinion?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, by the way he brought you up and by the way he flings this fortune at your feet, I should say that he expected it to destroy you. I'll go further. Supposing you're not Silas Bancroft's son. What would be more exquisite than to bring you up more or less like a pauper and then to destroy you with too much money?"

"No; that won't do at all. I was born in this village; not the least mystery on that side. The mystery is why I was brought up like a pauper (to quote you) and given all this money in the end. That's the real problem."

"It was merely a supposition. You asked me what I thought." Somewhere a clock beat out the hour. "Nine? I must be off. Got to make New York by midnight."

"No train until morning."

"O, I have a car at the curb."

The adventurer rose. "You won't dispose of the cellar?"

"No."

"Nor the library?"

"No. I'd hang on to that if I were as poor as Job's turkey. They made it possible for me to survive the appellation of miser's son—those books."

"When your fellow townsmen learn the truth, they'll forgive you; and having forgiven you, they'll fawn upon you." And to this irony the adventurer added: "The women will thrust their daughters toward you instead of away from you. But remember the foolish crow who dropped his cheese."

"Not even the usual horse-trough memorial. I owe this village nothing."

The promoter of adventures offered no comment, but proceeded into the library for his portfolio and thence into the hall for his hat and raincoat.

"The wind is dying down," he said, "but it is still raining hard."

"Take along an umbrella. You can leave it at the hotel."

"You'll trust me, then, with a bumbershoot?"

"Take your pick. There never was an umbrella in this house worth more than fifty cents."

"All right, since you are willing to risk it. But bear in mind my advice about clearing out for a few months. There's no place like New York to hide in. If you come to New York, look me up at the Bolivian Emerald company's offices."

"I will," promised Bancroft carelessly.

THE adventurer went out, and the door was closed quickly upon his heels. No word of thanks for the hospitality, no offer of the hand; but Bancroft's thoughts were already busy elsewhere, so the rudeness passed unnoted.

He got the book on antiques and returned to the desk in the library. C. J. K. Paid Kennedy in full. Was there any connection between the author and the man his father had paid in full? If so, then it signified that this unknown man had once owned all the choice things in the house, the books and

by Oney Fred Sweet

It Was a Slow, Poky Suburb Until Miss Agnes Mott Was Infected With a Strange Ambition to Become a Social Leader

MISS AGNES MOTT and her suburban home had gone along at the same pace for a good many years. The house was unlike the modern bungalow that squatted in treeless subdivisions; it had high ceilings and long, narrow windows and a dark hallway and a tower. The house had gotten along with its original complexion just as Miss Mott had gotten along with hers. The scant front porch was as quaint as was the manner in which Miss Mott fixed her hair. The decorative iron work on the tower of the house had begun to sag and so had Miss Mott's shoulders. The house was in perpetual shadow and its owner never laughed.

Jason Mott had been responsible for the suburb of Rosemear. It was the result of one of his commercial dreams. Jason had bought cheap acreage and staked it off into neat little lots with twenty-five foot frontages. These he had sold to persons seeking "a dollar down" investment opportunities. Most of the purchasers had lost their optimism when it was learned that taxes and assessments for improvements must be met. But Jason Mott had given proof that he was willing to partake of his own medicine by erecting a roof for himself and daughter at Rosemear's edge. Since then Jason had gone to his mansion in the skies, leaving Agnes very much alone and with enough to take care of her until the end of her days, providing she knew how to barter and haggle. She knew how.

Miss Mott might have continued neighborless had it not been for war's upheaval and subsequent high rents that brought about the pounding of the carpenter's hammer in Rosemear, the pounding taking place at the rate of $1.25 an hour. Arguments with pompous janitors and debates with thin lipped landlords sent to the suburb a class of folks unsophisticated concerning the persistent campaigns of mosquitoes, the depth required by radish seed, and the desire of the dandelion for self-expression.

From one of her long, narrow windows Agnes observed the invasion. She held title to twenty-five feet of mother earth on either side of her castle like domicile. Furthermore, there was a vacant lot still in her possession which she disposed of to a mustached gentleman who had saved enough from the hours of war time sacrifices to be able to plank down a payment in full for same.

Twice the gentleman had called at her house during the making of the transaction. He was a sad appearing person who, when Miss Mott explained that lots were probably as low in price as they would ever be, had replied that her reasoning in the matter seemed to be logical. Miss Mott's striped Angora cat had taken to the gentleman on his first visit — something unusual for "Bruno," who seldom made up with strangers. The name that the gentleman had signed to the payment check was "H. E. York." That was really all that Miss Mott knew about him.

The lot that Mr. York had purchased was still vacant. Bungalows had gone up on either side of it, but the twenty-five foot frontage deeded over to Mr. York was still given over to weeds.

Why? Perhaps Mr. York had sold the lot to somebody else. It was possible that he had died. It might be that he was waiting until building would be cheaper. Miss Mott speculated on the matter a good deal.

"The only reason I am interested is because I sold him the lot and because I would like to see citizens of his type come to Rosemear," Miss Mott told herself. "He did seem so anxious about getting a home out here for himself and daughter."

However, Miss Mott appreciated the fact that she had her own troubles. For one thing, Bruno had just been making a plaything out of her fancy work basket. Also, she was aware that she needed a new pair of shoes. Miss Mott's trips downtown were infrequent, and when one became necessary she always made a list of things that could be purchased on the one expedition. A twenty-five ride commutation ticket lasted Miss Mott for months.

By hurrying with her housework Miss Mott was able to catch the 9:34 morning train. She found a number of unfamiliar faces at the station—women who sat very stiffly in the depot seats, their bodies bent forward from their waists as they pretended an indifference to one another. All were newcomers to Rosemear. Furs thrown about shoulders with careless precision, scant veils that seemed to require a constant adjusting, high heeled shoes, and unusual displays of hosiery.

The train, having been properly signaled, slowed down, and Miss Mott clamored for a seat in one of the warm coaches. She had, for her companions, passengers from suburban stations further out, and there were a half dozen more stops to be made. It took thirty-six minutes to get downtown.

HAVING scanned the sale announcements in her newspaper, Miss Mott knew exactly where she was going. Spurning bus and street car and taxi, she minced her way among pedestrians until she came to the revolving doors of one of the department stores. She had walked the same street often enough so that its sights and sounds but faintly registered in a brain that was focused on the subject of shoes. Miss Mott was intent on getting a pair that would wear well, be comfortable, and cost little.

She had removed her right shoe and had placed her stockinged foot on the rest. She was glancing about her, every nerve tense. There were shoe troubles to the left and shoe troubles to the right. Fidgety doubts on the part of customers, suave assurances on the part of clerks. A man with slightly bent shoulders was replacing boxes on a shelf. He turned, fingering one end of a voluminous mustache.

"Are you being waited on, madame?"

The crisp phrase of criticism because of the delay in being attended to died on Miss Mott's lips.

"If you'll tell me about what size——"

"Why, Mr. York, don't you remember me?"

Then he looked at her, really seeing her for the first time, and a portion of his harassed attitude evaporated. For an instant he seemed transformed from a piece of mechanism into a human being.

"O, yes," he smiled. "O, yes."

But, after all, Mr. York was a creature of routine. He had been in the shoe department for a long time. He had struggled for success with "a size smaller" while Germany was making a failure of its big drive, while Dr. Cook was "discovering" the North Pole, while a member of the Floradora sextet was being tried for murder—aye, he had been in that same shoe department since the days of the World's fair. He was looking inside the shoe that Miss Mott had just removed to ascertain if the numbers in it were still visible.

"Why didn't you come out to Rosemear and build?" Miss Mott asked rather impatiently.

"The number seems to have been rubbed out," he answered. "Rosemear! Yes, after my buying the lot you would have expected me to build, and your reasoning would be logical. I liked it out there. I liked it. It was my daughter who objected. If you'll just place your foot on this measure. No, the one with the shoe off. That's it."

"What was your daughter's objection?"

"She said it was too slow out there. I think those were her words. You'll take about a——"

"Too slow?"

"Nothing going on out there, my daughter said. No social life. She went out with me one Sunday to look at the lot. She called it a 'jumping off place.' Said she'd never be able to stand it. Her reasoning seemed to be logical."

"No social life." Just what could the girl have meant?

"No social life." The dishes clattered the phrase in the noisy restaurant where Miss Mott lunched on soup and tea. The car wheels of the 2:15 train chanted it. The wind moaned it as Miss Mott traversed the five blocks between the station and her home.

Bruno stretched himself to give greeting, but for once his mistress was brief with her pattings and pet names. For Miss Mott, life had opened up. Thus far she had shunned "drives" and bazaars and committees, but there was within her now a desire to benefit and uplift her fellow man.

A WEEK later she gave her party.

All Rosemear was invited. Nick Jargos, who happened to live in the nearest new bungalow, assisted with the arrangements. Nick was a gymnasium instructor downtown, and in his time had staged a number of wrestling bouts. It was one of the most successful of these bouts, a fake match, that had provided Nick with the wherewithal to build his suburban bungalow with the patent shingle roof. Miss Mott had no idea of how Nick earned his livelihood. She only knew that he was her nearest neighbor. At her request he had called, cap in hand, ditching his Turkish cigaret outside the front door—the front door with its panel of red and green colored glass.

"You say the burg never had a party before," scowled Nick as his eyes wandered from the "Yard of Pansies" above the marble fireplace to the sea shells under the center table. "Well, I'll see that everybody has a chance to get in on it. I can say there'll be 'eats,' can't I?"

"Lemonade and some of my spiced cookies."

"Well, better not say what it'll consist of, then. I'll just say 'eats.' There may be some holler, but I'm used to that. You say this shoe clerk was countin' on movin' out here and that makes him eligible, too. By rights he ain't really a resident yet."

"I think prospective residents should be taken into consideration, Mr. Jargos."

"Well, I'll get the note into him, but we've got to draw the line somewheres. We'd have the whole city out here—roughnecks and everybody."

Due to Nick's propaganda, the younger element among the newcomers to Rosemear responded nobly to Miss Mott's idea. Among those present on the eventful night were a manicurist, the manager of a "How to Reduce" mail order house, a cloak and suit model, a check room girl, a woman who dished up pudding in a cafeteria, a youth who accompanied his sales with a perfunctory "thank you" and coupons in a red front cigar store, a trap drum player in a vaudeville theater orchestra, a city salesman of galvanized ware, an elevator starter, a street car conductor, and a fire escape inspector.

All had cast aside their uniforms, professional mannerisms or whatever went with their business hours. Bold enough in their accustomed environments, they gave evidence of being uncomfortable in the atmosphere of Miss Mott's living room. They had waited for trains together, ridden into town opposite one another, but amongst them there was the suspicion and uneasiness that went with lack of acquaintance. They were as minus of tradition as their bungalows were of second stories. They were as new to Rosemear as the varnish on their kitchen floors. They sat very stiffly against Miss Mott's old fashioned upholstery.

Nick Jargos suggested that somebody start something. Nick was wearing his best "Why Pay More" suit of clothes, and each strand of his plastered thin hair shimmered.

"I was going to come to that," Miss Mott assured, sweetly. "I was waiting until everybody had arrived. I thought I would make it sort of a musical evening."

She walked to the piano and began fingering the sheet music—titles scrolled on plain white covers, "Just a Song at Twilight," "Good-by, Good-by, to Summer," "Songs for All Occasions." There was not a copy in Miss Mott's collection that had not stood the test of time.

Miss Mott seated herself at the instrument and began furnishing the chords. The response was discouraging. Mr. York finally came forward and reached as far as "Though the heart be weary," when his daughter, Edith, suggested that he be given "the hook."

Miss Mott paused in her playing and whirled about on the stool. Edith, she observed, was a young lady with hair that was bobbed, a nose as white as the snowdrift, and lips rosier than any sunset. Edith was suppressing an emotion—a desire to giggle.

"Let's not have any more interruptions," cautioned Miss Mott, pedagogically. "Your father was getting along very nicely."

The check room girl yawned and confided, in answer to a whisper from the elevator starter, that her business was being affected by the depression just like everything else. Shop talk crept in despite Miss Mott's chord playing to Mr. York's reluctant and feeble bass. The trap drummer complained to the street car conductor that he was being obliged to furnish half the patter for the "acts" at his house that week, and the mail order manager told how a woman out in Kansas had sent in a testimonial saying that he had reduced her five pounds in as many days.

"You folks don't seem to care for music, so we'll try games," Miss Mott sighed impatiently, her cheeks flushed.

"What kind of games?" inquired Nick Jargos, his lips twisted dubiously. It was apparent that Nick was growing critical. He was shivering, slightly due to the lack of sufficient fire in the furnace.

"Authors," suggested Miss Mott.

The twist on Nick's lips did not relax.

"Now just a minute, lady," Nick began. "I don't know nothing about this game, but I'm willing to try anything once, no matter how dangerous. It ain't because I'm not a sport, but you'd better let me take hold here. I don't want 'em to walk out on us. I've got 'em here, but I can't guarantee to hold 'em unless you make it snappy."

"His reasoning seems to be logical," nodded Mr. York.

"I suppose you want to play 'postoffice,'" snapped Miss Mott.

"Now you and the boy with the Dr. Liverpill mustache go over in the corner and look at the stereoptican views," Nick insisted. "I'm going to roll back these rugs and get somebody to pound those ivories—somebody who can play 'The Whang, Whang Blues.' Let her go, folks!"

So saying, Nick Jargos pulled the manicurist away from her chair with such enthusiasm that the chair's "tidy" was disarranged. The elevator starter began stepping with the disher of cafeteria pudding, and the cigar clerk was soon shimmying with the cloak model.

The hours passed.

"Your daughter seems to be enjoying herself," remarked Miss Mott as Edith brushed past with the youthful salesman of galvanized ware.

"Yes, yes. Indeed, yes," agreed Mr. York. "She informed me during the serving of refreshments that she had changed her opinion of Rosemear entirely."

They were standing together at the stair landing.

"I presume you will come out and build then," Miss Mott finally ventured.

There was a pause during which there could be heard but the banging of the piano and the shuffling of feet.

"It's a great bother to build these days," said Mr. York, clearing his throat.

"Yes," Miss Mott admitted, "it would be a bother."

"You see if I built," Mr. York continued, "and later you and I decided that we——. That is, you can see for yourself that this house here is rather large for just you alone. In other words, you realize it would hardly pay for me to go ahead and build inasmuch as——. What I mean to say is——"

"Your reasoning seems to be logical," agreed Miss Mott.

vases as well as the chairs. But why were they here if his father had paid Kennedy in full? Well, he had the publisher's name and address; and probably Snell would know something.

He shut down upon these cogitations because they threatened to bewilder as well as oppress him, and studied the photograph of George Bellman and read the synopsis of his truly remarkable adventures as promoted by the Great Adventure company.

Bancroft knew that he ought to laugh; but there was now no inclination to do so. The personality of the man—whatever his individuality might be—was not a thing to be laughed at. A man who evidently read Ars Poetica in the original could not very well be insane. He might be some new species of humorist, but there could be no question as to his sanity. His words and actions had been according to the book, that of a polished man of the world, although many of his phrases and acts had suggested an abiding quality of mockery. To offer adventures for sale, as one offered lightning rods, or electric washtubs, or silos: ordinary common sense rebelled against the idea. But wasn't ordinary common sense balancing on one foot these days? Wasn't the whole world more or less mad? It had been dreadfully sick, and was still feverish enough to act lightheartedly. The Great Adventure company. Well, when he went to New York he would give the concern some particular attention, if only to learn if there was a joker hidden somewhere.

He took the ten thousand from the drawer and stuffed the bills into one pocket, the prospectus (beautifully engraved) and the Bellman addenda into another, and decided to go to bed. The after effect of the wine was making him sleepy. He turned and stared into the dimming fire.

How little he knew of his father! The will pointed to the fact that if there were any relatives, they had been utterly ignored. Snell would know; at least, he would know something about the father's boyhood and why he had chosen this forsaken hole as a habitation.

There was another peculiar phase. The fence, there, the drooping porch, the crumbling paint: whenever he had suggested repairs, his father had said: "Let be. I am used to it as it is." That had been miserly—to let the old home go to rack and ruin for the want of a few nails and a bucket of paint. His death and his astounding wealth had swung all established opinions into a new angle; he had to be reconstructed; he was now less the miser than the man of mystery. He had not won seven millions by scrimping and haggling and paring, but as one among great competitive energies.

The resolution came swiftly. He would go to New York tomorrow evening, and he would go into hiding immediately after he had interviewed Snell and got the rights of everything. He would, under another name, promote his own adventure company.

The adventurer, now once again the trespasser, stood a few feet away from the window. Some wind-driven leaves eddied about his feet, mournfully. He saw each act committed by Bancroft; and as he finally turned away, his throat rumbled with grim, ironic chuckles. His wine, his books, his chairs and vases! . . . And Silas Bancroft had owed no debts!

Three minutes later the sedan rattled down the village street. Bancroft heard this sound, and it broke his reverie; but he still remained in the chair, held there by a new and sinister thought. The doorbell rang, but with a tinkle so light that it did not break through to his consciousness. The Great Adventure company: supposing a hidden menace, directed at himself, lay behind this seeming nonsense? Snell's letter, his father's note regarding the man named Kennedy; supposing these linked up in some manner with this mocking seller of adventures? Again the bell rang, this time with its customary jangle.

He jumped up, undecided whether or not he was grateful for this interruption. Who could this late visitor be? Not the adventurer, for he was well upon his way by now. He hurried to the door and opened it rather impatiently.

On the platform of the porch stood a young woman, without raincoat or umbrella, drenched, dishevelled. Such light as came through the library door—there was no light in the hall—exposed to his astonished gaze a face as comely as any he had ever seen. His lively imagination, even in that moment, sought for a comparison; and he recollected the volume on Italian Madonnas.

All it contained was a letter and a thin gold chain.

A city girl; he would have been a bumpkin indeed not to have discerned this fact. The smart cut of her dress, sodden though it was, the modish tilt of the hat, despite its bedraggled feather, proclaimed even to his inexperienced eye their origin. The red-brown hair had broken from its fastenings, and wet strands lay against her rain spattered cheeks. Very much astonished—even in this night of astonishments—he waited awkwardly.

"Pardon me," she began, in a spent voice, "but will you be so good as to tell me if there is any possible way of getting to New York tonight?"

Under her arm she carried an object which resembled a cigar box, but which was not. It was of metal, beautifully lacquered. It was Jaipur brass; but Bancroft was not to know this until after many strange contacts with life.

"AWAY to New York?" Suddenly Bancroft came out of his pleasant trance. "Please come in to the fire. There is a way to New York, but it will take some telephoning."

"It's good of you," she said, stepping into the hall. "I'm a sight!"

"Right in here," he said, directing her into the library. He threw some light wood on the fire and drew up a chair to the fender.

"No; I'll stand. I'll dry quicker that way."

"Would you like a cup of hot coffee?" he asked, his sense of hospitality returning.

"Indeed, I would! I got mixed up all around today. I haven't had anything since lunch."

"O, Mrs. Horne!" he called. "Is there a cup of coffee left?"

There was; and while he went to the telephone, the unknown young woman remained by the fire, sipped her coffee, and munched the bread and butter sandwich. Little pools of water formed upon the brick hearth. She set the empty cup on the mantel and took off her hat, eying it ruefully. Twenty dollars for the hat and fourteen for the shoes, and both ruined. Her clothes could be dried out, cleaned and pressed, but her hat and shoes were done for. She hung the hat on the tongs, and built up her hair as best she could, by instinct, as she could not discover a mirror anywhere.

Then she gazed about, and was somewhat excited in curiosity to note the luxury of the bookbindings and the exquisite modelling of the vases. The rag carpet at her feet and the ordinary plush and walnut chair which had been offered her added confusion to her curiosity. Here was a queer house. Lucky for her! If it hadn't been queer, everybody would have been abed. All the other houses were dark, and she had reached the door of this one almost by will alone. Her body was of lead.

Bancroft returned. "There are two ways. You can go by auto. But the man at the garage says that the night is so bad he won't make the trip under thirty."

"Cancelled! I haven't thirty. What's the other way?" What a clean, nice looking country boy! was her inward comment.

"Well, you can take the auto twelve miles across country to the Central. There's two locals to New York, one at eleven and one at twelve."

"How much will he want for that trip?"

"Ten. It's an outrage, but he won't lower the price."

"I can do that nicely. And many thanks to you for your kindness. Will you order the car?"

"Don't you believe it would be better for you to stay at the hotel for the night and take the early morning tram?" he suggested.

"But I've got to get to New York. I've just got to!" with a gesture of passionate appeal.

"Well, of course——"

"You see," she interposed, "it's like this. In my room there is a little dog and he may not have had a drink since I left him. And besides, he's an outlaw."

"An outlaw?"

"Yes. Where I live dogs are not allowed. For two weeks I've got by with it; but if the poor little puppy gets too lonesome, he'll whimper; and the janitor is mean enough to put the puppy on the street. That would fairly break my heart!"

"And you'll take all this discomfort for a dog?"

"Why not, if I love that dog?" she cried, indignantly, and smiled.

He smiled, too, because this smile of hers possessed that enviable and irresistible magic of creating smiles: as water must reflect the sun, so one had to smile back at her.

"All right. I'll see that you make your train."

"Thank you. I shall always remember your kindness."

"I'll have the man here in ten minutes. But you're taking a big risk in those wet clothes. You ought to have some kind of a change."

"But where could I get it this time of night?"

"I'm swamped! Mrs. Horne——"

"Mercy! They'd fall off me. Then where'd I be?" She smiled again.

This time the smile awoke something in the back of Bancroft's head; but whatever this something was, it refused to be projected beyond the subconscious.

"All right. I'll telephone Williams."

While she waited she turned the hat around. It was drying rapidly; but she knew that she would never be able to wear it again after tonight. She bore down upon one foot, then upon the other, with discouraging results. The low shoes might just as well have been paper, so far as protection mattered. If only she might get dry shoes and stockings! Supposing she caught cold and her voice gave out?

She took down the Jaipur box from the mantel, and opened it. All it contained was a letter and a thin gold chain, with a loop which still held a fragment of what had once been a locket. Her lips trembled and her eyes filled. Nothing more than that—a letter and a bit of gold chain!

When Bancroft returned he carried shoes and stockings. "Williams will be here right away," he said. "Now, you put on these wool stockings and shoes. They'll be miles too big for you, but you'll go home with dry feet; and that's bound to help. I'm going upstairs for a few minutes, and that'll give you time to change. I'll do all I can to help you—on account of the dog."

"You like dogs?"

"To be sure I do! I've had a couple in my time; and I don't know of any better comrades. Will ten minutes give you time enough?"

"Plenty, thank you!"

She made the grateful change, found a newspaper and wrapped up the discarded shoes and silk stockings, and awaited Bancroft's return.

When he came into the room again he announced that the auto had arrived. He wore his army felt and slicker, and she noted these with secret approval.

Stops Pain Instantly

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in two forms—a colorless, clear liquid (one drop does it!) and in extra thin plasters. Use whichever form you prefer, plasters or the liquid—the action is the same. Safe, gentle. CHILDHOOD ENJOYS THE SEPARATE JACKET, THE MATCHIN

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If we wish to see how greatly children's dress has benefited by the last twenty years all we have to do is to look at the family album.

The advantage of our present times is that we may make our children look different without making them look conspicuous.

One of the most striking features of the small belle's clothes is the amount of tucking used on the party frocks of crêpe de chine, batiste, and organdy. Furthermore, tucking here displays the same flexibility as it does in the grown up models. Let us take the delightful little crêpe de chine model second from the right at the lower section of the page. This is an adaptation of a foreign frock, and its distinction rests upon the two plaited pieces attached to oval appliqués of self-material at the girdle. These may be stitched in the blue of the frock, in black or magenta. The only other ornamentation consists of wide tucks around the sleeves and skirt. This is designed for a child of from 6 to 12. For the maximum age the skirt would be made somewhat longer.

Crêpe de chine is one of the favorite materials for the small girl's afternoon or evening frock, and I show it again in the white dress at the right of this blue model. This costume with its adorable little matching cape lined with jade green crêpe and fastening with a scarf tie is for the child of from 4 to 8. The little hat of plaited crêpe de chine is trimmed with a blue satin rose and jade satin leaves.

The adult system of matching frock with wrap to which this costume points is reflected again and again in the summer designs for children.

Then, too, the fashion of the separate jacket of some printed silk or cotton or even of one of the quilted or soufflé weaves is another privilege accorded to children. To be sure, the juvenile adaptation is by no means so frequent here as it is abroad. For, as I have so often pointed out, the French mother is much less afraid of sophistication in her daughter's clothes than is the American parent. Consequently it is to be suspected immediately that the miniature edition of the printed jacket bloused into a hip band which we illustrate here is the copy of a French import.

Lavender is a favorite color for children both here and abroad, and that impulse is obeyed by mating a jacket of mauve silk printed in ashes of roses flowers and green leaves with a skirt of darker lavender, which may be in crêpe, jersey, or satin. As is the case with so many of the skirts, the fullness is concentrated at the sides. The whole costume is ably abetted by a wide brimmed hat of white felt wreathed in purple grapes interspersed by asters of the same tint and by several oranges. For in Paris the orange aid and lemon aid millinery of which I have so often spoken is extended to childhood's happy hour. Long streamers of lavender ribbon conclude the hat chapter. This costume is designed for the girl of from 6 to 12.

We have retained the kilt of the '80s and '90s. It is represented in many of the models for children. But it is now a reformed kilt. Instead of being bunchy, it is straight and slim, and, like nearly all other skirts for children, brevity is the soul of its wit. At the lower left we reproduce a design borrowed from Lanvin which provides for the girl of from 4 to 10 a plaited skirt of tête de negre or brown serge with an adorable little scalloped slip-on of biscuit colored lawn with stitching in either self-color or in the tone of the skirt. This is an adorable little model for school or traveling.

The tans and browns and yellows so fashionable with the grown up are reiterated again and again for children's wear. Thus at the upper right of the page we find a brown linen with criss cross stitch in dark brown. This frock may have bloomers of self-material banded in brown. For, of course, nearly all models for the small girl are accompanied by this practical substructure. We find them sketched in the costume of either tan linen or voile—it may be also of natural color pongee—worn by the small navigator just pulling her ship to anchor. Balls of brown wool and French knots of the same set off this distinctive model.

Mothers are often puzzled by the problem of how to dress a young man of from 2 to 4. Aside from the well known Dickens suits we find a solution in the smocks with trousers of contrasting color. Many of these smocks have short sleeves, and I am illustrating two favorite versions here. The one second from the upper left combines a cool dotted swiss having brown dots on a light tan background with trousers of darker tan linen. The other, worn by the lad descending the hill, is a blue linen blouse piped in yellow and with buttonholing in yellow wool which is worn over yellow linen trousers. Balls of blue wool on the trousers and of yellow on the blouse are the final touch.

For the party frock of the girl from 6 to 10 nothing could be more charmingly quaint than this scalloped creation of organdy worn by the figure with the hat over her arm. The scallops may be piped in white satin or in organdy of rose, yellow, or lavender tint. Even silver ribbon would not be too extravagant, particularly if this dress were fitted to a flower girl's duties.

One of the most original costumes here is the beach creation second from the lower left. This combines a cap and apron of blue taffeta embroidered in a fish design with a one piece undergarment of striped china silk. This suit is element proof.

The lattice work so much evident in children's clothes is encountered in the flesh color crêpe coat for the ages of from 2 to 4 found at the upper left. White organdy is placed under the lattice strips, and the hat matches.

Fashions Beauty Contests

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

LITTLE HATS AND LARGE APPENDAGES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—There was a little hat up at Georgette's last season which I all but got. That is to say, the order was placed, the crinoline tried, and a great many hours consumed in sitting round waiting for turn. But in that strength and endurance test of finally getting it into shape either the fitter or I—or the hat—gave out. It never solidified into a visible whole, although every day for a week when I went in to see about it the component parts were lying around over tables and chairs.

It was a little bit of a hat with a great big thing on it, and that is the present vogue. It was more conservative than the one in the model, although, like all new movements, was considered quite daring when it was launched. The garniture that seemed to wag (as the tail the dog) was an enormous bow that covered up the right ear as if it were a secret, but it did not point downward like the million other ear trimmings, which seemed to be pointing the way to some spot lying due south. It spread fanlike, and now, after it is dead and gone, its influence is passed on into an autumn inspiration, which is nothing other than a real fan decorating a hat.

Isn't it smart, though, as it appears in the first drawing? The hat proper consists of bits of finely pleated moire ribbon, run round the crown, and the garnishment is another wider piece of more ribbon, also finely plaited and edged with white.

The gown was a simple affair of black silk jersey—who ever said that either jersey or black was dull—and it has some strips of gold embroidery drawn into bands round the skirt below the knees. It would appear that kimono sleeves will last well over into fall. Our coats have the movement of them at the armholes, which are almost the length of the underarm seam to the waist. It seems as if they always do everything possible to make fur coats have but little warmth.

A French woman wore this costume one afternoon at the Madrid for tea, and she looked extremely Parisian and quietly elegant in it.

Of course, the pearls and emerald earrings did not detract from her appearance of assured elegance. But among all the bright colors flashing on one another—or should one have said clashing with one another—she was almost the showiest person in the room. Of course, nothing is as loud as black, with all of this talk about its being conservative. But it was only when we got a whole world of women costumed in it that it ever toned anything down.

This illustrated article, by the way, is a study in hats. Note the simple elegance of the second costume, which you would say (if you were a man or other untutored person in the ways of dress) could be made in the house. Well, as far as that goes, the Callot sisters, you know, used to sew out by the day. Anyway, this dress looks as if it had been hacked out of one solid sheet of material—but as if the hacking were done by a hand that was skilled. Ten to one your husband will say when he gets the bill for that dress, "What on earth makes them cost so much?" When he looks at it he will still go unillumined. But next season when you think you will humor him by getting something at a cheaper place he will say you are not as well dressed as you used to be and are slumping on your job, or words to that effect.

Black jersey is still done in Paris. Note the fan adornment for hat.

A study in line—it looks simple, but requires the master hand.

A lavender hat sounds a daring accompaniment for a red frock.

Black cashmere seems to foreshadow fall styles.

At any rate, the hat, which looks like a bathing cap, is by Reboux, and is of draped crepe de chine—the kind that she pulls so tight when she is fitting it on you that you have the headache afterwards. As for the dress, it is of ochre crepe de chine, and the artist says "its amusing folds captivate the eye." I, who am more practical minded, will add that it has the flowing kimono sleeves at the wrists, and they come in almost tightly round the armhole. The two folds which captivated the eye of the artist fall from either shoulder in the back. The lady wears with this costume a silver fox fur.

The next dress has a story to it. A Parisienne who buys thousands of francs' worth of costumes at the smart houses ordered something from one of them, but dared to change a frill of red 'round the neck to one of white. When the head of the big house saw it he was so delighted with the change that he said, "Ah, but I must make you a costume especially as a gift." And this is what he designed for his fellow countrywoman.

It is a dress made out of a quilted Rodier cotton fabric with a white ground and sprinkled with little red flowers. The things that are the making of it are the little white organdie frills that are so prim and neat in their straight lines. One button holds it in place at the waistline, and the crinkled effect taking the place of a ceinture bids fair to be a line that will carry over into the much talked about styles for fall.

They say that everything is going to be changed and not to buy anything for the moment. There are going to be dresses that lap over and dresses that spread, and bands round the bottom of everything, and, while some waistlines will rise, others will not go so high. The simple little costume here illustrated seems to me almost perfect for Lake Forest, Lake Geneva, and the lovely garden spots round Chicago. I can see our well built, straight standing American girls in it. And it is one that can sure enough be made in the house. So many of them are tricky and only look as if they could be. But this is not so difficult.

The hat is a piece of French audaciousness. It serves for sunshade as well. The French always stage summer fashions. I believe they only think they are something to play with. This hat, if you please, is of mauve organdie. Do you get it? Lavender with a red dress—and it is wondrous good looking. Picking out a purple which shows up the red in it.

The fourth dress of black cashmere also seems to me in some subtle way to foreshadow styles for fall. It is of black cashmere, and it has gay frills twirled round the belt and the deep cuffs. A fold runs round the irregular hem, and the skirt is tightly draped, with a sharp decline of the coat line on the right side into a point reaching almost to the floor.

That Tired Feeling

Says Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

DID you ever hear of a poem being penned to a pair of tired eyes, a tired look, a tired spirit? Nor have I.

'Twould be less than one half on one per cent intoxicating were she to drink to him only with tired eyes, would it not? No, they must glow like the sparks of fire. "Ladies with bright eyes rain influence, and get the prize," to paraphrase a Milton observation.

That tired feeling is something no girl or woman can for beauty's sake afford to let linger long upon her. It is woefully destructive.

Can Be Helped Mentally.

If you are chronically and perpetually fatigued, your first duty is to consult a competent physician to find out whether you have tuberculosis, Bright's disease, or any other demonstrable disease. If you tire often and more easily than any one else you know and have no chronic symptoms discoverable, you may make up your mind you are simply another recruit in that vast army of "tireds" or "just nervous," more in need of a good shaking than anything else to pull you out of yourself.

If there is one dose you must not administer yourself it is to admit it. The more attention you give to the feeling the more quickly you weaken your power of resistance.

Fatigue Often Habit.

Weariness is a habit, just as surely as bridge or breakfast, with the woman without chronic ill. With the habit fixed enough you can believe yourself overworked when not more than 25 per cent of your energy force has been pushed. Worry, fear, resentment, discontent, and other depressing emotions create fatigue. Giving way to them, magnifies it. Presently, if you are not careful, you make of yourself an out and out neurotic, a most unattractive type of womanhood, physically and mentally.

In that authoritative and highly interesting book, "Outwitting Our Nerves," the co-authors, Dr. J. A. Jackson and H. M. Salisbury, compiled a little catechism for the neurotic:

Q.—Who gets up tired every morning? A.—The neurotic.

Q.—Who fancies his brain so exhausted that a little concentration is impossible? A.—The neurotic.

Q.—Who still believes himself exhausted as the result of work that is now ancient history? A.—The neurotic.

Q.—Who lays all his woes to overwork? A.—The neurotic.

Q.—Who complains of fatigue before he has well begun? A.—The neurotic.

Q.—Who may drop his fatigue as soon as he "gets the idea?" A.—The neurotic.

Q.—How can he get the idea? A.—By understanding himself.

Q.—How can he forget his fatigue? A.—By ignoring it.

Q.—How can he ignore it? A.—By finding a good stiff job.

If he wants understanding in a nutshell, here it is:

Get understanding! Get courage! Get busy!

They advocate enthusiasm as the best remedial agent for the nervous and fatigued, and not the rest cure. "The best releaser of energy is enthusiasm," say the authors, "and you can't get that by lying around in bed or playing checkers at a health resort.

Missing Joy in Life.

"Beside the nervous folk who feel themselves so weary that they scarcely have strength to live, there are thousands upon thousands of men and women who are called normal but who have lost much of the joy of life because they feel their bodies inadequate to meet the demands of everyday living.

"Nature is not stingy," continue these experts on nerve outwitting. "She has not given the human a meager inheritance. The body has stored within its cells enough energy in the shape of protein, carbohydrate, and fat to meet and more than meet any drains that are likely to be made upon it, either through the monotony of the daily grind or the excitement of sudden emergency. Nature never runs on a narrow margin. She does not start her engines with insufficient steam to complete the journey. On the contrary, she has in some instances reserve boilers which are almost never touched. As a rule the trouble is not so much lack of steam as the ignorance of the engineer who is unacquainted with his engine and afraid to 'let her out.'"

In one of Prof. William James' essays he refers to the levels of energy usually untapped: "Every one knows what it is to start a piece of work, either intellectual or muscular, feeling stale—or cold, as an Adirondack guide once put it to me. And everybody knows what it is to warm up to his job. The process of warming up gets particularly striking in the phenomenon known as 'second wind.' On usual occasions we make a practice of stopping an occupation as soon as we meet the first layer (so to call it) of fatigue. We have then walked, played, or worked enough, so we desist.

"The amount of fatigue is an efficacious obstruction on this side of which our usual life is cast. But if an unusual necessity forces us to press onward, a surprising thing occurs. The fatigue gets worse up to a certain critical point, when gradually or suddenly it passes away, and we are fresher than before. We have evidently tapped a level of new energy, masked until then by the fatigue obstacle usually obeyed. There may be layer after layer of this experience. A third and fourth wind may supervene.

"Mental activity shows the phenomenon as well as physical, and in exceptional cases we may find, beyond the extremity of fatigue-distress, amounts of ease and power that we never dreamed ourselves to own—sources of strength not habitually taxed at all, because habitually we never push through the obstruction, never pass those early critical points.

"Of course, there are limits; the trees don't grow into the sky. But the plain fact remains that men the world over possess amounts of resource which only exceptional individuals push to their extreme of use. But the same individual, pushing his energies to their extreme, may in a vast number of cases keep the pace up day after day, and find no reaction of a bad sort, so long as decent hygienic conditions are preserved."

Worry Multiplies Exhaustion.

The key to unlock new stores of energy and drive fatigue away is rightfully prescribed by Drs. Jackson and Salisbury as the zest of pursuit, the joy of battle, intense interest in work, or a new enthusiasm.

Presupposing decent hygienic conditions—eight hours in bed, three square meals a day, and a fair amount of fresh air and exercise—fatigue need never become a monopolist of attention. "Attention increases any sensation," say the nerve experts, "especially if colored by fear. Fear adds to the waste matter of fatigue little dribiets of adrenalin and other secretions which must somehow be eliminated before equilibrium is reestablished. This creates a vicious circle. We are tired, hence we are discouraged. We are discouraged, hence we are more tired.

"If you learn to take your fatigue philosophically," the advice runs, "as a natural and harmless phenomenon which will soon disappear if ignored, you are likely to find yourself possessed of exceptional strength. You can stand almost any amount of work, providing you do not multiply it by worry.

Work Is Remedy.

"Work and enthusiasm for work is the panacea for that tired feeling. The indefatigable energy of Edison and Roosevelt is thus explained by psychologists.

"The wrong kind of emotion locks up energy. The right kind opens great stores of it.

"No fair, then, dwelling upon hurts or slights; an old pain or disability long since disappeared; worry, fear, or any of these real causes from whence that tired feeling springs, when all you have to do is arise from your stupid torpor, shake yourself out of self pity, get courage, and get busy!"

Beauty Answers

Have your beauty ills? Too fat? Too thin? Hair on knee? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, moles, or blackheads? Why not write to me. I'll give a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice you can get from me. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MILDRED: THE ELECTRIC needle is the only thing I know of that will permanently remove hairs from the face. And unless the work is done skillfully it were better left undone. At the present moment I have a letter before me from a girl scarred for life apparently from submitting herself to an inefficient person in this line of work. You cannot afford to be economical if you make up your mind to have the work done. The work done inefficiently leaves painful scars.

M. F. B.: THERE IS NOTHING you can eat or drink to make you grow taller. At 18 a girl is usually arrived at her full height. Athletic games that involve stretching such as basket ball, tennis, swimming, and so on, might do some good. Outside of that there is little hope to attain the tall, slender willowiness. Can't you console yourself with the idea that the movie stars are, generally speaking, small girls? Mary Pickford is but five feet, May MacEvoy a trifle less than that, the majority of them not over five three or four.

E. M. M.: I THINK YOU WOULD find this cream the thing for your face. Your skin must be tender to produce that constant peeling. Two parts of lanoline, one part borglyceride, six parts cold cream made with white vaseline. Apply this before you go into the air.

RUTH: CLEANSE THE FACE with a cleansing cream; remove cream, then wipe the surface with diluted alcohol on a bit of clean absorbent cotton. Open the pimples with a needle sterilized by dipping in alcohol or peroxide. Take pus up with fresh absorbent cotton, which has been dipped in alcohol. Dip needle in alcohol or peroxide before opening each pimple and open but one or two at a time to prevent an irritated skin. Then wipe entire face with alcohol on fresh cotton to prevent spread of infection. Apply the following acne cream: Lanolin, 5 grams; sweet almond oil, 5 grams; precipitate of sulphur, 5 grams; oxide of zinc, 2½ grams; extract of violet, 10 drops. If the case of acne is extreme, give the treatment morning and night and use only cleansing cream for washing the face for the first week. For more detail on this treatment send me s. a. e. please.

MOTHER: PEOPLE WHOSE work requires long hours of standing are first to go down with weakened arches. Short shoes and high heels will play mischief with stout, dependable arches. There are good shoes on the market now designed to give relief to the footsore by rebuilt arches. If the case is just beginning to telegraph pains and aches, first get shoes fitted properly and then do the following exercises morning and night to tone up the muscles from whence the trouble springs: 1. Stand and try to clutch the carpet with the toes by turning the toes under as far as possible. Then relax. 2. In sitting position rest the feet easily on the floor in front and turn the toes under as far as possible. Then relax. 3. Stand, and with one foot raised forward, stretch it downward and then relax. Do the same with the other foot. 4. Stand with toes together, heels three or four inches apart, then raise feet with toes together, keeping heels on floor. Replace. 5. Stand with feet a few inches apart and rise on the balls of the feet and back again. Repeat each exercise ten to thirty times, resting after each five.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problem

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care of The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish, A stamped, addressed envelope must accompany all requests.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Pill His Place.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of [illegible] and in love with a young man of [illegible]. I kept company with this young man for about two years and then for no reason at all he stopped calling on me or even speaking to me. Now, Miss Blake, as we both work for the same concern and see each other quite often it makes it much harder for me as I still care for him. A girl that I [illegible] to be a dear girl friend of mine is going out with him, and I [illegible] out together quite often. Please advise me what to do. Should I [illegible] about him & try to get him back?

"ANXIOUS."

So it often happens, Anxious, a trusted friend walks off with the loved one. With no one to blame, perhaps, but one Dan Cupid, who cannot be sued for alienation of affections or anything, so elusive is his [illegible]. Just one of the disappointments of life which one grieves over perhaps bitterly at the time; then learns to look upon it quite dispassionately, and then learns to laugh. Be philosophical about it, Anxious. The easiest way to acquire the philosophy is to acquire another interest—of male persuasion—to fill the gap.

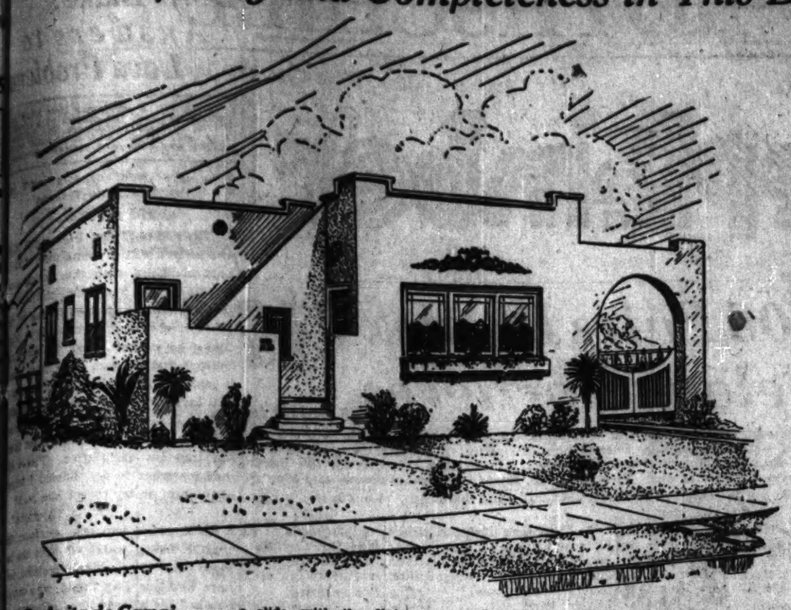
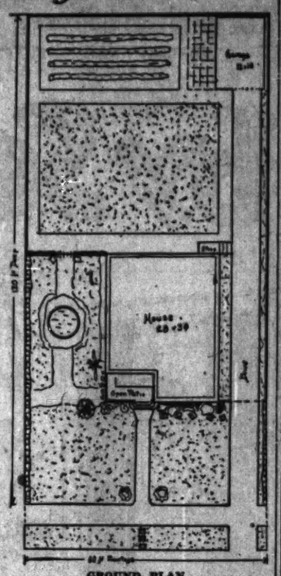
Simplicity and Completeness in This Bungalow





GROUND PLAN.

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist in any matter in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

TYPICAL of the Californian type of bungalows is the one illustrated today, in which simplicity and completeness are harmoniously combined. Though the square has been used, on account of its economy, frugality is overcome by clever designing. The size of the house is divided in proportion to the actual amount of time spent in each. Built-in features reduce the necessary furniture to a minimum, and their arrangement is such that the drudging of household duties is greatly facilitated.

Three coats of waterproof cement are applied over metal lath on the inside walls. Window and door frames are painted delft blue, with ivory colored sashes and screens. All of the ornamental staff work is blue, "aged" with brown and a touch of yellow. Following the trim is the decorative motif which hangs over the main entrance front door.

From one end of the front patio are steps leading up to the roof garden which extends over the entire building. The double strength roof accommodates a delft blue, waterproof wicker set, which consists of a chaise lounge, several comfortable chairs, a settee, and a table. At one side there is a large, heavy wooden chest in which the many cushions are put in bad weather. Arranging the roof in this way is certainly a happy thing to do, for there is nothing much more pleasant on a warm summer evening, or cool sunny day, than to be in the open, where the wonderful sight of the sky, or the fleeting, cloud flecked sky is enjoyed without hindrance.

The woodwork of living, dining, bedrooms, and hall is done in an eggshell finish. The bathroom and kitchen are enameled with white. The bedrooms are the same size, 11 by 12 feet, and each is provided with a good sized closet. One room is done with fine striped yellow and white paper, which forms a pleasing background for the color scheme of lemon, turquoise, and rust. The other is done in a quaint figured paper, in nosegay colors.

The living and dining rooms and hall are papered in two toned ecru, and have electric candle chandeliers and wall lights, with frosted, candle flame shaped lights. In the hall there is a large linen closet which has four wooden shelves and three deep drawers. Opening from this hall, between the two bedrooms, is the bathroom. This is all tiled with a high grade enamel. The tiled-in bath is completed by a shower and draw curtain. A convenient cabinet, with mirrored door, is built in above the lavatory.

On one side of the fireplace, in the living room, there is a built-in bookcase, with drawers on the other a little desk, with drawers. Above the wide mantel, which is continuous over the bookcase, desk, and desk, there are two small casement windows. The dimensions of the living room are 12 feet 6 inches by 15 feet 6 inches.

A pair of French doors the living room is connected with the dining room, which is 10 feet by 15 feet 6 inches. The conventional, built-in buffet, with two pairs of glass doors above, a serving shelf and long deep drawers for the accommodation of silver and table linens. There is a cupboard for large articles in each of the low cabinets.

Convenience is the keynote of the entire kitchen. Under a large double window there is a breakfast nook. The table, when not in use, folds up into the wall, and is kept out of sight when not in use.

The kitchen sink is no longer an eyesore. The top and back are tiled, with a mirrored cabinet and two windows above. A swing spout faucet and tiled-in soap dish add to the convenience. Below the tile drainboards are four drawers, on the left, and two, tin lined, removable bins on the right.

In one corner, there is a plastered hood for the range, which is inconspicuous, but gets light from two angles and is placed convenient to both serving table and sink. The laundry has a built-in tub, with a combination faucet and an automatic storage instantaneous heater, which furnishes ample hot water for all purposes. Throughout the floors are narrow oak boards, except in the bath room, where tile is used, and in the kitchen, which is linoleumed.

The hardware is sanded brass in living, dining, bedrooms and hall—nickel in bathroom and kitchen, and black japanned in the laundry. The old fashioned mold is omitted. Frames and casings are of one piece, molded, with mitered corners. Molded to match is the baseboard. The base shoe mold is of oak, like the floors.

The lot need not be any larger than 45 by 75 feet. A larger lot, however, gives room for some landscape gardening, a garage, a plant nursery, and perhaps a pond or fountain. The back yard, which is entirely fenced in, may be treated to suit individual taste.

These plans were designed by Kenneth D. Kahn of Los Angeles, Cal.

H. H.: If your living room is dark you will need a light colored wall paper to brighten it. You could use an old ivory two toned paper in both living room and sun porch. A striped or figured material, in the colors that you have in your living room, would be effective for the drapes in your sun porch. You could use old ivory silk gauze for the glass curtains. Paint your kitchen walls yellow, have white voile with a yellow stripe for your curtains, and have a green linoleum.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE

BIBS, PLAIN AND FANCY.

UNBLEACHED muslin is another material that is being used for a large variety of purposes; and one of the most sensible ways to use it is for children's bibs. These bibs are cut like a little kimono waist—that is, they are as far as they go. The material is folded so that one may make sleeves, and the depth in the back of the bib is directly on a line with the sleeve seams, while in the front the bib is cut to come to the waist line.

The illustration given here will give a good idea of it. It will be well in making these to shrink the muslin thoroughly before cutting out, and then to allow for making the sleeves comfortably loose.

The bib may be hemmed on all edges, or finished with a blanket stitch in some color, letting the stitch cover a hem one-quarter inch wide.

Usually one or more Mother Goose characters are appliqued on the front of the bib, cutting the figures out of some color or colors and using the same colored floss to applique them on that is used for the edges; or some appropriate designs in the cross-stitch will be decorative and please the small child.

The opening in the back may be finished with a facing on both edges. Sew narrow linen tape on each edge at the neck to tie the bib on.

When babies are teething they invariably get their clothes wet at the neck, and bibs are necessary. But these do not always keep the clothes dry, although they are sometimes made double and have padded wadding put in between.

One of the best ideas seems to be a single thickness of handkerchief linen. Of course, these bibs may be made quite elaborately, with lace insets and narrow edging, and often some fine laid embroidery. Even if they are plain they may be attractive if one has enough of them to keep the baby sweet and clean.

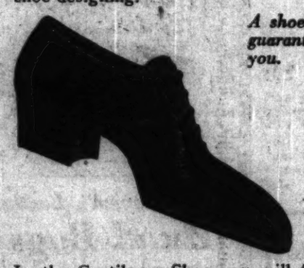
BASEMENT CAFETERIA LUNCHES AT POPULAR PRICES

Shoes More Than Fashionable
Fashion has swung to the round, roomier toe and the low heel. These are important elements of comfort and foot efficiency, but the most important one element—the flexible arch—is not to be had with the round toes and low heels of ordinary shoes. And the flexible arch is the achievement of modern shoe designing.
A shoe of real comfort guaranteed to please you.



In the Cantilever Shoe you will find, besides the fashionable type of heel and toe, an arch that is flexible like your own. This shoe arch flexes with every step you take. It draws up when you lace the shoe to furnish just the degree of support each one of your arches needs. The unrestricted action of your foot strengthens its muscles through exercise, prevents and corrects arch weakness, and makes you feel and look more vigorous.

All guesswork eliminated; every shoe is now fitted by X-Ray without extra charge to you.

Genuine Cantilever Shoes have the name "CANTILEVER" stamped on the shank. Avoid substitutes.

If you would know the supreme comfort the stylishly rounded toe, the low heel and the flexible arch, slip your feet into Cantilevers. They are good-looking shoes, well made of choice materials, reasonably priced, and so easy on your feet that they are more than fashionable.

One Million MORE by September FOUR

Merchants in other cities hear of the success of this midsummer drive for more business and write to ask us how we do it. We can only tell them what we have said here day after day—that any store can succeed that will take the trouble to give the people what they want, when they want it, at the price they want to pay. The last part is what makes a storekeeper a merchant.

You will find here new seasonable goods wherever you look

Now For a $100,000 Dollar ONE DAY Sale of Furniture

In Many Ways This Is the Most Powerful Furniture Advertisement We Ever Printed

The momentum of this furniture business is so irresistible that nothing can stop it—last week during the street car strike our furniture business increased in spite of no transportation, no advertising, no "nothing"—except values! So for tomorrow we have prepared one of the greatest sales held in Chicago throughout the year. In March we sold $180,000 worth of furniture in a similar event with values, remarkable though they were, not so strong as the ones you can read on this page. And our aim to sell $100,000 worth of furniture tomorrow is moderate—it ought to be double that! Read and see why! This is a one-day sale. Remember that!

If you are moving into a new apartment October 1st you may have this furniture delivered at that time even at these prices.

We will be pleased to open a monthly payment account, one-fourth to be paid tomorrow, balance arranged as you desire. We cannot set these goods aside on a small deposit—therefore 25% is asked tomorrow. The values are remarkable. Look for the early morning specialties if you ever expect to buy furniture.

Have You Read About the Better Home Movement?

Come in and look at this Dining Room Suite and see what the Better Home Movement means. Is it not strange that people will spend $5,000 for an automobile, they will spend equally that much for a trip to Europe; they think nothing of a dinner party costing $50 to $100, but they hesitate when it comes to the nearest thing to one's heart—"HOME."

1433—Transfer 4904—Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 36 inch material with 1¼ yards of 36 inch contrasting.

1444—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material and 3¼ yards of binding.

1389—Girl's dress. Sizes 4 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 32 or 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

TRANSFER pattern No. 4904, suggested for use with pattern No. 1433, will make the matter of trimming for this dress simple. A number of entirely different motifs and borderings are included in the transfer, so that different tastes may be easily suited. A plain pink or rose shade of mercerized poplin made up with organdie would be pretty.

The skirt is in one piece straight and gathered at the waist line. There are the usual pieces for the waist—front, back, sleeve, collar, vest, and cuff.

After the skirt is put together and the correct line marked around the bottom for the length, choose some one of the embroidery motifs and stamp the design on at intervals around the bottom of the skirt, letting them come an inch or more above the edge and not too close together. Cross stitch designs will work up faster than other kinds of embroidery—unless an outline stitch is used and, naturally, on a wash dress one will not wish to spend too much time. Hem the skirt after the embroidery is finished.

The vest, collar, cuffs, and sash will look well made of the organdie. One of the newest ideas in waist decorations is an embroidered monogram, either just below the top of the vest or a little above the waist line in the center front.

Poplin is heavy enough to allow for the organdie to be made double and no trimming other than the monogram on the vest will be necessary. Of course it would be possible to have the organdie parts all made detachable—not a bad idea when one realizes how much more easily they will soil than the poplin.

The neck and front of the dress may be finished with a narrow bias facing—the sleeve edges hemmed in a half inch hem, and the cuffs and collar—each of them set into a narrow, straight band—may be easily basted in place and removed to be laundered. Seam the vest together on three edges on the wrong side; turn right side out; stitch lower edge. The vest may be easily tacked to the waist on one side and fastened with snaps on the opposite side.

Midsummer almost always finds one or more new wash dresses necessary for growing girls, and pattern No. 1389 will be just the thing. There are innumerable wash materials from which to choose, but probably the prettiest will be a cotton crêpe, chambray, or a quaint, pretty cotton print.

There is a pattern for a separate guimpe with sleeves, and the dress proper is cut in two pieces—front and back. The inset pockets either side of the front give an air of smartness to the dress, and the manner of wearing the sash is good looking also. There is a slit cut in the front each side of the middle, and these should be bound, matching the pocket openings. Through these the sash is slipped, so that it does not show in the front, but leaves an unbroken line to the dress from neck to hem.

If one wished to take the time the lower edge would be pretty cut in rather large scallops and bound.

Girls going away to school this fall like the apron pattern, No. 1444. There are so many times when a good sized apron is necessary in one's own room—when making candy or getting up a little spread, for instance.

This pattern is cut on becoming lines, and will look well made of a pretty percale, sateen, or cretonne. All the edges may be finished with a binding of a solid, but contrasting color; or ricrac braid is always good for the purpose.

Hem pieces of tape on the under side of the apron where the buttons are to be sewed, it will make the material hold much better, also hem small pieces on the under side of the apron where the top edges of the pockets will come, so that when they are stitched in place the stitching will also go through these pieces of tape. Pockets so often catch on things and tear.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Worth While Hearing.

I received one of my nicest compliments when I was a junior in high school.

One day our teacher asked a rather difficult question, which seemed to puzzle the students. Thinking that perhaps I could answer it, I raised my hand.

As he glanced toward me he said to the class, "Now we shall hear from our quiet girl, who seldom says much, but when she does it means a great deal." E. F.

Couldn't Ask Better.

A neighbor asked Mary Edith what she was going to be when she grew up.

She replied, "I'm going to be just like my mother."

Could any mother ask for a nicer compliment? E. G. B.

What Small Boys Appreciate.

My son and several of his young companions had been out playing some pranks, somewhat mischievous, but not at all mean.

John said to me, "The other boys were afraid to tell their mothers, but I wasn't afraid to tell you. You have such a wonderful sense of humor." M. B. S.

Likes Laughing Faces.

My nicest and I think most sincere compliment came from my son after his first visit to Sunday school.

I asked him how he liked his teacher.

"Just fine, mother," he said, "because her face laughs all the time like yours." J. E. S.

From an Unexpected Source.

Our principal was considered by every one to be reserved in his praise. But from him came one of the nicest compliments I ever received.

One day he said to me, "The thing I like about you is that you always see the thing to be done, and do it without being told." R. C.

Glossy, Clean, Beautiful Hair Indicates

SANITAX BRUSHES

THE woman who brushes her hair every day with a perfectly clean brush, respects it as she does her face when she uses only a soft, clean towel—and she is respected for it—her beautiful, clean hair.

The SANITAX is the one hairbrush that can be kept antiseptically clean all the time, with the least time and effort and no harm to the brush.

Do This Every Day To Have Clean, Beautiful Hair

Comb out your SANITAX Brush, then run boiling hot water right through the back. It takes only a few moments. There is no wood to warp, no glue to dissolve, no metal that rusts. Your SANITAX can always be clean, and your hair always clean and beautiful.

Say "SANITAX" when you want a better hairbrush

It costs no more than any good brush. It is worth so much more in every way.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscript returned.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Deep in Her Story.

A short time ago a cousin of my husband's came to visit us, and stayed for several days. On the day he was leaving, we drove him to the station and sat in the car chatting while waiting for the train.

I passed the time by telling the group of a thrilling experience I had had recently. I was most intent on my subject and did not notice the train, which pulled up just as I reached the climax of my story.

The guest jumped out of the car and came around to where I was sitting. As he held out his hand to say goodby I grasped it and said cordially, "How do you do? I'm so glad to see you." W. W.

BLESSED WITH PATIENCE.

It was late one morning and did not have time to get my daily paper before getting on the train to go down town. It was most annoying, as I always count on that time to get all the news read.

I was fortunate enough before we had gone far to find a paper lying on the floor.

I picked it up and had been reading it interestedly for several minutes when the man next to me touched me on the arm and said, "Pardon me, madam, when you have finished may I have my paper back?" L. L. K.

They Guessed It.

A few weeks after I was married I went to a department store and purchased a rug which I wanted delivered. I gave the clerk my money and she asked me my name.

It completely slipped my mind, and I stood in front of her and numerous inquisitive customers for two endless minutes when the clerk remarked, "It must be a new one." E. R. S.

Hoping Against Hope.

I was attending the summer term at a normal school, and had been having a great old time with friends. Returning home I passed a garden in which red raspberries were ripening temptingly. Now, my one great weakness is for red raspberries, so I couldn't refrain from gathering some. I cast a glance around, but no one was in sight except a professor, and I thought I could get some berries before he spied me.

So picture my surprise when I heard a voice calling out suddenly from a window in the house, "Look here! Don't you know better than to steal my fruit?"

I hoped against hope that the professor had not heard, but he proved he was not deaf the next day when he asked me if the berries were ripe. M. H.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

MAKING FROZEN DAINTIES.

In any number of small homes the prerogative of making the frozen desserts is a masculine one, little help being offered by the presiding goddess of the kitchen, and the ice cream freezer gets little rest. All that this member of the household asks for is some well chilled cream and sugar and flavoring, and then in short order he will prepare the dinner dessert. He is not likely to take much stock in the idea of repacking the ice cream for "ripening." Tastes all right to him just frozen.

The sweetening used by one such master of the home whose regular task was that of making the ice cream, week in and week out the year through, for family and guests was honey. He made an excellent ice cream, too, and quite likely is making it yet. I have not had any of his making for some years now. But frequently he had only his bottles of cream and only some sugar and flavoring. Pounding the ice or shaving it he made but a light task, and since he used but little rock salt in proportion to broken ice the texture of his cream was always fine. Hard freezing with too much salt will make ice needles, sometimes in an all cream preparation. People in a hurry often use too much salt. People who know how to take this work comfortably let the sweetened and flavored cream stand with the ice and salt around it to be well chilled, then the freezing is done in short order.

Philadelphia Ice Creams.

Of course the fussy, or scientific, or laborious, housekeeper will think that an ice cream made of all cream is superior if half the cream is scalded with the sugar and flavor. But this prolongs the period of the making by an hour or so because this scalded cream must be cooled to the point of chill. Yet this was the way prescribed for the Philadelphia ice creams of which there are not one but many. The use of this name means that the ice creams are made of all cream, not of part or all milk with stiffenings of eggs, gelatin, etc. In other days these other mixtures were called frozen puddings.

In reference to these all cream or Philadelphia ice creams, Mrs. Rorer, who was of one of the later schools of Philadelphia cookery, says: "Good pure cream, ripe fruit, and granulated sugar make a perfect ice cream. Fruit and fruit flavorings should be added to the cream after the latter is frozen. The best ice cream is made by first scalding the cream and dissolving the sugar in it while hot. When raw cream is frozen, the flavoring is not so prominent, and the cream has a frozen, snowy taste, and is never perfectly smooth and velvety. Cheaper ice creams are usually made in this way, as they swell to double their original bulk."

We do not get raw cream nowadays, for the most part. It is pasteurized, as is the milk, and you can make velvety creams without some of the laborious methods prescribed.

Strawberry Ice Cream.

In strawberry time a pint of sieved and well chilled strawberries added to a pint of cream with sugar to taste—to taste of necessity, since strawberries vary so much in acidity—may be frozen into a delicious ice cream. The cream must be kept well chilled, the strawberries brought to the same temperature before the two are well blended and the sugar perfectly dissolved in them. If such a mixture is frozen with too much salt it will not be smooth and velvety. It is astonishing how little salt is needed for good work after the materials are well chilled. If they stand with the ice and salt around them until of ice cream temperature through and through, the actual work may be done in short order.

For the next two or three months, or soon now, we may have strawberry ice cream of a superior order, since the "ever bearing" strawberry is of a more delightful and certain flavor for all purposes than any of the early berries of the market, except when the home grown berries are at their best—a brief season, indeed.

The Bisque Ice Creams.

Instead of a sieved fruit, powdered macaroons or powdered meringues are added to a cream, usually when it is partly frozen, to keep them from dissolving, and they must not be too thick in it. Even dry and crushed brown bread has been used to mix with cream for ice cream. Pulverized almonds, grated cocoanut, and so forth, are added to cream, or an ounce of melted chocolate per quart of pure cream is used.

The Custard Ice Creams.

There are any number of ice creams which contain but half cream. The other half may be a quite simple custard mixture, or milk stiffened with gelatin, or Irish moss, or even with tapioca, or this mixture may be as complex as that for the grand old fashioned Nesselrode puddings. In effect, these are tutti fratti ice creams.

The Mousses.

The mousses may be all whipped cream with fillings and sweetening, or they generally have a foundation of some sort, into which the whipped cream is folded. This commonly contains gelatin, or the mousse is really a Bavarian cream frozen, in a mixture of salt and ice without any turning of a crank.

The Ices.

The ices are just sweetened and flavored water or a sirup frozen. If fluffiness is desired egg whites beaten to a stiff froth are added. Cooked sugar gives a better effect in almost any preparation than does plain sugar, and an ice will never be watery when made of a good sirup.

Rich Frozen Custard.

A cheap frozen custard is hardly worth while. It is better to use a frozen tapioca pudding instead. A cheap "ice cream pudding" is likely to be thin and flavorless. If people who make such do not know how to freeze any mixture they are likely to get something coarse grained and even greasy.

The following base for an ice cream is one with which almost anybody can succeed: Whisk together five egg yolks and one cup of fine granulated or powdered sugar until the mixture forms a perfectly smooth ribbon, falling in pretty narrow folds when the whisk is lifted. To this add slowly, with constant whisking, two cups of hot milk, and cook until the mixture coats the spoon. The cooking helps to give body to the whole, but is not absolutely essential. Flavor with vanilla and chill. Add a cup of cream and freeze. You may whip the cream first. Any number of variations may be made by adding fruits, nuts, chocolate, powdered macaroons, etc. For this amount a cup of any fruit puree is sufficient. The custard itself is a basic preparation which may be used as a sauce and in many combinations which are not to be frozen.

Frozen Tapioca Cream.

When an inexpensive frozen pudding is desired the frozen tapioca is more likely to be a success than an inexpensive custard. Compare proportions with those above: Two eggs, one quart of milk, four tablespoons of granulated tapioca, one cup of sugar. Wet up the tapioca with a little of the milk and let it stand a short time. Add the rest of the quart of milk and sugar, and stir and cook over the fire for twenty minutes. It may then be strained for perfection's sake. Just before taking from the fire stir in the yolks of two eggs, and after it cools a bit add a teaspoon of vanilla and fold in the two egg whites beaten until stiff and dry. Cool and chill thoroughly before starting to freeze this. Just one-half cup of cream whipped will improve this greatly and a whole cup will make it quite fine. When served without freezing, but well chilled in the refrigerator, it is much improve by folding whipped cream into it.

Chocolate Mousse.

Gelatin rather than any of the starchy things like tapioca and rice is more commonly used for the mousse base, unless eggs are plentiful, and sometimes even then gelatin and egg are both used, but slight expense and a particular quality (chewy) were being sought in making the following chocolate mousse.

One ounce of chocolate, one-half cup of sugar, one-third cup of top milk from a quart bottle, two tablespoons of cold water, one-fourth teaspoon of vanilla, tiny pinch of salt, one cup of cream whipped, one teaspoon of granulated gelatin. Melt the chocolate, add to it the sugar and the milk and bring to a boil, stirring constantly to make the blend perfect. Let cook about a minute. Add to the mixture the gelatin which has been soaking in the cold water and stir and cool, add flavoring and salt, and mix, when it has been well chilled, with the whipped cream.

Pack in brick mold, cover with buttered paper, put on tight cover and pack and let stand from two hours to four.

On Packing a Mousse.

The rule for the mixture of ice and salt for packing a mousse is half as much ice cream salt as finely crushed ice, but I have frozen a small mold successfully with only about one-fourth as much salt as ice, and used but a small amount of ice at that—in fact, effected a real economy in ice by putting a bag of crushed ice over the top of the mold after sprinkling salt well over the cover.

For instance, for a small brick take a large bread pan and fill it more than half full of crushed ice, sprinkle salt over this, crush in the mold, leaving a thin layer under, and put ice around it and a little salt, sprinkle salt, put small bag of salt about the size of the bread pan over, fold the whole into several thicknesses of newspaper, and leave for the required time—usually two hours. A brick mold may be lined with paper so that the mousse will be like a brick of ice cream. It is safest to use buttered paper always before putting on cover of mold.

Grandmother tries hard to keep her age a secret. On her last birthday a friend called on the phone and she answered.

She said it was grandma's birthday, and the friend asked how old she was.

Jane answered: "I don't know, but it is an awfully high number."

Robin's father had been talking seriously to the boy about self-defense and defense of his little sister.

"But remember," he cautioned, "you're not to start anything."

The next day Robin's mother heard sounds of combat in the yard, and saw trouble making neighbor child running home.

"Robin, what did you do to George?" she questioned sternly.

"Why, mother," said Robin, "father told me not to start anything so—I just finished it."

Harry fell from a landing on the stairway and hit the floor with a crash.

"O, sonny, are you hurt?" I exclaimed anxiously.

"Course I'se not hurt," he replied contemptuously, "Why, I don't think I'se even cracked!"

Marjorie is tender hearted. It is her habit to go to the office of the osteopath each week with her mother. As soon as the doctor begins his skillful treatment the child invariably sets up a wail which lasts until the treatment is completed, for she thinks the doctor is hurting her mother.

The other day I met them on the way to the osteopath's office.

I said, "Where are you going, Marjorie?" "I'm going up to cry," she replied.

Bobbie had dinner with his uncle one evening, who gave him a generous helping of everything.

At the close of the meal he was asked why he had not eaten his dessert, whereupon he replied: "O, I can't, 'cause my appetite don't hold much tonight!"

Carl looked up at his mother and said: "Bobbie certainly does ask you a lot of questions, doesn't he, mother?"

Whereupon Master Bobbie, younger brother, replied: "Yeth, but Carl—he asks everybody questions."

Several small boys run a popcorn and lemonade stand in front of my neighbor's house. The other day I stopped to buy a bag of popcorn.

Pointing to one bag the little clerk said, "this one is 5 cents" and pointing to another, "this one is 10 cents."

Why?" said I. Both are the same size. What's the difference?"

"Well," spoke up the young business man, "you see we spilled some lemonade over this bag of popcorn, so we're selling it half price."

REAL LOVE STORIES

Did you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, care Tribune, Chicago.

THAT KIND OF GIRL.

I HAD more to learn than how to draw when I left the little green and white village, and encountered New York for the first time. Everybody has heard so much about starvation in the garret art students that the rest of my existence wouldn't be a new story.

I lived in a little room in a basement and paid for it by tending the furnace and doing odd jobs for the landlady. She had been an actress and who had met the famous and near-famous people of New York card indexed—and spoke of each as though she knew him well. She was good to me; in fact, everybody in the house was good to the little kid in the basement.

There was a queer girl, a thin, tall creature with slim white hands and wide eyes, and a shock of black hair. Love had never come to me. I was the sort of girl who loved a man rather than men—and I met him in a sketch class. The haunting lucid eyes of my instructor burned into my soul, and his keenness disarmed me. I knew the moment I beheld him that he knew everything, I had ever thought—and everything I should ever dream. We recognised each other before we had ever exchanged a word. I knew he felt it, too—the atmosphere vibrated with the consciousness of it, and when he took the charcoal from my moist fingers to build up some weak lines in my sketch—his hand trembled.

His name was Jerome. I saw him daily for weeks, until I took a job and was obliged to leave school for a while. I was in a chronic state of insolvency. My father, bless him, was still preaching at his people from the pulpit of the shabby church in the little green and white village, and he couldn't send me money. He hadn't any. I could only help him by not letting him know I was hungry.

Then I attended a night school, and Jerome found me again. He came to night classes too—just in time to take me home. He brought heaps of fruit and wonderful books—and a queer jade ring that he said somebody carved for me centuries ago. And then he gave me a portrait of himself, by himself. Dear Jerome, I loved him for his silence when other people would have spoiled things by saying words.

One gorgeous April night he came in out of the rain with a beautiful black bowl for me. He had brought enough lilacs to fill it—and he arranged them on my little wash stand and worshiped them with his eyes. He left early—but that night before he went we stood for a moment in the doorway.

The night was dark and fragrant and holy—and sweet, sweet with the scent of lilacs. Jerome kissed me—and vanished swiftly into the dark and rain. I sat alone over my drawing board, sketching little boys, girls, men, and women—all with sapphire eyes and the full under lip of my Jerome.

The landlady dropped in to chat, and beheld for the first time the portrait of my beloved. She uttered a little cry of excitement and incredulity. She knew all about him—he had married an actress many years ago, who was hopelessly addicted to drugs; there was a child, something wrong with it, too—they lived in a sanitarium in California.

I think that's all of my love story—there isn't any more to tell. Of course, I had to walk down the path of disillusion and broken dreams—but the way was lilac scented with love and memory. They can't take that away, and my little jade ring, they can't take either. I never saw him again. I couldn't, so I went back to the little green and white village for awhile. My stay there lingered for weeks—and now two years have gone.

The lilacs have come back twice with their poignant hurt. I have written here my only love story, the only one I shall ever have to tell—because, alas, I am that kind of a girl.

Got Rid of Her Burning Feet

Thanks to Husband's Kindness

Calluses Also Peeled Right Off and Soft Corns Faded Away!

"For many years the burning calluses on my feet and soft corns between my toes, nearly drove me crazy," says Mrs. Anna Beckman. "My housework was endless torture and I was compelled to wear shoes much too large to get around at all. The terrible aches and pains almost ruined my nerves. In fact, I believe I aged ten years in the past year or two. Plasters, powders and medicated foot-baths did no good. But one day, thanks to my husband's kindness, he brought home a box of Gypsy Foot Relief, a secret from the desert. The very first time I used it, the burning stopped. Three days later the calluses peeled right off, leaving the skin soft and smooth, while the corns between my toes just seemed to fade away. The swelling went down and I can now wear shoes two sizes smaller than the ones I had to wear when my feet were in such awful shape. I really feel as if I had a pair of new feet, and I am telling all my friends and neighbors who have any foot troubles to use Gypsy Foot Relief."

NOTE.—Gypsy Foot Relief, referred to by Mrs. Beckman, can be applied in a minute, without fuss or bother. Sure, quick relief comes three minutes later, or the makers give back the little it costs. It is sold in this city by all good druggists, including:

BORN IN JULY YOU SHOULD MARRY—

by DORIS BLAKE

THE ideal state of matrimony is arrived at only by understanding and forbearance; no so much by the mate's appreciation of the virtues of the beloved but by understanding peculiarities and adjusting oneself to them.

Astrologers claim that by reason of the characteristics which the zodiacal signs impart to those born under their respective influence, not all natures are adjustable one to another.

That one sign, say Gemini, the June zodiacal sign, whose chief characteristic is a dual nature in active operation, contradictory, dissatisfied, moody climes, requires in a mate placidity, a sense of humor, one who will not be upset by the sudden decisions of a Gemini person. Marriage with one born in February or October has the augury of greater harmony than with any of the other twelve signs.

If you were born in July or, to be more astrologically correct, between June 21 and July 22, which is the period when Cancer holds sway, March and November are the months from which to choose your mate, according to star and plant lore. Rather a marriage with one born in either of these months will reach a higher plane of development in every way than if coupled with a less understanding matrimonial partner. The March and November people are endowed with the qualities which balance perfectly with those of the July born, thus reducing friction to its least common multiple.

Cancer persons embody the principles of home and family. They are the great mothers of the world. Even in the male the instinct is to look out for the best interests of all with whom he comes in contact. A deep and abiding love of home and family mark them. They are overanxious about making money to provide for the future. Loving, kind, and sympathetic, they are industrious and economical to an extreme, sometimes to the point of miserliness. Their love nature is their weakness. Therefore, Cancer persons attain their most perfect expression when given a home surrounded by family.

One born during March will understand these maternal instincts, and will supply the complementary traits of love, a gift of humor, lightheartedness, an anxiety about money matters, and provision for the future. Upright and honorable in their dealings, sensible, affable, and kind, they are. They need more self reliance which the Cancer born will supply. Jealousy, a characteristic of the March born, the Cancer person will not inflame as might another.

The November born will supplement the alliance with a Cancer person with dignity, reserve, intellect, and a control of appetite and passions. Their natures are better developed by temperaments which supply inspiration. They want to lead and be led, to lead in the affairs of the world and be led by a strong love motive.

The luckiest months in which July people may marry, it is said, are August and April, months to begin any new venture or arrangement for success. Their lucky colors are orange, green, and russet; emerald and black onyx their lucky stones.

Is Marriage a Failure

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

H. G. Wells, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful—in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful."

"Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question. Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Where Publicity Shines.

I want to reply to Frank, who attacks O. K.'s letter on the future a woman assures herself by marrying. I am 29, and have been married seven years. I was a nurse, and often earned more money than my husband did. I enjoyed good times and indulged in whatever opportunities offered. I spent money as I pleased and did not need to deny myself.

Now I have four small children. Our means do not permit me to keep help, so I do all the work myself, which includes sewing. If I go out in the evening I have to get some one to stay with the children. I have no opportunity for daytime amusements of any sort unless I take the family with me.

If this is assuring my future, very good. Of course, it does assure me a home and food for the work I do. My husband's meals are well prepared for him at home and his clothes cared for. The children are managed so that he may enjoy their company when he is at home. His comfort is assured as long as his wife lives.

I am happy and I think our marriage successful. Frank says the papers are full of stories about men who have been stung. Perhaps there are lots of them, but I think the happy stories are never published because there is no scandal concerned, which is news.

Find the right girl; think of something besides her pretty face and clothes; then you will have no reason to give alimony, if you treat her as thoughtfully as you did before she chanaged her name for yours.

MARY.

Learn to Conserve Love.

The question: "Is marriage a failure?" is like asking, "Are children healthy?" Some marriages are successful and some are not, and, although a few may be predestined to failure, most marriages depend for their success on the individuals concerned—their care of themselves and for each other.

Descartes, the philosopher, taught that it takes the same power to conserve as to create. How true of love! If the woman reminds herself frequently that all the little wiles and artifices of appearance and disposition used in catching her sweetheart need to be used to hold her husband, she will not have to worry.

If the husband continues his little acts of attention and devotion after marriage his wife will show no desire for other men. Let both consider the other before him or herself and use as a guide courtship days. A. R.

PROLOGUE.

We walked into the sunset of life looking back over our shoulders . . . searching for our childhood days through the rosy veils of mist that memory closes in with the years . . . surfaces glow with a vague, delightful radiance, outlines are deliciously blurred . . . episodes loom large out of all proportion, as objects seen in a fog . . . persons and places assume bright halos and opalescent auras . . . much of the legendary charm of the ol' swimmin' hole is due to the enchantment lent by distance . . . it is an off-focus photograph in which we can no longer see the stagnant scum on the "copruss" water, the blue, blue mud bottom, the millions of gnats and "snake-doctors" . . . and we have forgotten the two or three mile walk to get there and the reception committee which met us on our return and escorted us to the woodshed, where a hearty welcome was embossed on the bosom of our trousers with a water sprout off the lilac bush or a hand hewn paling off the front fence . . . and yet the city lad of our day, with miles of bathing beaches and eau blanche to go in as often as he pleases and stay as long as he likes, the kid is asked to envy doddering old dad and his ol' swimmin' hole, under the willows away back when . . . well, if he is a sensible lad he won't do it . . .

Scene I.

Grandma, who has come up from the country to visit the Potters, has never seen a bathing beach in the big city, so the Potters have brought her over today . . . the Blue Mill Garden failed to jar her in the least, for seems to be shock proof.

MA (to Pa, who is all dressed up in a striped bathing suit that would look equally well in or out of jail):
Take the baby for a walk,
Grandma wants to sit and talk.

(Pa takes the baby by the hand and leads him down to the water . . . sees interesting group of bathing girls who are distinctly easy on the eyes . . . absently wades into the water, holding baby by hand . . . keeps on wading, with eyes on moist curves of bathing girls.)

MA (who has been watching proceedings with mixed emotions):
Lookit him eyeing that girl . . . the cat!

GRANDMA (easily):
Let him look, what's the harm in that?

BABY (who is being dragged along and is rapidly getting out of his depth):
Wah . . . Blah . . . blub . . . bloob . . .

MA (wildly):
Pa, Pa . . . My child . . . My child!

PA (coming out of trance slowly and looking around):
Wuh . . . wuh . . . wass' matter, huh? Wass' matter?

MA (tearing down to the water's edge):
The baby . . . Look . . . You're drowning 'im!

PA (looking down and noticing for the first time the baby is practically out of sight . . . hauls him up hurriedly, turns him over and pounds him on the back . . . baby obediently coughs up part of lake):
Thass all right, Ma; he's all right . . .

(To himself):
I'll never hear the end of this . . . good-night!

1ST GIRL (to chum, indicating Pa):
Lookit the suit, will you?

2ND GIRL (giggling):
He looks like a zebra gone wrong.

1ST GIRL (giggling):
Why girls leave home, tee hee.

PA (to himself):
Little simps.

MA (to Grandma):
Why, the idea of him, and at his age, too. He'll hear from me.

GRANDMA (tolerantly):
Tut, tut. Peter's all right. A man that wouldn't look would be a hypocrite. You couldn't trust him out of sight.

MA (indignantly):
I'm surprised at you. Lookit those suits. It's a wonder they aren't arrested. It's an outrage, that's what it is. Somebody ought to notify the authorities.

GRANDMA (calmly):
There's too many people notifying the authorities these days about things like this that don't matter. And there's too many authorities ready to interfere and tell us what we can't wear and what we can't eat and what we should and should not read, but when it comes to settling strikes and adjusting real troubles they're too busy regulating the length of bathing skirts and testing the bubbles in the near beer to do anything about it. Free country they call it.

MA (decidedly):
It is a free country.

GRANDMA (sweetly):
Yes, you're free to do anything that will interfere with the freedom of other people. And then all these politicians get up and holler about life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness as if they invented all three of them, or at least two. In fact, all we've got left in this country nowadays if the life part of it, and that's getting to be worth less all the time. When I was a girl we didn't have so many people regulating morals by law and we got along real nicely, thank you. We was all so busy scratching a living out of the ground we had no time to go out reforming others. The only ones who seem to work more than eight hours a day these days and never go on a strike are the reformers. Maybe there's three unions of 'em, working eight hours each, drat 'em.

(Curtain.)

Scene II.

(Red Miller is a life guard at this beach . . . he got the job after he graduated . . . of course, there isn't much future in being a life guard, but Mamie and Red both have hopes that he will get something good this fall . . . they can't stay engaged forever, you know . . . meanwhile a cluster of dear young things continually hang around Red on the beach making it a perilous thing indeed for any prospective drowning persons who might rely on him to rescue them . . . as for Mamie, she's getting pretty tired of these open air harems that Red is conducting . . .)

SWEET YOUNG THING (to Red):
Oooh, what a wonderful tan you've got. And lookit the mus-kels . . . some mus-kels!

RED (indifferently flexing arm until biceps look like young goiter):
Ah, there ain't so much there. Feel 'em.

S. Y. T. (feeling 'em, gingerly):
Oooooh. Just like a rock. My, you must be strong.

SECOND S. Y. T. (edging into conversation):
I've got mus-kels, too. See?

(Draws up soft, rounded arm provocatively . . . Mamie in the offing sneers daintily.)

RED (feeling her arm):
I should say you have.

(Lets hand slide down her arm until he has her wrist . . . squeezes it . . . she tries to get away. Red holds her in iron grip.)

MAMIE (to herself from under her parasol):
Little snip! Why don't she find some one else to flirt with. Probably couldn't get a man to come down here with her.

RED (teasingly):
You see, I've got you now and I won't let you go.

SECOND S. Y. T. (with a thrilling look):
That's a beautiful thought. Hold it!

FIRST S. Y. T.
Can't I get in on this?

(Red grabs her by wrist . . . both struggle with him . . . this is getting too much for Mamie, who comes over to see what it's all about.)

MAMIE (easily):
Hello, Red, darling! What's the matter, won't they let you get away?

RED (slightly abashed):
We were just fooling.

"I've got mus-kels, to . . . See?"

MAMIE (coolly): I thought you were wrestling. (With proprietary air): C'mere, I want to tell you something.

(Takes Red by the arm and leads him off possessively . . . very proud . . . other girls quite chagrined . . . Mamie doubly proud because they are . . .)

I want you to teach me to swim.

(Hangs on Red's arm and turns around to give other girls a sweet look of triumph.)

RED (uneasily):
I—I—I can't, really I can't. You know I've gotta . . . sorter watch the beach, you know, in case any one was drownin' or somep'n, you know.

MAMIE (icily):
O, I see. You have a sort of understanding with them, I suppose, not to drown when you're flirting with other girls. Is that it?

RED (flaring):
Don't be silly. Of course not.

MAMIE (flaring):
Who's silly? Me? Yes, I suppose I am. I ask you to pay some attention to me and right away you say I'm silly. Very well, then. I'll stop being silly. You can go ahead and flirt and rescue or do anything you please. Good-by. (Walks away haughtily.)

RED (following her):
I didn't mean you were silly. Listen. Wait a minute. Wait. Listen. C'mon, I'll teach you to swim.

MAMIE (over her shoulder):
Don't trouble yourself. I'll get somebody else to teach me. You're not the only one who knows how to swim. Go on back to your life saving. Those girls look like they need some saving or somep'n.

RED (catching up with her and taking her arm angrily):
Look here. Now you listen. (Shakes her until her teeth rattle . . . well! . . . this is a new Red . . . Mamie interested in spite of herself . . . he's going to dominate her! Ah . . . the sheik, himself, come to life! . . . well, well, girls . . . this is something like.) I've had enough of this nonsense. You know right well I can't help it if the girls hang around me. They hang around all life guards. I'm going to take you into the water . . . and you're going to swim, too, or I'll duck you until you do. Get me?

MAMIE (who gets him and loves it, but realizes it won't do to let him see it):
O, so you're going to be brutal, are you? Let go my arm, you're hurting me. (Looks as if she were about to cry.)

RED (touched)
O, I didn't mean to hurt you. C'mon, I'll kiss it. (Does.) There, that's better, isn't it?

MAMIE (softening):
A little bit. Maybe another treatment or so would cure it.

(The treatments are continued until the patient is entirely satisfied . . . after which Red takes her into the water, where he has the usual trouble keeping her feet down and her head up . . . while Pa spends all his time searching for the baby on the shore or dashing into the water, rescuing him from deliberate suicide . . . and Grandma, sitting with Ma, assures her for the twentieth time she [Ma] is not nearly as fat as that woman over there or that other one over there . . . how sad life must be for the Fattest Woman in the World . . . she can never see any woman who is fatter than she is . . .)

GRANDMA (indicating boat far out on lake):
You know, I've never had a boat ride. Couldn't we take a trip?

MA (to Pa, who hates water):
How about it, Pa? I'd like a trip, too.

PA (hastily):
Ah, the water is too rough. And the squalls come up somep'n fierce. They're terrible.

MA (to Grandma):
Nothing of the sort. He's always trying to back out of things that way. We'll all go for a nice trip over night somewhere.

PA (who knows now he is in for it):
Ah, gosh, I don't wanna. It'll make me sick as a dog.

GRANDMA (cheerily):
I know I'll just love it. I can hardly wait.

(Neither can we . . . it will probably be awful . . . poor Ma . . . poor Grandma . . . poor Mamie . . . poor Bill . . . and Pa, poor Pa.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

JUNKMAN POINTS THE WAY.

IT was in the long and long ago that I met Billy. I have forgotten the year and the moontime, but neither Billy nor I had yet lit a half score candles on one birt hday cake when his folks moved into the little red house on the hill just behind our home. Billy went to the same school and studied, or pretended to study, in the same room as I.

Truly beautiful to me were his eyes, big and blue, shining out from a thin, solemn face, framed by blonde curls that, as I remember now, seemed always blowing across his forehead. And even more beautiful was the chivalrous grace with which he was wont to assist me in donning my rubbers on rainy days. And how gallantly and tirelessly, when the mud rivers had dried or frozen, and our once green lane woke asparkle with snow jewels, would Billy pull me to and fro on my little red sled. How generously would he ever share with me his penny square of butterscotch.

Truly I admired Billy. How often at home I sang his praises, despite the fact that my family looked somewhat askance at the newcomers on the hill.

On Saturday there came along our much heralded junkman, whose rare visits to this little town were acclaimed by the child populace. For did he not scatter broadcast shining coppers to all whose treasured stores of rags, rubbers, papers, and old iron balanced the scales?

Billy brought forth to be weighed a wondrous huge and heavy sack that as he tugged it, trailing in the slush of the roadway, bred envy in every other child heart—except mine, for did I not share always the bay leaves of my hero? Thoughtfully the junk man weighed Billy's spoils. Then, thrusting a brawny hand into the depths, he drew up and out and held before many wide eyes two bricks.

"You're beginning young, kid," he said. "Some day the pen'll git you!"

Abashed, Billy slunk away, cowering beneath the junkman's sternly pointing finger, not waiting for the two pennies due for the brickless sack. Ah, how literally had I beheld my idol's feet of clay! Crashed by the blow of a brickbat lay my beautiful ideal!

Strangely enough, in after years the pen did get Billy—for forgery! And so we have in all truth our moral, read by a junkman, from two bits of burned clay, clear to him as to the seer is his crystal.

APPROPRIATE CLOTHING FOR TOURING.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There are two ways of enjoying a vacation if you own an automobile, or rather three, as a friend suggested when I told him of this article; the third being to lock your car in a garage where it cannot follow you and then go far, far away. But the ones which we are interested in have to do with the automobile as a means of locomotion, and the first is touring, where you are covering a lot of ground and stopping off at hotels and inns overnight; and the other, automobile camping, when you construct your sleeping quarters where you stop for the night.

Writing an article involving male apparel connected with an automobile no longer means directing it to the exclusive attention of the wealthy. Today the man of moderate means purchases a little car, runs about the country, and sells it when he gets back. And hence he will be interested in appropriate clothing.

Automobile touring that involves appearing at hotels at night involves a certain amount of forethought in selecting one's clothing, for while one wishes to travel light and comfortably, one also desires to present a neat appearance wherever one happens to be stopping.

For the day's run a sport suit is perhaps the most advisable. It is suggested that you invest in the four piece kind, for as you leave the environments of the city you might wish to assume the more negligee wear of the country and don knickers. The material should be a rough tweed or cheviot, or some mixture rather than a solid color, something that will be least likely to show the stains of travel.

For evening wear at the hotel you can easily pack white flannels in your grip, and if you do not care to take an extra dark coat with you to wear with them you can use your sport coat and be perfectly proper, unless, of course, you stop at an establishment where evening dress for dinner is required, in which case you will be forewarned and will take your tuxedo. Another plan is to take with you a lightweight summer suit of mohair or gabardine, which takes up little space in your luggage and is sometimes a cool and pleasant relief from the heavier sport wear of the day.

Somehow or other the linen or mohair duster as an outer garment for motoring is not in as good repute as it used to be. Undoubtedly for extremely hot weather and a dry, dusty road it is the best possible protection for the clothes. But there seems to be a feeling today that it stamps one unmistakably as a "tourist" in the sense of the quotation marks and links one up with large motor goggles and pennants on the car, one of them reading "Excuse My Dust."

Today the most popular topcoats for motoring seem to be tweeds and cheviots, like the sport suits, but extremely light in weight. The models are the slip-on types, with raglan or kimono sleeves. A Chesterfield or any form fitting coat would, of course, be out of place in a car. You should determine the weight and lining by your knowledge of climatic conditions in the sections that you are planning to tour. If you are driving yourself you will not want it too long. And in this connection it is good to keep in mind that you will want lots of room in your sport suit—plaits in the back are to be recommended, as you will need space if you are driving, let us say, two hundred miles or so a day.

If you expect to run into rain, you will want protection. If your topcoat has been cravenetted, you will not need a rubber one. If, however, your slip-on is not waterproof, your selection of a raincoat should be made with light weight in mind, as there are few things hotter than a heavy airproof raincoat.

I saw some excellent examples of the waterproofing art in some three-quarter length coats of balloon cloth, which is cotton fabric waterproofed. These coats are light enough to pack in a small space. They come in black, dark brown, olive drab, and blue. They might also be put to good use on a golf course, or for general purposes, and finally—for that which brings us to the other phase of this article—automobile camping.

The rules here are simple. A waterproofed khaki suit is the most convenient wear both for traveling and camping. It does not show the dust, does not tear easily, and is the real camper's garb. You can wear either long trousers or breeches, depending upon whether or not you are going into the woods to pitch your camps. If this is the case, you will not want trouser cuffs flapping about, and will wear breeches with some sort of a legging, either canvas or the army roll puttees. For your hat I should recommend khaki, with a green underbrim or the Madagascar straw with green lining, as this will prove restful to the eyes while driving.

In case you are planning a reserve suit, should you wish to stop at a hotel, the same suggestion as for the automobile tourist are in order. You may pack white flannels and a coat, or a mohair suit, or even a sport suit.

And reverting once more to the man who expects to stop at hotels, it might be added that the cap, while worn a great deal, is not perhaps the best looking piece of headgear. A tweed cloth hat, or sometimes the Madagascar straw fedora, if a cool hat is desired, is worn with a more dressy effect.

Good News for a Scout.

"I wonder if you can tell me of a Boy Scout master who knows a boy who would like a Scout suit. I have hat, coat, trousers, and leggings which are too small for my boy and I would like to pass them on to some one who could use them. They would fit a boy 11 or 12 years old. I am leaving the city soon and would like to dispose of them as soon as possible.

Pompeian Beauty Powder

Her beauty captivates and holds

HIS attention is all hers, for she is as fair as a summer day. Her charm and refinement—her exquisite coloring—captivate him—hold him. Such is your reward if you know and use the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette"—the secret of Instant Beauty.

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly. Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance. Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty? Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant! (Above 3 preparations may be used separately or together. At all druggists, 60c each.)

TRY NEW POWDER SHADES. The correct powder shade is more important than the color of dress you wear. Our new NATURELLE shade is a more delicate tone than our Flesh shade, and blends exquisitely with a medium complexion. Our new RACHEL shade is a rich cream tone for brunettes.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a real love letter, or if you have one in your grandma's family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, keep copies of the ones you wish to retain yourself.

THE ETERNAL MIRACLE.

PHILIP DEAREST: I suppose you will think me foolish to write this right upon the heels of your departure, but O, your good-night kiss! I can still feel the pressure of your lips, against mine, and, dearest—let me admit it—I knew the moment your trembling lips met mine that I had found a man who would always reverence me, always treat me with the greatest tenderness.

And I want you to know that I prize your qualities above wealth. You need not feel worried about money, dear boy. Love is always supreme in marriage. And, sweetheart, you don't know me well enough yet to realize that the practical is combined with the romantic traits in my nature. So I have no fears.

You will get this early in the morning. I wish you might get it tonight, Sweetheart, am I foolish? It may be so—doubtless others would think so to see me sitting here writing this. I am happy, so happy, and so filled with wonder that such love has come to me.

Dearest, good night. I still keep up the childish habit of saying my prayers and I shall have something wonderful to give thanks for tonight. Good night again. Until tomorrow evening, beloved. JEANNE.

My Vacation Adventures

What was the most thrilling moment in your vacation? Was it on a boat or motor ride on a lonely night with the only one? Was it at a dance? Was it a kiss in the moonlight? Or was it a fight with a big fish? Or a close call when your canoe upset? Write your most thrilling experience and send it to Vacation Editor, The Sunday Tribune. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Wrestling with a Trout.

The most thrilling moment of my vacation was when I pulled a rainbow trout a foot and a half long out of the creek. As he reached the bridge, which had three inches of water running over it, he managed to unhook himself and flounder around trying to get back into the creek. Although it is some time since I played football, I made a pretty diving tackle on that wriggling fish. I pinned him against my chest and after considerable turning and twisting on his part I finally managed to land him. A. O. I.

And She Couldn't Swim.

A friend and I went rowing one cold, windy night, which wouldn't have caused much excitement if I had been able to swim. We rowed out about a half mile to a sailboat and Eve asked me to hold on to the sailboat while she tied the rowboat to it. I grasped the edge and hung on firmly.

Just at that inopportune moment there came a mighty gust of wind, and as I am small and light it carried the boat off, taking my feet with it and leaving my hands grasping the edge of the sailboat.

I hadn't had time to think when another mighty gust blew the rowboat clear off, leaving me dangling in the air wondering how long I could hold on. It seemed a veritable eternity before my friend managed to pull the little boat around and land me in it again. K. C.

That Ended That.

As many of my friends have taken up horseback riding this summer, I, too, decided to give it a trial. I rented a horse and began to ride every evening. I was frightened at first, but stuck to it.

One evening I was out riding with a friend who knew as little about horses as I. We came to a quarry lake and stopped to let the horses drink. I dismounted to adjust a stirrup and when I tried to remount, the horse objected strenuously. As I swung to the saddle he bucked, and I sailed gracefully over his head and out into the center of the quarry.

I suddenly remembered that the place was practically bottomless with treacherous rock ledges on all sides. For a few seconds after I landed in the water I floundered around, forgetting to swim. Then it came to me that if I was to be saved I must do it myself. Paddling vigorously I started out for a low, smooth place on the edge. At last I reached it, with the comforting thought that I need not ride again. M. La B.

It isn't necessary to read this part of our advertisement, as there are no prices and no lists of merchandise. Simply a statement of facts that might be of interest to those curious to know why. Starting with practically nothing, we've become, in three years' time, the largest sellers of Army Goods in America.

Probably most of you remember that a few years ago almost every prominent corner in Chicago, and other cities as well, was dotted with those bakeries that baked fresh bread about every hour. It seemed as if the bakery business was being revolutionized. Guess some of the Heads of the large bakeries were spending sleepless nights. Hundreds of people who never even knew flour went into the making of bread— became bakers over night— until the inevitable happened, the survival of the fittest. Today the firm that established its business along approved business lines is still selling bread, and the others, they're back again to their old jobs.

And the army goods business is running the same course. Thousands of Army Goods Stores have sprouted up— scores of them in Chicago alone. But it's again a case of the survival of the fittest. Unfortunately all Army Goods Stores are judged by the conduct of the majority. That's why we're spending over a hundred thousand dollars this year, most of it with the Chicago Tribune, trying to educate the people to distinguish between Army Goods Stores.

We've built our business on the broad foundation of service. We aim to be as liberal in our treatment of the public as the most advanced department store. There's no firm that refunds for unsatisfactory purchases, any quicker and with the use of less red tape than we do. Inasmuch as most of our purchases are made from the Government we guarantee nothing. We don't tell you a blanket is all wool when we don't know (and very few salesmen do know). We don't tell you a shoe is solid leather, because we don't manufacture the shoes, so don't know. We're glad to show you the goods; we're glad to sell you the goods, and we're glad to take the goods back if unsatisfactory. Have you visited our Retail Store? If you haven't, you'll be astounded at the variety of merchandise procurable at the largest Army Goods Store in the world.

U. S. GOVERNMENT
CARTS OR TRAILERS
Strongest ingenuity could produce. Every conceivable reinforcement. The box is 5 ft. long, 4 ft. wide, 21 in. deep, about 1¾ in. thick. Wheels iron covered and about 3 in. thick. 40-in. diam. with 16 massive, solid spokes, 3 staves for canvas cover. Shafts, chain tugs, seat, footboard, back chain and poles, etc. Best trailer money can buy. Cost to the Government, we understand, was a trifle under $300.00. Deliveries will be made from Gov't warehouse at Hawthorne. $25

U. S. GOVERNMENT
ESCORT WAGONS $60
Brand new; a really wonderful wagon for coal, ice or general hauling. They do not make wagons like this for general use — the Government used extra precautions to get the sturdiest, best wagon procurable, regardless of the cost. Two or Four Horse drawn vehicle. We've been told the Government cost was around $400.00. This wagon is for either Two or Four Horses. The body is hardwood, 10 ft. long, 3½ ft. wide and 23½ in. high. Rear wheels are 4 ft. 7 in.; front, 3 ft. 9 in. Tires are 3 in. wide.

We ship by Parcel Post, Express or Freight to any part of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Parcel Post Shipments must include sufficient postage to cover cost of shipment.

"My Wild Irish Rose" Has a Rival for "Freckles" Barry

"My Wild Irish Rose."

Produced by Vitagraph. Directed by David Smith.
Conn, the Shaughraun.....Pat O'Malley
Rose O'Neale.....Helen Howard
Claire Fiolliott.....Maude Emery
Moya.....Pauline Starke
Robert Fiolliott.....Edward Cecil
Captain Molineux.....Edward Cecil

By Caroline Krum.

WELL, if you fall in love with any of the masculine characters in "My Wild Irish Rose," I'm willing to wager that it won't be with the Shaughraun, or his "Masther Robert," or even the dashing English captain. But it will be with a little freckle faced rascal known in the picture as Barry, and in real life as "Mickey" (pardon me, Mister Richard!) Barlals. I suspect that the author never wrote this important little person into his play. It looks as if the moving picture people, knowing the soft spot we all have in our grown up hearts for the kids we would like to be again, had just shoved him in, equipped with a dog and a two wheeled cart attached to a goat, and told him to go ahead and captivate the audience. And that's what the barefooted little ragamuffin does. He's as freckled and as saucy and as thoroughly adorable as he can be.

"I WANT TO SING."

The play from which this picture is taken is "The Shaughraun," by Dion Boucicault. Is the word "shaughraun" in your vocabularies? It wasn't in ours either, but we hurried up and found out the meaning, and then put it there as quick as a wink. It's another name for ne'er do weel, and a mighty nice one, we think. Don't you?

Like most ne'er do weels about whom plays are built, this one turns out to be pretty much worth while after all. He may poach and steal and poke fun where wiser folk are serious, but he has the heart of a fighter, and when it comes time for him to lay down his life for another, he isn't found wanting. Don't gather from this that the picture is going to have an unhappy ending. Far from it. After a series of adventures, everything comes out just as you hope it will, and the three sets of lovers live happily ever after.

Lots of Atmosphere and Local Color.

It's a delightful bit of nineteenth century drama, this play of Boucicault's. You have probably laughed and thrilled over the same things dozens of times before, for the plot isn't new. You probably will dozens of times again. The days of romance and valor doesn't die. The clank of swords and the musty scent of old crinolines have charm that cannot be denied. And the director of "My Wild Irish Rose" has managed to imbue his picture with a lot of the atmosphere and local color of an Irish village of fifty years ago, when Fenians and soldiers of the queen battled at the drop of the hat.

It looks as if the cast enjoyed working on the picture, which always helps well for the results. There isn't any great acting, to be sure, but it is quite satisfactory. Pauline Starke makes a quaint little figure in her Egyptian curls and long, full skirts. And so do the two other colleens, Helen Howard and Maude Emery. It's a nice change from the bobbed heads and short waisted frocks of today, this glimpse back into Victorian times.

Edward Cecil is a bit inclined to be heavy, but perhaps the importance of imprisonment and exile and imprisonment weighs upon him. It wouldn't be difficult to imagine that it might, would it? James Farley and Bobbie Mack play their evil roles with sincerity. Horrid, leering old things! And Pat Farley is as Irish as his name, with a glint in his eye and a ready blow in his fist, when there's occasion for either.

It's a matter of real regret that the gay colors of dresses and uniforms

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

Thirty-sixth paper—Macaulay's "England" (second article).

The liberty of discussion is the chief safeguard of all other liberties.

Great wealth, suddenly acquired, is not often enjoyed with moderation, dignity, and good sense.

It is possible to be below flattery as well as above it.

... that perfect disinterestedness and self-devotion of which man seems to be incapable, but which is sometimes found in women.

The habit of breaking even an unreasonable law tends to make men altogether lawless.

Persecution produced its natural effect on them. It found them a sect, it made them a faction.

The Puritan hated bear baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators.

He [Richard Rumbold on the scaffold] would never believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.

Men who have once engaged in a wicked and perilous enterprise are no longer their own masters, and are often impelled, by a fatality which is part of their just punishment, to crimes such as they would at first have shuddered to contemplate.

A man whose life has been passed in attacking and domineering, whatever may be his talents and courage, generally makes a poor figure when he is vigorously assailed; for, being unaccustomed to stand on the defensive, he becomes confused; and the knowledge that all those whom he has insulted are enjoying his confusion confuses him still more.
THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY.
("History of England.")

NO man knew better than Macaulay the value of the concrete in fixing attention and no man since the elder Pitt had employed the concrete with greater effect. That effect he could produce not alone amid the magnificence of his history but also amid the strain and excitement of a great night in the House of Commons. His mind leaped to the vivid. "Can we wonder," he said, in his scathing arraignment of Peel in the speech on the Maynooth College bill of 1845—the speech that contains the withering "There you sit. . . . Stand up manfully"—"Can we wonder that from one end of the country to the other everything should be in ferment and uproar, that petitions should, night after night, whiten all our benches like a snowstorm?"

The italicized utterance is far from as great as John Bright's more famous "You may almost hear the beating of his wings" (Angel of Death passage in the Crimean war speech), but it was, for the immediate purpose, almost as big an effect.

And in the history—amid that swift moving narrative of Prince William's landing at Torbay and his progress across the southern shires, which fills so large a part of Chapter IX—Macaulay is not content to tell you merely that the discipline of the deliverer's forces was rigid and that the demeanor of his soldiers was civil. He does tell you that, but he also drives it home with specific taps—

Those who had formed their notions of an army from the conduct of Kirke and his Lambs were amazed to see soldiers who never swore at a landlady or took an egg without paying for it.

Glance into the work six volumes beyond or, chronologically speaking, ten years later. He is writing of the conditions maintaining just before the general election of 1698. The hand has not lost its cunning:

There was peace abroad and at home. The sentinels had ceased to watch by the beacons of Dorsetshire and Sussex.

This zest in the concrete, this artist's faith in its decorative value and its vivacity, touch and illuminate a thousand topics and personalities in this glowing book. In his account of the riots of the night of Dec. 11, 1688, when the Great Seal lies at the bottom of the Thames and the torch has been set to the King's printing house, he tells you that that structure was "completely gutted" and bethinks himself to add—" to use a coarse metaphor which then, for the first time, came into fashion."

This tireless vivacity, attained by his great expedient, is of much worth; the witchery with which it imbues his impartment of information is of far more, and a signal example of that witchery—that memory-fixing charm—is the eight pages of Chapter XXIII, describing the visit of Peter the Great to

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.
"Glimpses of the Moon," by Edith Wharton.
"Mortal Coils," by Aldous Huxley.
"The Breaking Point," by Mary Roberts Rinehart.
"Peter Whiffle," by Carl Van Vechten.
"Robin," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.

NONFICTION.
"Outline of Science," Vols. I. and II., by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson.
"My Discovery of England," by Stephen Leacock.
"Minds and Manners of Wild Animals," by Dr. William T. Hornaday.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.
Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"Secret Places of the Heart," by H. G. Wells.
"Peter Whiffle," by Carl Van Vechten.
"The Vehement Flame," by Margaret Deland.
"The Mind in the Making," by Dr. James Harvey Robinson.
"The Conquest of Fear," by Basil King.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.

By Fanny Butcher.

A SULTRY summer afternoon, too soon after luncheon to go into the water, too late to get in a nap before it's time to go in the water, too hot to tramp, too sultry to play tennis, too revoltingly sizzling in the sun to start out on another eighteen holes of golf, too everything to live . . . that's the time when Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Breaking Point," on the low wicker stool beside you, flanked by a glass of rich near-sparkling burgundy and bounded on the east by a box of caramels, seems the incarnation in type of a vacation. It is a mystery story. It has a murder, a case of lost identity, a villyan, a nactress, a doctor, a sweet and beautiful girl, high powered cars, and chugging second hand ones, a wild western scene, thrilling escapes—in fact, it's Mary Roberts Rinehart at her most skillful best.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART.

It's a low trick to give away the plot of a story when the story is all plot, so, being a gentleman, I refrain from telling you more, except that it kept us up until even the bridge sheiks across the street had folded up their tents and that we had neither the near-sparkling burgundy nor the caramels to aid and abet its cunning.

It strains neither your mind nor your pocketbook to the breaking point.

Brother, It Probably Shall.

"Shall It Be Again?" is the title of an exhaustive volume on the causes and results of the late war, by John Kenneth Turner. In his preface he says:

Instead of laying the foundations for future peace, our war set up the ground work for more and more war. . . . Only after the shams of the past war have been exploded, its true motives revealed, and its methods and results shine clear in the light of these motives, can a beginning be made towards ways that will insure us against future horrors.

Tinklings of the Chestnut Bell.

Bill Johnston's Joy Book is the title of a collection of 2,002 jokes which William T. Johnston has gathered together. In it will be found all of the original bright sayings of children, all of the hoary ford jokes, everything that ever flourished under the spreading chestnut tree. The jokes are indexed, so that if you yearn for a flip remark about death or religion or mothers-in-law you have only to seek and you shall find. They aren't, one might add, examples

Ziegfeld-Morosco Shops Plan Ten New Productions

The New York Times.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—[Special.]—Several producers have been announcing their plans for the season, and, although these pre-season statements are never followed literally, it is interesting to inspect them. Mr. Ziegfeld, for example, says he will actually make half a dozen productions during the season, whereas the world at large knows well that he will spend most of the winter at Palm Beach. If he follows his program, however, he will present a comedy for Billie Burke (this one may be regarded as certain), a musical comedy for Fanny Brice, a musical piece of the Messrs. Buck and Lardner, still another musical piece for Mary Eaton, and a midwinter revue by the authors of the "Follies."

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD.

From out of the west comes news that Oliver Morosco is preparing several new pieces: Leo Carrillo is about to appear on the coast in "Mike Angelo," by Edward Locke; "The Hurdygurdy Man," by Le Roy Clemens and John B. Hymer, soon will be made ready; Thompson Buchanan, author of "Civilian Clothes," has a new one, entitled "The Sporting Thing to Do," which Mr. Morosco will soon produce; and there is also a new musical comedy in the offing.

Carroll McComas will play the leading rôle in "Mary, Get Your Hair Cut," which Max Marcin soon will produce.

Brock Pemberton will make his first production of the season at the Booth theater on Labor day. It will be a comedy from the Italian, adapted by Thomas Beer. Speaking of the Pemberton plans, Violet Heming may play the leading rôle in Dunsany's "If."

Faversham Going Into Vaudeville.

William Faversham is planning to spend the season, or part of it, in vaudeville.

This year's Hippodrome show will be called "Better Times," and will probably have its premiere on Saturday night, Sept. 2.

Wagenhals & Kemper have acquired a play by the Hattons, entitled "Longacre Green." It will be produced out of town on Oct. 16. Meanwhile the firm will begin its New York activities at the Morosco theater on Sept. 12, when the new Hopwood farce—or is it a comedy?—"Why Men Leave Home," will be presented.

The Selwyns will produce Martin Brown's "The Exciters" out of town in a week or so. Allan Dinehart and Tallulah Bankhead will have the leading rôles.

Frank Tinney, comes the report from the road, appears only in white-face in "Daffy-Dill."

Mr. Cohan's first offering of the season, a comedy by Arthur Goodrich, is now known as "So, This Is London!" It will come to the Hudson theater during the week of Aug. 28.

"The Hairy Ape" will begin a tour in Philadelphia on Labor day.

Marjorie Rambeau will end her engagement in "The Goldfish" at the Shubert this week. She goes thence to Chicago.

BILLIE BURKE.

The Marie Tempest comedy, "A Serpent's Tooth," will arrive at the Golden theater (née Little) on Aug. 24. The play is concerned with a wayward son who has been spoiled by a doting mother, but is said to be distinguished by its manner rather than its plot content. Miss Tempest, of course, is the doting mother, and Leslie Howard, late of "The Truth About Blayds," plays the son.

The week beyond this probably will bring four or five attractions to town. There will be Louis Evan Shipman's play, "Fools Errant," at the Maxine

Newly Reduced Prices Range from $915 to $2190, f. o. b. factory

Unusually Attractive Time-Payment Plan

Visit Our Exhibit at the Pageant of Progress, Municipal Pier

The conditionally high value of the Nash has been importantly increased by substantial reductions in the prices of all Nash models.

Nash's initiative in leading the way to lower price levels serves again to emphasize the truth of the statement that "Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value."

At these new prices, which mark the very bottom of the market, no prospective purchaser should hesitate a moment in making the selection of his favorite model.

Our fortunate nearness to the great Nash plants at Kenosha and Milwaukee gives us the advantage of assuring you immediate delivery despite the vigorously growing preference Chicago buyers are showing for the Nash.

Not only are these the greatest automobile values C. W. Nash has ever offered to the American public, but the cars themselves are even finer cars.

The Nash policy of manufacture includes consistent and persistent improvements and betterment in every possible detail of design and construction.

Make a memorandum at once to come in and inspect the various models in the line personally.

You will find that every measurement of the car is of more generous proportion than the standard. The frame is huskier; the crank shaft heavier; the bearings larger; more actual labor is expended in each operation; the motor develops more power; all shafts are thicker—and so it goes clear through the car.

The best part of the summer and the long fall are still before you. Bring your check-book with you and drive your car away.

Plays Are Coming for Annual Fall Rush

STILL they come. Since the preliminary forecast of engagements at Chicago theaters was printed in this column last Sunday word has come of the approach of "Thank-U" at the Cort; "Good Morning, Dearie," at the Colonial; H. S. Warner in "Bull Dog Drummond" at Powers'; Leo Ditrichstein in "The Mountebank of Emotions"; Shubert vaudeville at the Garrick, and Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool" at the Illinois.

Arranging them into something like chronological sequence, the following catalog is evolved:

Tonight—Fiske O'Hara in his annual opus of the Emerald isle, "Land o' Romance"; Olympic.

Aug. 20—Helen Hayes in "To the Ladies"; Grand.

Aug. 21—Marjorie Rambeau in "The Goldfish"; Garrick.

Aug. 27—"Thank-U"; Cort.

Aug. 27—Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool"; Illinois.

Aug. 28—"Good Morning, Dearie"; Colonial.

Aug. 31—Pauline Frederick in "The Guilty One"; Woods.

Sept. 1—H. B. Warner in "Bull Dog Drummond"; Powers.

Sept. 2.—Olga Petrova in her own "The White Peacock"; Playhouse.

Sept. 3.—"The Cat and the Canary"; Princess.

Sept. 17.—Shubert vaudeville; Garrick.

Sept. 17.—Al Jolson in "Bombo"; Apollo.

Sept. 17.—Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield in "The Blushing Bride"; Great Northern.

Oct. 2.—Leo Ditrichstein in "The Mountebank of Emotions"; La Salle.

By this time the dramatic critics will be fairly willing to admit that the season is well open and the public will have formed an idea of the entertainment value of the various items.

Advance Bulletins.

Preliminary comment gleaned here and there is to the effect that Mr. O'Hara will play the part of a rich young artist, Michael Sheridan, and have many adventures of a comic nature in his efforts to evade the snares set by matchmaking mothers. Miss Pat Clary, returning to the supporting cast after a year's absence, will appear as a ragged little French boy. There will be songs—no O'Hara play would be complete without them—for the O'Hara tenor. Some of them are "Land o' Romance," "Father O'Flynn," "Broth of a Boy," and "Thank God for a Garden." Anna Nichols follows the annual custom of being the author.

"The Goldfish" is reported to have a slighter tendency toward lofty-browism than "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting," in which Miss Rambeau last appeared in Chicago. She plays the part of a gold-digger whose adventures in the field of love lead her into various paths, amusing and thrilling. Wilfred Lytell is in her company.

A Gotham Success.

"Thank-U," by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, was liked by the New Yorkers to the extent of 300 performances last season. The original cast is promised here. It includes Harry Davenport, Donald Foster, Edith King, Frank Munroe, George A. Schiller, and Phyllis Rankin.

"The Guilty One" has a reputation still in the future. It is described as a modern, domestic drama, and, with the exception of a few performances on the way hither, will be untried when it opens in this city. It is by Michael Morton and Peter Traill. Miss Frederick will have histrionic assistance from Charles Dalton, Charles Waldron, Iah Keith, Henry Warwick, Ethel Intropodi, and Florence Edney.

If you like thrills, you will probably save up your emotions for "The Cat and the Canary." Advance words thereon say that it is filled with dark rooms, shrieks, insane people, and beautiful heroines. Ralph Morgan will play the leading masculine part in it, and Miriam Doyle, Chicagoan, last appearing here with Ditrichstein in "The King," will function similarly on the distaff side.

VIVIAN MARTIN.
[Raymor Photo.]

Vivian Martin is doing her share in making the summer easy to endure through her part in "Just Married" at the La Salle. The farce has been resident in Chicago for sixteen weeks, and will remain for a while longer.

New Member in "Lightin'."

Grace Perkins is the new Millie in "Lightnin'," the third since the play began its long run at the Blackstone. She comes here from the John Ramsey stock company of Rochester, N. Y. Ida St. Leon, who has been playing the part since the first of June, has gone to play it in the peripatetic company that will be headed by Thomas Jefferson. This organization will begin its travels in Detroit Aug. 27.

The German stock company, which has been playing at the Bush Temple theater for some seasons, has moved to the Victoria. Conrad Seidemann is the director. The Bush Temple will exist no longer as a theater, its space being reconstructed into offices.

At the Marigold.

A new show called "The Fall Frolic" will begin operations at Marigold gardens tomorrow night. Ernie Young is the producer. Lavish costume effects and stage settings are promised. The cast includes Ann Greenway, prima donna; Countess Jeanne de Villeneuve, interpretative dancer; Fowler and Tamara, exhibition "hoofers"; Leonetta Ball and Arthur Lang, singers; Frank Libuse, acrobatic clown, and the Elida ballet.

The cast which will be seen in the play, "Why Wives Go Wrong," includes Hilda Graham, Richard Earle, Augustus Neville, Arnold Monroe, Virginia Stuart, George D. Chase, and Philip Carteret. A new scenic production has been painted by Eugene Cox Jr. Miss Graham and Mr. Earle have just finished an engagement with "Lilies of the Field"; Mr. Neville joins the cast after a season with Jack Lait; Miss Stuart has been leading woman in stock in Kalamazoo all summer; Mr. Chase was with Sothern and Marlowe last winter, and Mr. Carteret was leading man in Philadelphia in stock.

Straight from the Publicity Herald.

"The poetry of the love scenes in Madame Petrova's play, 'The White Peacock,' has been likened to the songs of Solomon in its power, dignity and beauty.

"The following is the sheerest fragment from the second act:

Your eyes . . .
Are like stars
Under the white veil of a cloud.

You are proud
And white . . .
Like the silver peacock
In the garden of Marie Louise.

You are like a lioness
In the jungle;
You look at me
And you are not afraid.

Your body . . .
Is like the rising moon.

Your mouth . . .
Is redder
. . . than blood!

More About "To the Ladies!"

As the gratitude dripping title of "Thank-U" moves back to the 27th inst., the toasting name of "To the Ladies!" is left without what the managers call "opposition" for the tonight's-the-night activities of next Sunday; as already made known, Cohan's Grand will then be relighted for the return to Chicago of Helen Hayes, who definitely and memorably "took us along" when she came hither in the first half of last year to act in "Bab." We are told by the managers, some of them, that the impending season will be quick and high in reacting to bettered general conditions; and we are told by the managers, some of them, that the impending season will have to carry on its shoulders still more of the make weight which is part of our legacy from the latest unpleasantness, in world matters.

We all know this—that the saddest thing in stage art is a closed playhouse. All of us who care for laughter in the theater are rejoiced, therefore, that Miss Hayes is to be the agent of restoration in the Grand, a retreat seldom "dark" in the last twenty years; and we are glad that her play is by the youths who made us laugh so often with their "Dulcy."

We Get Too Little Travesty.

The lamented B. L. T., it is remembered, told his uncounted (because countless) readers, in re "Dulcy," that its success gave to us new reason for thinking that the general theatergoer supported blowsy things in the drama only because of the lack of good things. He saw in the fun and in the social travesty of "Dulcy" a gift in the authors for the type of topical satire which was the basic element in the operettas and the plays of W. S. Gilbert. So, more or less consciously, did all of us who went to "Dulcy" in its merry months in the Cort; and what we said about it was echoed and reechoed by Manhattan island and by Boston when, in turn, the comedy was sent on its mission of mirth to those centers.

For we get too little travesty in our theaters. Hoyt used to give it to us in pungent doses, sugared with song and dance at first, but always tending to what is called "straight"—i. e., plays without music, like "A Temperance Town," in which he foresaw a day when Volstead would have a hand in our social routine. Clyde Fitch confessedly had small belief in the appetite of the American theater goer for satire and purveyed it only in minor portions, and always through the characters designed as "comic relief." George M. Cohan goes farther than Fitch went, but is none the less wary; he somehow gave to us the impression that he put on "The Tavern" for his own enjoyment, but with full permission to us to laugh with him if we cared to do so. He is more inclined to poke fun at what we like than for what we are or think we are.

The Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly were forthright in "Dulcy," and are said to have been at least equally forthright in "To the Ladies!" There is, for example, a banquet scene which, it is believed by those who have seen the new comedy, is going to put banquets into the storeroom along with antimacassars, celluloid cuffs, the old Rush street bridge, and the Hapsburg dynasty, and another which is going to make us laugh every time an efficiency man comes round to explain how we can get 103 more words per week out of our typewriter by using the little finger to hit the space bar after a comma. And satire, whatever its form—whether as subtle as Gilbert or as broad as Hoyt—is no good in the theater unless it be destructive and corrective. "To the Ladies!" is said to have that effect, although nobody has so far accused its authors of being reformers. And they have, by all accounts, given to Helen Hayes a part worthy of the especial talent she displayed for us in "Bab."

EDITH KING.
[Schwarz photo.]

Edith King will be prominently among those present when "Thank-U," the comedy by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, finds refuge at the Cort late this month.

Ziegfeld-Morosco Shops Plan Ten New Productions

Elliott, with a cast including Alexandra Carlisle, Cyril Kerghtley, and Vincent Serrano; there will be Frank Tinney at the Apollo in "Duffy-Dill"; there will be "Tons of Money" at the Gaiety, "A Serpent's Tooth" at the Golden, and probably others.

Out of the several scores of plays that A. H. Woods has acquired, three loom up as likely to achieve early production. These, of course, are exclusive of "Lonely Wives," "East of Suez," and "The Guilty One," which are already under way. The new ones are Bataille's "The Child of Love," adapted by Martin Brown; another play from the French, called "The Masked Lady," and an American play by Kate Jordan, called "The Next Corner."

AL WOODS.

Pauline Frederick Scores Hit.

Pauline Frederick, back on the stage after a number of years, appears to have a success in "The Guilty One," produced last week in Atlantic City and going from there to Chicago. The play, by Michael Morgan and Peter Traill, is admitted by conventional in design, but the box office returns in Atlantic City indicate it is a huge hit. It was enough of a success on the opening night to bring Mr. Woods himself before the curtain to make a speech, and that is something that never had happened before.

PAULINE FREDERICK.
[Evans Photo.]

Another Atlantic City premiere of the week was that of "The Nervous Wreck," written by Owen Davis and produced by Sam H. Harris. The plot is too complicated to be related here in any detail, but it seems to be concerned with a hypochondriac who undertakes to drive through a cañon with a Ford and a girl, and with the various adventures that follow thereupon. Mr. Davis has based his play upon a story by E. J. Ruth.

In Cleveland during the last week a new comedy by Booth Tarkington was tried out—this being a play, entitled "Bristol Glass," which had been in the possession of George C. Tyler for a season or more. The leading roles were taken by Gregory Kelly and Ruth Gordon.

"The Clansman" Revived.

Unquestionably the recent Ku Klux Klan agitation is inspiring a revival of Mr. Dixon's "The Clansman." It will go south for a few months, and a New York production is promised for November. Revivals have been faring none too well in these parts, and it will be interesting to see what happens to "The Clansman."

FANNIE BRICE.
[Monroe Photo.]

After all, Louis Mann will not be seen in the new Aaron Hoffman comedy, "Give and Take," which Max Marcin is producing. Mr. Mann, it is now reported, has allied himself with a farce to be produced by one Cahan—and nothing more seems to be known about it.

Basil Dean, who is presently coming back to New York to stage "Loyalties" for Charles B. Dillingham, delivered a lecture in London recently on matters dramatic, in which he touched en passant on the American stage.

"Here," declared Mr. Dean, "you have trades unionism rampant; the relations between actor, audience, and manager thoroughly unsatisfactory, the worst evils of commercialism visible everywhere, with a delicious fungus, known as the play doctor, busily engaged in warping and twisting other people's work to the demands of star performers." Which is that.

OPENING THE SEASON.
[White photo.]

She is Pat Clary, Miss Pat when her picture is not appended for distinguishing purposes. Absent from the stage for a year, she will assist Fiske O'Hara in opening the theatrical season in "Land o' Romance" at the Olympic theater tonight.

No One to Guide Them.

Having helped his mother plant the seeds and place at the end of each row the pictured envelopes showing here a radish, there a beet, and so on, Edwin was quite distressed when he went out next day and found that the rainstorm had washed the envelopes off into the mud.

"Never mind, dear," comforted his mother; "it really doesn't matter."

"But," said the child, greatly worried; "how will the little seeds know what to be when they come up?"

The clerk was showing a customer some parasols.

As he picked up one from the lot on the counter, he struck an attitude of admiration and, holding it up to the light, said: "Now, isn't that lovely? Look at the silk. Observe the quality, the finish, the general effect. Feel it. Pass your hand over it. No nonsense about that parasol, is there?"

"No," said the customer, "that's my old one. I just laid it there." W. J.

"My Irish Rose" Has a Rival for "Freckles" Barry

(British redcoats, you know) have to be lost in the photographing. They must have been awfully effective against the verdure of the countryside.

And last of all I want to sing a special little hymn of praise to the man (or woman) who wrote the subtitles. He (or she) did a mighty good job.

CLOSEUPS

We hear that the Fairbankses [Douglas and Mary] are planning to go to Africa next year. Douglas wants to do some big game hunting, and is going to hire a houseboat and have it towed up the Nile to the proper location.

Thomas Meighan's next picture will be "Back Home and Broke," his second George Ade story. Alfred Green is to direct it.

Tyrone Power is to have the part of Richard Barthelmess' father in "Fury," to be filmed as soon as "The Bondboy" is completed.

The picture which Elsie Ferguson plans to go to work on next—her first since "Peter Ibbetson"—will be "Outcast," taken from the play of the same name by Hubert Henry Davies.

KICK KORNER

My Dear Miss Tinée: This is a metaphysical kick. In "Borderland" with Agnes Ayres, the child and dog in the picture were inseparable pals. In the process of the fire, with great pomp and ceremony a nebulous angel enwraps the dead child in its arms and knightway hastens off to "Borderland." A close-up reveals the dog fondly embraced in the fiery caresses. Since, the dog was later in heaven playing an important part, and since they both died together, I think that it is outrageous and inexcusable that the director neglected to furnish a beautiful cosmic canine angel to insure the mongrel his heavenward transportation. FITHIAN.

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw "The Storm" this evening. I may have wrong ideas as to Canada, but I thought you had to wait for a crust to form over the snow before going out on it with snowshoes, even in Canada; and also who ever heard of a forest fire in early spring! PARVA.

Dear Miss Tinée: Why is it that Rudolph Valentino—being such a wonderful hero—is allowed in his pictures to make so little of the woman, that alone gives our young men the privilege of pulling some real stuff off themselves? And another thing—why does he always die? He never makes a real picture, where he marries and lives happily afterward, but always plays a lot of dirty work on some other man's wife and all he does is fall on the floor real pretty and die. B. H.

BONNY BITS

Dear Miss Tinée: I have always been an admirer of Norma Talmadge, and feel that she is a real, sincere actress. I saw "Smilin' Through" the other night, and it seemed to me that she surpassed any of her former portrayals in little Moonyeen and Kathleen. Wyndham Standing was splendid and Harrison Ford was better than I have ever seen him. Taken in all, "Smilin' Through" was to me a wonderful picture. E. H.

Dear Miss Tinée: Have you ever noticed Gertrude Astor's bits? She is always cool and poised, the perfect gentlewoman at all times. Her part in "Hurricane's Gal" had a broad scope for her talents. F. C.

Dear Miss Tinée: Who do you think did the finest acting in "Woman Who Walked Alone"? I'll say Mabel Van Buren as the native woman. She was simply great. Florence Vider in "The Real Adventure" was splendid. She played the impressionable school girl, the wife, actress, and designer, all with excellent distinctions. J. W.

They do not invariably spend all their time in the opera house or over the piano. This picture represents a famous operatic and concert mezzo-soprano, Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, in summer time release from the cares of a musical season, at her home in West End, N. J. When the autumn comes she will begin a tour that will take her to the Pacific coast.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

A. R.: Address Tom Mix in care of Fox, Hollywood, Cal.; Dorothy Dalton at the Lasky studio, Hollywood; and Forrest Stanley at 207 South Ardmore avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

J. D. E.: It's pronounced like the last two syllables of matinee, J. D. E. Isn't that an easy way to remember it? We're sorry to say that we haven't the picture you want. Perhaps there'll be a similar one when next Easter rolls around. Watch for your favorites in the roto section.

GUTHRIE DECK: Guess you're trying to remember "Gas, Oil and Water," aren't you? Come again when something else bothers you. It's not a bit of trouble.

A. B. C.: If you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, we'll be happy to send you the material we have on scenario writing.

D. D.: No, Matt Moore isn't married, at least, not that we know of. He is 34. His address is 130 West Forty-fourth street, New York city.

James Cruze is directing now, at the Lasky studios, Hollywood, Cal. Gaston Glass played recently in "The Song of Life." Guess you haven't been watching carefully, because there have been several pictures of your favorite printed lately.

PEGGY: Address Doris May in care of Ince studio, Culver City, Cal. Wallace MacDonald may be reached at the Los Angeles Athletic club, Los Angeles, Cal.

G. P.: Sorry to disappoint you, but we hear that Constance Talmadge is on her way abroad.

V. A. H.: Write to Nazimova in care of United Artists, 729 Seventh avenue, New York city.

Browsing Backward

Dear Miss Tinée: I have seen a great many splendid pictures I would enjoy seeing again. "The Fighting Blood" is so old I don't remember who put it on; the players were not listed. I liked "The Deserter," afterwards done by Charles Ray; "The Ghost of Granleigh," with Bigelow Cooper, and "The Vengeance of Durand," with Julia S. Gordon, Rogers Lytton and Anita Stewart; also William S. Hart in an Indian picture with Enid Markey and Robert McKim. I think McKim was Montezuma.

I remember Mary Pickford in the "Good Little Devil." A foreign company put on a picture of a lion hunt that was the real thing. "Attacked by a Lion," was the name. Kate Price, Clara K. Young and Sidney Drew were good in "Why Girls Leave Home." Mabel Furnelle and Herbert Prior did some great work at that time; John Bunny, too. Why not bring back his Pickwick papers? Lillian Walker and Wallie Van were favorites, too.

House Peters did some good mystery stories. I can recall the plots, but I'm afraid of imposing upon time and good nature.

E. K. Lincoln is an old favorite; also Earl Williams and Edith Storey. Some of the old Gish pictures were fine. Dorothy Dalton, Frank Keenan and Louise Glaum were good. Farnum has done some wonderful work; also Kathlyn Williams. Her Cherry Malotte was wonderful in "The Spoilers."

Hobart Bosworth in the "Sea Wolf," was certainly a character, and Marc McDermott did good work. Remember Arthur Johnson with the old Lubin company?

"The Birth of a Nation" recalls many wonderful parts and acting. Mae Marsh was a marvel. Every actor and actress was ideally cast. Josephine Crowell did great work. "Intolerance" is the greatest of all pictures in my estimation. I saw it five times and would love to see it some more. You can't appreciate big pictures like those unless you see them more than once.

"The Four Horsemen" had wonderful parts and acting but poor Rodolf has fallen down miserably since; perhaps he has just had bad luck in being cast in poor productions.

Meighan in "The Miracle Man" was ideally cast, but you'd never guess he had ability by some of his later pictures. It's a pity; he has a wonderful personality.

Otis Skinner in "Kismet" was fine, but you miss his voice in the pictures after seeing him on the stage.

I'm anxious to see Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader." There is an actor after my own heart. Pauline Frederick, too, and Bryant Washburn, King Baggott, Leah Baird, Pavlowa, and Betty Blythe. L. M. L.

Dear Miss Tinée: "How about Geraldine Farrar in "Joan of Arc," Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid in "Forever," Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid," "The White Circle," Mary Pickford in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Lois Wilson in "What Every Woman Knows," Billie Burke in "Peggy," and Marguerite Clark in "Prunella"? On Putting the Ungrammatical in Subsea Dungeons

By Mme. X.

YOU wouldn't think that a little thing like that would hurt so much. It was because it was in the Atlantic Monthly, the proudest periodical we have, issued by Brahmins for Brahmins. The blow was struck in the leading contribution in the August number. This article purports to be written by a doctor's wife and is a study of delirium entitled "Beyond the Barrier." It ought to be called "Beyond the Pale" because of the concluding four words: "I was home again!"

That the Atlantic Monthly could for an instant of aberration permit such an utterly ungrammatical use of our sacred language shakes the foundations of culture. It is one more of the startling signs of the crumbling of our civilization which the sapient note on every hand. Nothing that the bolsheviki could do would be so conclusive of the passing of this era into the black darkness of a transition which will lead to heaven only knows what new culture, as to have such a gross attack on correct English in a periodical edited by Ellery Sedgwick, one of the Sedgwicks of the Stockbridge-Lenox family. Certainly the new era will insist on the insertion of the little word "at" between "was" and "home."

Shocked Into Breathlessness.

If we have anything to say in the shaping of the coming epoch we shall make it a capital crime to murder the English language. Those who say or write such phrases as "I am home," "that kind of a person," "that far," "go a place," or who willfully split an infinitive or commit any of the other infamous injuries to the finest of modern or ancient languages shall be tried by a jury of trained grammarians, the most ferocious of their kind, and sentenced for life to under sea dungeons.

You can't "be home"; you can be at home. A person or a thing can't be generalized. It is the whole class that is meant by the preliminary words "that kind of," and so the proper phrasing is "that kind of thing or person." The noxious quality of "that far" you must study up in any book on English grammar. The split infinitive, you well know, is a ruined verb, one torn asunder and made useless. "I won't go any place"—well, such a sentence shocks the sensibilities to such a degree that there is not breath enough left to explain to you the difference between an active and an inactive verb.

Suffocating, we gasp, "go to, go to!" In the esteem of present and future purists where will Mr. Ellery Sedgwick stand? We shudder to think!

Nights at Ravinia.

Ravinia open air opera is presenting this season such a spirited program of varied operas and of delightful concerts that the summer of 1922 will long be remembered by lovers of music who live within motor or electric car distance of Ravinia as having touched the high water mark of achievement. The ardor with which the performers throw themselves into their interpretations of their roles is a striking feature of the performances.

The old idea that the singing of a part is the principal thing to be considered by an artist is becoming a thing of the past, and Alice Gentle, Pareto, Peralta, Chamlee, Didur, Rothier, and the rest of this brilliant troupe are setting new standards for the enthusiastic audiences that nightly gather in that fragrant, sonorous pavilion.

Just to see the sunset colors fade in the west, the moonlight fall on the trees to the south, and the electric lights flicker on the wings of big night moths as one sits and listens to the woes of La Tosca or the drolleries of the Barber of Seville is worth going a long distance from home to enjoy. If one makes the trip in a motor an added pleasure is savored in the glamour of the headlights lighting up the thick foliage of the wayside and the hidden places in the flying woods, while the night wind blowing in the face insures a good sleep at the journey's end.

Brides of June Returning.

One by one the brides of June are returning to the bridal nests that were made ready for them during their honeymoons. Mr. and Mrs. William Burry Jr. were the first of the Lake Forest couples to put in an appearance. They have taken a cottage on Oakwood avenue in Lake Forest, not far from the residences of Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase. The Burrys have been making some changes in and doing much decoration of their new home and have not yet settled down in it. They have been staying at the house of Mr. Burry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Burry Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. Aimée Millet are also visiting Mrs. Millet's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Farwell, until they can move into their cottage. This is a delicious little house, buried deep in the woods, which are such a feature of the Farwell place, Edgewood, on the bluffs at the south end of Lake Forest. The Millet house looks as if it had grown out of the trees and shrubs that surround it, and it is as much a part of its setting as the moss on the stones and the goldenrod that waves in the breezes from the nearby lake.

The third bridal couple who made June of 1922 a month of weddings, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, spent their honeymoon in England and are now packing their trunks for home. They are due to arrive by the middle of August, and when they get here will establish themselves in the large, old fashioned house belonging to Mr. Aldis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis, on the corner of Green Bay road and Deerpath avenue in Lake Forest.

The elder Mr. Aldis sailed for France last Tuesday, to be gone only a couple of months, while his wife is working at a new play in the inspiring atmosphere of the MacDowell colony at Peterborough, N. H.

Adventures in Strange Lands.

Wandering Chicagoites are ever a concern of this pillar of polite piffle. Sometimes these errant fellow citizens go forth alone seeking adventure in strange lands, sometimes they hunt in couples, and sometimes they go in herds. There is, for instance, a large group of them this summer at Hyannisport, Mass.

Hyannisport is on the southern shore of Cape Cod and is a sunny, wind swept seaside resort which has literally risen from the sands in the last quarter of a century and is now a green, flowery village with pretty, cozy cottages, a flourishing inn, an attractive golf club, and a good sized yachting contingent.

The largest, most attractive house there belongs to the George Paysons, who were among the earliest pioneers attracted by the opportunities for sailing and swimming. They built a simple dwelling on the top of a breezy hill which commanded a wide view of sea and land and salt marshes. During the years since they first settled there they have added to their house and developed their garden until now it is one of the most attractive places on Cape Cod. The sunsets as seen across the fragrant marshes and reflected in the still pool in their hilltop garden is one of the loveliest imaginable spectacles. The nearest neighbors are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Street, also of Chicago.

Other Chicago habitues are Mr. and Mrs. William Cunningham, who have occupied a cottage there for several years. Newcomers from our burg there are Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cramer, who have abandoned Biddeford Pool, N. H., for Cape Cod. Mr. and Mrs. Watson Armour and family are leaving their charming Lake Forest place on Telegraph road for Hyannisport for the rest of the summer.

Mary Baker at Oxford.

None of our wandering friends, however, is having quite so many interesting adventures in pastures new as that ever interesting young woman, Miss Mary Baker. She and her mother have taken a charming old place eight miles out of Oxford, Sutton Manor, and there are meeting, being entertained by, and entertaining a lot of noted Britishers. Their next door neighbors are the Asquiths.

Among their intimates are such socially famous people as Lady Islington, Lady Marjoribanks [pronounced Marchbanks, as you doubtless know], and numerous other lords and ladies of high degree. Rumor does not say whether "Margot" and "Mary" have foregathered as yet. If not, it does not seem as if fate could long keep apart two such striking personalities who would find so much that was interesting in each other.

The house Mrs. Baker has taken is one of those delightful old homes set in an enchanting garden that one finds only in England. It was last added to in 1623. Wasn't that the year that the pilgrim fathers first came to New England and founded Plymouth colony? The garden is said by its present tenants to be the loveliest they ever saw. They would like to transport it entire to their Lake Forest place.

There are gay week-end parties and much social life for Miss Baker. She writes that she is happier than she has ever been. Allister is in the near horizon and the wedding is still on the carpet, though no date is set as yet. If he is satisfied, there is no reason for the rest of the world to worry.

On England's Social Wave.

Two of our Chicago beaux are reported to be on the apex of the social wave in England. Henry Channon and Deering Davis are, if rumor may be trusted, in the full tide of social recognition, and almost as much in demand as the Prince of Wales himself. "Harry" Channon has already been reported as engaged to two or three peeresses or daughters of peers, while Deering Davis is allowing no grass to grow under his feet or any entangling alliances to halt his social career. It is gratifying to have our gilded youth so appreciated. It shows the gilt was not alloyed or spurious.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who spent the spring in Constantinople aiding in the relief work among the Russian refugees [who are gathered there to the number of 30,000 in helpless misery], has returned and is at her country place on the northern shore of Lake Otsego, in New York state. Her son-in-law, George W. Patterson, who went to China eighteen months ago, immediately after the death of his wife, formerly the well known and beloved Miss Suzette Ryerson, has returned and is now visiting Mrs. Ryerson. He spent most of his time up in the remote interior of China. The revolution now going on there interfered with the special work on which he was engaged and obliged him to return to this country.

News of the Speejacks.

We were all much excited last winter over the departure in midwinter of that intrepid little ninety foot power boat, the Speejacks, which undertook to circumnavigate the globe on its own power, starting from New York and going by way of the two canals, the Panama and the Suez. In has, after many and sundry adventures, got as far as India now and its passengers are so far "fed up" with their travels that the Speejacks is making a beeline for the Red sea, not stopping for any wandering in the tropics or orient. Arrived in Europe the party will separate, some members returning here by the fastest obtainable ocean greyhound, while others will linger on the continent or in England.

It was a great deal of a hazard to undertake such a long and necessarily slow voyage; a trial of patience, endurance, and courage. That they have made the hardest part of it with no disaster is enough to justify their abandonment of the rest of the way, if they so elect. They have navigated the most difficult part of the trip. They have proved that a small boat can, if it has a tank steamer as a convoy, safely cross the Pacific ocean.

The most remarkable feat of this kind was Capt. Slocum's, when in a one masted sailboat and quite alone he made the entire circuit of the globe. His diary describing his adventures is a most entertaining narrative, even if one takes some of it with a grain of salt. Any one who can survive for weeks on end the immense solitudes of the southern Pacific as he did must have resources within himself denied to many.

Money to Burn.

A recently returned voyager is Mrs. Leverett Thompson and her daughter. They spent last winter in Italy and in the spring went to Austria and Germany.

Vienna must be an intoxicating sort of place for the American traveler.

MISS DOROTHY FOWLER.

One of the most interesting announcements of the late summer is that of the engagement of Miss Katharine Rowland Cooke to George Waller Blow, which is being made today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Cooke of 43 East Cedar street. Miss Cooke and her two sisters, Mary and Virginia, are three of the most popular members of the Junior league, of which Katharine is secretary. Mr. Blow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Preston Blow of La Salle, Ill., and is a brother of Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor of Lake Forest.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Scholle to James Calvin Reber is being announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Scholle of 1180 East 50th street. Miss Scholle is one of the prettiest young women in south side society. Mr. Reber is the son of Mrs. John G. Reber of the Chicago Beach hotel.

An interesting engagement announcement of the early summer was that of Miss Dorothy Fowler, daughter of John W. Fowler of 5340 Hyde Park boulevard, to John S. Duckworth, son of Mrs. John A. Duckworth of Scranton, Pa. The wedding will take place this fall. Miss Fowler is spending the late summer at Portage Point, Mich. Mr. Duckworth was graduated from the college of architecture at Cornell university in 1918.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

though not for the natives. Mrs. Thompson drew at the bank there the Austrian eqhivalent of $200. It was paid to her in 10,000 kronen notes; then she filled her pocketbook; then her handbag; then she got out that mysterious bag which many American women carry subterraneously for passport, letter of credit, and large sums of money; then she stuffed her coat pockets full; then she borrowed a dress suit case and packed that full; finally she and her daughter, whose resources for storing it had also been exhausted, gun-gathered the remainder up in their arms and carried it out to the waiting taxi. It is said to have amounted to a good deal over 3,800,000 kronen.

As Vienna shops are still among the most alluring in the world and offer most desirable treasures in their windows and on their counters, that $200 represented much latent power and it must seem tame to come back to a country where currency is reckoned in such trifling denominations as cents and dollars.

Flogged for Drinking Water.

In these dry days it is amusing to read in an old English memoir that a boy in one of the famous public schools was flogged for drinking water. In those days—it was about a century ago—water was such an unhealthy, salted, dangerous beverage that the young were forbidden to do more than wash lightly in it.

Doubtless the lad was of an adventurous spirit, of the same stuff as the Drakes and Sir Walter Raleigh. The prohibited seemed to him desirable, so he forsook the small beer, which was the only drink provided by the school, and earned a flogging thereby. It is such intrepidity and eagerness for adventure which has made the British empire.

Are we an intelligent people or are we still in the darkness of medieval superstition? The writer received last week a "good luck" chain letter; no, it was not even a letter or any helpful prayer. It was merely a list of names with an adjuration at the bottom that this chain was started by an American officer, that it was to go three times around the world, and that if you sent it on its way within twenty-four hours to nine other people, some great good fortune would befall you within nine days. Otherwise, whoever broke the chain would have bad luck. It ends with the mystic but unconvincing words: "Remember, if you believe it, it's so."

The saddest part of the business is that there remains in each one of us enough fear of the bogy man to make even the busiest and most enlightened of us disinclined to break that intangible, invisible, useless, nine stranded chain. It is as if we still believed in scourging ourselve, this time with a nine-nine-tails, to mortify the flesh and chasten the spirit.

Is it out of place to suggest that our army officers might be more usefully employed than in creating such an increasing burden to be carried by a struggling humanity? The longer the chain grows the heavier it will become.

Making It Unmistakable.

That Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick has a delightful sense of humor is proven by the following story she herself tells with a gentle smile. Lately, as she was returning from a stroll on the drive and nearing her house, she heard the guide on one of the "rubberneck" busses which daily carry tourists about our boulevards calling out to his passengers as he pointed to her house:

"That is the house of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, the daughter of the richest man in the world and the mother of Mathilde."

"I never knew before just where I stand," she remarked. "Now I know."

TWENTY-SIX OPERAS RAVINIA'S RECORD THUS FAR.

BY EDWARD MOORE

"Zaza," Popular Hereabouts, Is Set for Revival

WITH three weeks and two days remaining of the season, the singers of Ravinia have by now sung seven operas fewer than the thirty-three named in the springtime prospectus. This, of course, is simply a left handed or morganatic fashion of spreading the record to date; for nobody with the faintest glimmer of light on opera house problems can fail to realize that twenty-six operas, even when some are cut to accommodate the Ravinia traditions of time in and time out, are a colossal achievement for any management, and that the achievement is increasingly portentous as a record when it is considered that the Ravinia principals, choristers, musicians, and stage hands are, in Mr. Eckstein's bucolic jest, "down on the farm."

The prospect beyond the new week is foreshortened by two operas, "Don Pasquale" and "Zaza," so that five remain to be given within the fourteen nights which begin next Sunday. "Don Pasquale" is out entirely for this year, chiefly because of the length of rehearsal time necessary for a new Norina and a new Pasquale to adjust themselves each to the other's notions of the wealth of "gags," "business," ad lib. bids for laughter, and various hokum that have developed since Donizetti wrote the blithe opera-bouffe. So the merry tale of Pantaloon and Columbine mismated has been laid aside for the more austere delights of "Otello" and the piquant experiment with Mascagni's "L'Amico Fritz."

Finds a Deferred Billet.

As to "Zaza," which has found in the affections of Ravinia's clientele a billet seemingly denied to it in all other American opera houses, it is to be restored, with many embellishments and furbishings, next Saturday night. These retouchings have mainly to do with the casting, which looks in advance to be as interesting as any other cast of the season has been or can be.

"Zaza" is the only Leoncavallo opera other than "Pagliacci" in which Americans seem to have the slightest interest, although, like Nanki-Poo's, his catalogue is long, through many passions ranging, and to our humors changing he has tuned his more or less supple song. The work was an unhappy experiment of Campanini's in 1916—unhappy mainly because of the ineptitude of the lady assigned to the title rôle. Five years later, it became the most celebrated item in the 1920-21 répertoire for the paradoxical reason that it was not given, while it served to high light the lady who was to have sung in it, so that she is today the most distinguished of the unheard though hardly unmarried divas of opera.

ANNA ROSELLE.
[Mishkin Photo.]

Out of all the ardent and industrious band of singing actors at Ravinia this summer, few can point to a better record of accomplishment than the Hungarian soprano, Anna Roselle. She will appear in four rôles during the coming week, two of them leading parts, the other two rated as important in the unfolding of the performances.

MARTIN BALLMANN.
[Silver & Friedman photo.]

Martin Ballmann, a veteran orchestra and band director of Chicago, has been engaged to synchronize the music of Wagner's "Parsifal" with the forthcoming film play founded upon that work.

KATHRYN BROWNE.
[Daguerre photo.]

Among the recent engagements by the Chicago Civic Opera company is that of Kathryn Browne. She is a Chicagoan and a graduate of the University of Illinois. During the coming season she will sing mezzo-soprano rôles with the company.

Good Part for Gentle.

Ravinia, on the other hand, has had felicitous results with "Zaza," as it has had with "Fédora" and "La Navarraise," and some other items lying just over the rim of the "regular" répertoire. Florence Easton took her own kind of success out of the name part in 1920; Frances Peralta, in turn, took her kind out of it last summer. Now we are to have Alice Gentle in it.

I submit that she is one of the few songstresses who could step into the part from the feckless, bottle emptying old frump who is in the opera Zaza's stage mother, the rôle she has had for two years. The chances are excellent that she will make the step without the suspicion of a stumble. You may sit as close to the Ravinia stage as the first row, and find out that the art of impersonation is, with Alice Gentle, something more than a matter of wigs, paint, and crêpe hair.

Auguring the Future.

While on the subject of predictions, the auspices are also favorable for Anna Roselle in the part vacated by Miss Gentle. This Magyar soprano seems more and more a personage in opera as she plays more and more rôles. Among other virtues, she doesn't cheat; she put as much into the thin part of the ingénue in "Le Chemineau" the other night as into the fat parts of Musetta and Olga. And this will be her busy week, with another Musetta Tuesday, a Nedda and an Aïda Wednesday, and the "Zaza" revival Saturday. Mr. Kingston is likewise due to play in his time many parts. He will be the Canio and Radames to Miss Roselle's duplex exhibition.

Miss Gentle will have other good company in "Zaza": Mr. Danise as the sophisticated song and dance man, Mr. Ballester, Mr. Kingston in his old rôle of the cabaret-hound husband; Minnie Egener [Mme. Louis Hasselmans now], who sang for Campanini in the old days, and more of an et al. list than in any other opera of the season.

Changes of Cast.

A busy half week for Miss Dux, too, with her third Elsa in tonight's "Lohengrin," her second concert appearance tomorrow night, and her second Mimi Tuesday—this last with Harrold as Rodolfo. Her concert songs include some by Strauss and two by Richard Hageman—"Do Not Go, My Love," and his most popular one, "At the Well." The Nile scene of "Aïda" will be given as a rider to "Pagliacci" Wednesday night, so that Miss Roselle will get two rôles in a night. Tuneful "Martha" and the gay "Elixir" will be respective Thursday and Friday repetitions.

Philine Falco will also be a soloist tomorrow night, having been everything else—soubrette, grande dame, "first old woman," "principal boy" (in "Boris"), and pantomimist and pianist is "Fédora." The week's complete schedule is thus skeletonized:

Today at 3:15—"Favorites" concert.

Tonight at 8:15—"Lohengrin," with Dux, Kingston, Gentle, Ballester, Marr, D'Angelo. Conductor, Hasselmans.

Tomorrow at 8:15—Artists' concert, under Hasselmans, with Dux and Falco.

Tuesday at 8:15—"La Bohème," with Dux, Harrold, Roselle, Ballester, Rothier, D'Angelo, Malatesta. Conductor Papi.

Wednesday at 8:15—"Pagliacci," with Roselle, Kingston, Danise, Marr, Paltrinieri; and "Aïda," Nile scene, with Roselle, Falco, Kingston, Ballester, Rothier. Conductor, Papi.

Thursday at 3:15—Children's concert.

Thursday at 8:15—"Martha," with Mario, Gentle, Harrold, Didur, Malatesta. Conductor, Hasselmans.

Friday at 8:15—"The Elixir of Love," with Pareto, Harrold, Falco, Ballester, Didur. Conductor, Papi.

Saturday at 3:15—Popular concert.

Saturday at 8:15—"Zaza," with Gentle, Kingston, Roselle, Danise, Ballester, Egener, Falco, Paltrinieri, D'Angelo, Malatesta, et al. Conductor, Papi.

MORGAN KINGSTON.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

Of the Ravinia singers past and present he is the best known through being longest in summer service for the north shore opera. He will be tonight's Lohengrin, one of his best rôles; will sing both Canio and Radames on Wednesday, and will be in the "Zaza" revival for the week end.

Re-Enter the Russians.

The fact is not definitely promised, but this department is asked to give consideration to the announcement that S. Hurok has taken over the management of the Russian Grand Opera company and that it will tour the country this season. One is therefore permitted to surmise, even to hope, that this eager band of singers will pay another visit to Chicago.

He plans to give the company a thorough reorganization, build new scenery, engage new principals, and prepare for the performance of works which, while in the répertoire, were for various reasons not given on last spring's rather tempestuous share-and-share, soviet-like tour.

Ina Bouraskaya will, of course, not be among those present. Her services were earnestly and successfully sought for Ravinia, where she now is; for the Chicago Opera during its ten weeks in this city, and for the Metropolitan immediately thereafter. The additions to the personnel will, however, include Nina Gusova, a lyric soprano of Moscow and Petrograd; Zina Ivanowa, dramatic soprano; Maria Elanuva, mezzo-soprano, and Victor Vassilev, conductor from the Marinsky theater of Petrograd. There are negotiations for others.

Seven operas, all unknown in this country, will be added to the répertoire. They are Moussorgsky's "Kouvanschina," which has the reputation abroad of surpassing his "Boris Godounoff"; Glinka's "Sodko," Rubinstein's "Nero," which is reported to have large scenic values; Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla," Tschaikowski's "Mazeppa," "Comorra," a comic opera by Esposito, an Italian composer who lives in Moscow, and a burlesque potpourri of standard operas written by Valentinov.

With the Melody Makers.

The Chicago band, William Weil, conductor, has these appointments for the week: Tuesday, Orphans' and Old Folks' picnic, Lincoln park; Wednesday, community gathering, Grant park; Thursday, neighborhood gathering, Logan Square.

Samuel Richards Gaines of Columbus, O., has won the second annual competition in music composition offered by the Swift & Co. male chorus. Mr. Gaines' setting for Sir Walter Scott's "Hunting Song" was awarded the prize of $100 over a field of seventy-one entrants. The judges were Daniel Protheroe, Henry Purmort Eames, and D. A. Clippinger. Mr. Gaines is conductor of the Musical Art society of Columbus. Compositions submitted by Isworth W. Prosser of Chicago, Richard Kieserling, musical director at Newark, N. J., and Sumner Salter, director of music at Williams college, Williamstown, Mass., were awarded honorable mention. The prize winning composition will be sung by the chorus during the coming season.

The final concert at Cubs' park under the auspices of Ramah lodge, B'nai B'rith, will take place Wednesday night. Charles Marshall, dramatic tenor, will be the soloist, and "Elli Elli" is announced as a featured number. The symphony orchestra, with Eric De Lamarter as conductor, will play a program of well known and therefore popular classics.

Still another American singer has been added to the personnel of the Chicago Opera. Melvina Passmore, Californian and soprano, signed a contract to that effect last week.

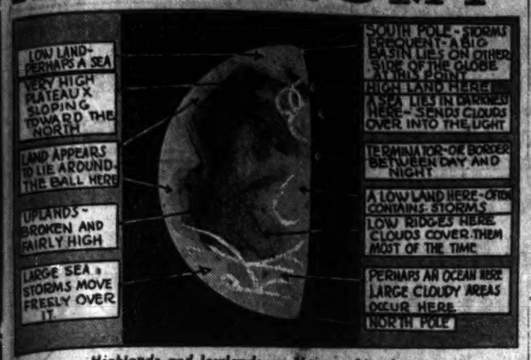
ASTRONOMY



Highlands and lowlands on Venus, this phase.

VENUS LAND REVEALED.

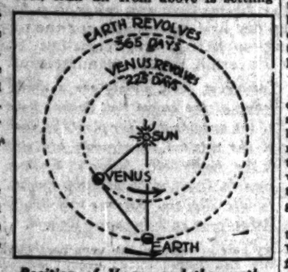
By S. F. Maxwell.

VENUS is at her best. Look for her this evening. You will see her, shining like a white arc lamp low in the gleam of sunset. She is now rapidly approaching the earth; as she draws near us she will daily appear larger. If you have a telescope, look at her by all means. Her phase is that of the moon when at the quarter.

The earth is 93,000,000 miles from the sun. Venus 67,000,000. Our sister world is nearer the sun than we. She appears to be a cloud covered world like the earth was during the Age of Coal. Astronomers watch Venus in the daytime. She reflects about 75 per cent of all the sunlight that falls on her. Her surface in consequence is so brilliant that the sight of her dazzles and blinds as looking at the sun would do. In daytime, however, the blue of our sky tempers her light somewhat and makes her an interesting planet to watch.

Clouds do not cover Venus in one unbroken shell of whiteness. There are high and low pressure areas of atmosphere there, just as here on earth. The low pressure spots are white. Here clouds are forming and are bursting upward because of their lower specific gravity. Low pressure areas make stormy skies on earth. A rainy day is dark below the clouds because it is unusually bright above them. No doubt the brilliant white spots on Venus indicate places where it is raining.

The clearer areas on the planet, and they usually comprise from a third to a half of the visible portions, seem to be regions of high atmospheric pressure. Cool, clear air from above is settling here to drive away the clouds to some extent.



Position of Venus and the earth.

Venus appears to be a mountainous world. Gray shadings may be seen at times in the midst of high pressure areas. Their positions and outlines change with the shifting clouds, but when a composite drawing is made of several observations they appear fixed to the surface of the planet. From the fact that the darkest ones are also the most often visible, it is inferred that the gray spots are the masses of continents dimly visible.

The behavior of Venus' storms also confirms this belief. They actually shun the regions where dark shadings are seen, and mainly keep to the spaces between. Storms on earth find it notoriously hard to cross divides of land. The Venusian seas seem to be hot and steaming, and from their surfaces rolling clouds of vapors arise.

Venus shows phases like the moon. She lies between us and the sun, and so a portion of her night side is almost always turned toward us.

Birds

REDSTARTS WILL SOON MIGRATE.

THE candelita, or redstart warbler, which you see flitting through the green branches like a flash of flame, flies from the United States to Central and South America. Redstarts breed over all our northern states and much of Canada. They think summer in this country is fine, but as the sun declines with a prophecy of longer nights to come, they wing their way southward to the hot lowlands about the Caribbean sea.

Route of the redstart.

Every species of bird follows its own path of migration. When the seasonal urge to fly comes, the young birds of this year who, of course, have no first hand knowledge of the place to which they are going, spread their wings and fly. They take the track their ancestors have flown in for many generations.

How do they know which route through the unmarked air is their's? What gives them courage to bravely face storms and deserts and large bodies of open water, serene in the trust that there is a haven beyond? By what mechanism of psychology is a knowledge of geography transmitted from parent bird to fledgling? If scientists could answer questions such as these, they would consider themselves wise.

A flash of red and black.

An Old Lie Nailed.

By Guy Lee.

New York's long been called a hard city—I mind it
Was classified thusly when I was a boy;
But panhandlers, little and large, always find it
A haven and refuge of comfort and joy.
A beggar can park on the corner, or off it,
Or canvass the subway and rake in the jack.
If any one wants the masuma, we cough it;
We give and we give and it never comes back.

It's a dull day, indeed, when some mendicant doesn't
Drill over from Europe our vaults to invade;
If Wall street has ever been chilly, it wasn't
The rule in such cases provided and made.
If a noble lord, burdened with debts that entangle,
And not much of anything else, hits the town
Our heiresses lean from their windows and dangle
Rich bundles of lucre his troubles to drown.

It's a cinch, it's a pipe—they all get what they go for
When they leave for New York with a gimme intent;
It's a habit of ours to welcome the loafer
With wide open chests full of money unspent.
I'm tired of hearing that old fashioned libel;
The canard's a joke, but it's lacking in mirth,
For I vow and declare with both hands on the Bible;
We're the easiest burg on the face of the earth!

MAN

He looked like this.

A FACE OF LONG AGO.

SEVERAL people have expressed surprise to find that scientists know how ancient man looked when in the flesh. Restoring features upon a skull is not an impossible task by any means, anthropologists explain. The finished work may not be altogether a faithful likeness in regard to peculiarities of the skin, such as moles, freckles, and scars, but it is true for the deeper characteristics of the face, the racial traits, the set of the muscles, and the shape of the bones.

Features can be drawn as well as modeled. A model is a picture in three dimensions. A drawing expresses the three coördinates in two. This is convenient, inasmuch as photographs of the famous skulls of the world are common, while replicas of them are rare and are usually not to be found outside museums.

Here are the restored features of a Cromagnon man of Aurignacian times, who lived from 25,000 to 30,000 years ago. He was a tall man, to judge from his body bones, standing in life well over six feet high. His skeleton was discovered in the Grotto of Grimaldi on the shore of the Mediterranean sea, near Nice. He was a white man, and in all probability a blond.

A photograph of the skull was selected to show a profile view. Profiles are easiest to draw, as well as being the most accurate view of the human face. There was, therefore, less chance of error in restoring from a profile photograph. A careful tracing was made from the skull, replacing such broken parts as appeared, to depict the bones in a condition of life. The outline of flesh as it normally fits over the skull was then added.

The chief muscles of the face are those which move the lower jaw, the lips, the eyelids, and the neck. Each of these has a definite place to fasten on the bones. The muscles were drawn in one by one and the whole smoothed down as if to receive the skin.

Drawing an epidermis upon a restoration calls for an accurate knowledge of similar skins in life. If living Cromagnons are any criterion this man had a heavy skin, a well developed lower lip, and a mouth that would turn down at the corners, with its outer curves strongly accentuated. The jaw of the skull was already undershot; so the inference is that the man must have had a bulldog jaw when alive.

The emplacements for the nose are large in the skull. The nasal bone juts sharply out from beneath the brows, and the spine at the septum of the nostrils juts also. Therefore, a large nose is called for in the restoration. Living men of this racial type have such noses, tipped by long pointed bulbs. Such a nose appears sharp and prominent upon a concave face, and is indeed a characteristic of this type of Cromagnon.

The man had wavy hair. In what style he wore it we have only the most meager knowledge. Full beards and long hair are depicted on many Cromagnon sketches but, again, smooth faces are shown. For artistic reasons, therefore, the face is drawn shaven, but with long hair. Cromagnons of Aurignacian times were savages in about the state of culture of the Iroquois Indians when the white men settled America. A necklace of bears' claws might not therefore be amiss.

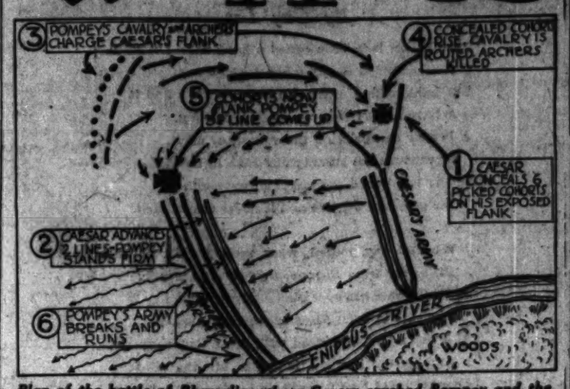
Bit by bit, following this fashion of reasoning, anthropologists build faces on men long since dead and render lifelike reproductions of those who laid the foundations of civilization.

ANSWERS.

G. M. N.: Dr. Katherine Blackford has written several works on classifying people and on analyzing character at sight.

D. B. L.: Madison Grant's book, "Passing of the Great Race," is now regarded as an authority on subjects of anthropology.

WAR



Plan of the battle of Pharsalia, where Caesar crushed Pompey and the aristocrats.

THE FLANK MOVEMENT.

THE flank attack is one of the deadliest moves known to warfare. An army is, by its nature, a linear thing. Not only is it strung out man by man, its mind and its power of action are also most hopelessly one track.

An army in action usually consists of men breast to breast, all facing one way. Before it is its zone of effectiveness, its raiding limits, its charging radius, and the ground which it can cover with projectiles. Behind it lie its communications, and the wherewithal of the meal that can never be many hours distant.

While an army is engaged it turns only with great difficulty. It has only a definite quantity of energy to expend; if that goes into maneuvering it cannot go into fighting. An enemy who appears on an army's flank, therefore, finds a foe particularly assailable. The latter's effective zone may easily cover a portion of the army and inflict severe damage before the necessary readjustment can be made. A flanked army knows this. It is therefore usually true that a panic results once an army is turned.

The history of battles is full of such instances. Caesar's Commentaries frequently note: "Our cavalry appears on their wing, they turn their backs, a great slaughter ensues."

ANSWERS.

S. L. T.: The blow pipe feeds oxygen from your lungs through the hot gases in the hollow exterior of the candle flame. The blast pierces the flame and blows out a long blue intensely hot tip.

Botany

Burdock hooks.

SPREADING THE BURR.

SEE these recurved hooks. Their one purpose in life is to catch on things. The plant that bears them is the burdock. A burdock flower resembles a small thistle. The burr is the seed container. When it is ripe the hooks catch on passersby; the burr is pulled off, and so the seeds are spread. The next time you pick a burr from your clothes remember you are planting a new burr plant for next year.

Insects

NOBODY LOVES A SUCKER.

THIS creature is a cone nose. He belongs to the order hemiptera, or true bugs. He has a beak which he sticks into plants to suck sap. The big muscles in his forelegs aid him to pierce bark. One of his near relatives, the kissing bug, sinks his beak into people. This habit of the hemiptera, of sucking on living tissues, has earned the order many earnest enemies.

In All Our Shoe Selling Experience No White Low Shoe Event Ever "Held" Women as Has This 11th Floor Sale

Extra Display Space Makes Selection Easy

Arranged by Size—for Walking

—Eleventh Floor—Dearborn Street—

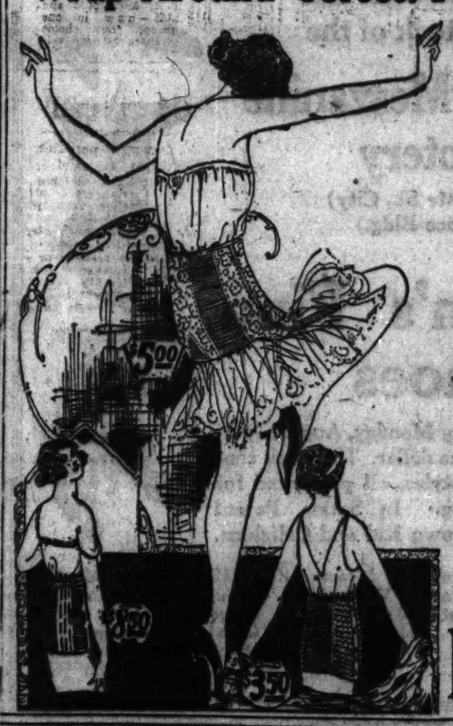
The past week we've witnessed one of those phenomena that make retailing so interesting from the standpoint of the student—a day-by-day increase in our Eleventh Floor shoe business that better than any other way backs up our first enthusiasm for the offering—a 100,000 pair close-out from a Haverhill, Mass., manufacturer.

Tomorrow, then, should see a duplication of the crowd that flocked here on the opening day, for plenty of each of the original assortments are still to be had—Sally Sandals, Flapper Sandals, One and Three-Strap Pumps, Toddle Slippers, Oxfords and Sports Oxfords—a style for every woman.

Every pair is made of the very best quality white Sea Island duck; every pair with flexible leather soles. Any kind of heels you desire—flapper heels, walking heels, Cuban heels, baby Louis heels and full Louis heels. (A few misses' and children's one and two-strap slippers and oxfords included, sizes 8½ to 2). The entire stupendous collection grouped at one matchless low price, values to $3.00, at 1.29.

The Success of Two Continents—Warner's 'Wrap-Around' Corset: You Wrap It and Snap It

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—



Overnight an international "hit"—that is the story of the new Warner "Wrap-Around," different from any corset you've ever seen—with elastic and cloth so fabricated that you can play or work in the "Wrap-Around," feel perfectly supported, yet never be aware of its presence.

Such a corset! Made of fine, firm brocades and coutils and narrow sections of new firm elastic that extend from the top to the bottom of the corset and that stretch only enough to let you "wrap it and snap it."

Your admiration will kindle the moment you try on the "Wrap-Around," for it gives to the figure the soft blandishment of youth—enhances the figure's natural grace, controls it superbly and all without in any way interfering with the manifold activities of sports, business, society, or duties at home. You may have the "Wrap-Around" in a host of models for every type from the most youthful to the most mature; sizes up to 36.

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

England in 1698. That description is shot through and through with light on Russian polity, geography, climate, trade, ecclesiasticism, domestic habits, court etiquette, and the lofty aspirations as well as the barbarous ways of the imperial visitor. Twenty lines plucked from the context must here suffice to give the savor of this grand and vivid piece of writing:

Such was the prince whom the populace of London now crowded to behold. His stately form, his intellectual forehead, his piercing black eyes, his Tartar nose and mouth, his gracious smile, his frown black with all the stormy rage and hate of a barbarian tyrant, and above all a strange nervous convulsion, which sometimes transformed his countenance, during a few moments, into an object on which it was impossible to look without terror, the immense quantities of meat which he devoured, the pints of brandy which he swallowed, and which, it was said, he had carefully distilled with his own hands, the fool who jabbered at his feet, the monkey which grinned at the back of his chair, were during some weeks popular topics of conversation. He meanwhile shunned the public gaze with a haughty shyness which inflamed curiosity. He went to a play; but as soon as he perceived that pit, boxes, and gallery were staring, not at the stage, but at him, he retired to a back bench where he was screened from observation by his attendants. He was desirous to see a sitting of the House of Lords; but, as he was determined not to be seen, he was forced to climb up to the leads and to peep through a small window. He heard with great interest the royal assent given to a bill for raising fifteen hundred thousand pounds by land tax, and learned with amazement that this sum, though larger by one-half than the whole revenue which he could wring from the population of the immense empire of which he was absolute master, was but a small part of what the Commons of England voluntarily granted every year to their constitutional King.

In the first of these two little papers on Macaulay's "England" it was said that enduring benefits—benefits which are today the living inheritance of all English speaking men—of the revolution which he describes were the establishment of the national bank idea and the inauguration of the system of funding debts, of the cabinet system, of the freedom of the press, and of genuine constitutionalism. Those great innovations made the Revolution of 1688 glorious and fruitful, but mention of them is hardly the way to lure us average readers to the average book about them. It is not so with Macaulay's book because his is not an average book. His story of the development of the system of funding debts (about half way through Chapter XIX.) is unfolded with the color and animation of a romance, and it closes with pungent remarks on the expediency of common honesty which would make salutary reading for our former ardent but now somewhat calculating allies; his story of the working out by Charles Montague of William Patterson's national bank idea is graced with an epitome of the allegory by Joseph Addison on Public Credit and is carried forward with such skill and gusto that high finance becomes, in Johnson's phrase, "as entertaining as a Persian tale." It is so with his story of the foundation of the freedom of the press (midway of Chapter XXI.), and it is so with his story of the development of the cabinet system.

Into consideration of the famous Chapter III., giving a survey of the material and cultural state of England at the time of the accession of James the Second, it is perilous for a writing man to enter, so humble and so enthusiastic does he become. It is a book in itself—has, in truth, lately been published as a separate book, making, with the new notes, 250 pages, by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons. It is a marvel of research which many a clever man could have effected coupled with an eloquence to which only Macaulay could rise. It cannot be called incomparable, however, for Gibbon's equally celebrated Chapters I. and II. are more spacious and more recondite. Those chapters were, manifestly, Macaulay's model. If he did not equal the model it was perhaps only because his canvas was far more limited. Even so, he produced a marvel. It is based on 200 sources; the seven pages on the navy alone sent him to Pepys' diary, correspondence and official reports and seven other works, some of them recondite. He deals within the space of a few score lines with sheep and oxen, crops, mines, printing presses, turnips, salted meat and when eaten and why. On a single page I count the names of twelve wild beasts and birds then flourishing in England, but now for the most part extinct. The authorities he read for that single page number eight. But despite the copiousness of fact and allusion the narrative never lags. Mr. Strachey's "Queen Victoria," perhaps the swiftest moving piece of historical writing of our time, does not move more swiftly. More detail was never crowded into a story than Macaulay crowds into his, but he saves his reader from tedium by his bewitching choice of detail. Writing of English culture in the ninth decade of the seventeenth century, he loves a touch like this:

An esquire passed among his neighbors for a great scholar, if "Hudibras" and Baker's "Chronicle," Tarlton's "Jests" and the "Seven Champions of Christendom," lay in his hall window among the fishing rods and fowling pieces.

Nor does he forget Queen Mary's spelling—"This book was given the King and I, at our crownation, Marie R.," though he buries that human and pathetic bit in a note.

Together with these masses of detail his pages are laden with sapient and pungent observations for the guidance of mankind. He did not think history as annals alone was worth writing, but as morals he thought it the most essential study of a free people. A double handful of his typical observations, combining great statelieness with great practical sense, has been placed at the head of this article.

Much has been written of Macaulay's errors and of his prejudice, and his history has been called a Whig document. His errors are now conceded to be far fewer than they were asserted to be in the inevitable period of reaction which followed the enormous early popularity of his book. Nor are they errors likely to make a man a bad citizen, a bigot, a reactionary, or an oppressor of his kind. As to his prejudice, it is certain that prejudice in the field of historical writing was not entombed when Baron Macaulay of Rothley was borne to his grave in Westminster abbey. If he was prejudiced he was prejudiced in favor of and not against the cause of human liberty, and his hero was the warrior and statesman who found England despotic and left it constitutional, who found it misgoverned by cabals and left it governed by parliament and cabinet, who found loans to the state hardly more than confiscations by the state and left them stable and copious sources of public revenue, and who expelled a dynasty of princes to whom no cause was so good that they would not betray and injure it and no cause so bad that they would not serve it with a pertinacity that was worthy of martyrs and a gallantry that has given them a deathless fame in the annals of heroism and of romance.

Lord Macaulay's story of William the Third's life ended with his own. His last act was to write a letter to a poor curate inclosing a cheque for £25. The last lines he wrote in his history were these:

It was now between seven and eight in the morning. He closed his eyes, and gasped for breath. The bishops knelt down and read the commendatory prayer. When it ended William was no more.

When his remains were laid out it was found that he wore next to his skin a small piece of black silk ribbon. The lords in waiting ordered it to be taken off. It contained a gold ring and a lock of the hair of Mary.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

of brilliant humor, but, for that matter, are there 2,000—even without the two—good stories in the world?

For Those Who Know Good Writing.

"The Garden Party" is a volume of short stories by Katherine Mansfield, whose "Bliss" came very near to winning the Femina Vie Heureuse prize for the most promising book by a young English author last year. The reason it didn't—so rumor has it—was because it was a collection of short stories and the prize was supposedly destined for a novel. These stories are only for those who know good writing and sincerity. They have nothing of the quality of the popular American short story—a plot, a tense moment, a denouement. They are, in the most honest sense of the word, realistic. They are records of commonplace events seen through the eyes of the people to whom they happen—and we all know that nothing is commonplace that happens to our own selves.

It is only when the baby next door bumps its head that its shrieks are just more squalling from a pair of brazen lungs. If our own little Willie summons us with his wails, we know perfectly well that the world will stop until he is pacified.

That quality of downright realism is what makes Katherine Mansfield's stories so remarkable—that, and the fact that she is a real artist with words. For the few moments that you are reading it, you are actually the person that the simple story is about. Nothing ever happens—but whatever does happen to most of us? Aren't our adventures of thought much more thrilling than our actual adventures? It takes a real artist to realize that. Katherine Mansfield is a real artist.

How Crazy Are You?

"Signs of Sanity" is the title which Stewart Paton has chosen for his book on such timely subjects as suppressed impulses, sex, nervousness, hysteria, mental deficiency, eugenics, and prohibition. In my simple youth, when we were studying psychology, we looked for signs of insanity. Such is the state of the world today that signs of sanity are more remarkable.

Poetizing the Men from Cook.

"A Cookshire Lad" is a group of poems by Anne Higginson Spicer which is dedicated "To the American Soldiers of the World War, to those who went from Cook County. . ." It is written in the same meter (usually) as "A Shropshire Lad," and it celebrates the feelings of one of the boys from home in the great war, as well as the feelings of one of the girls at home in the great war.

Some of the poems appeared in "A Line o' Type or Two" while Mr. Taylor was its conductor.

This, Too, Is No Mean Executive Job.

"Homemaking Simplified," by Bertha Streeter, is, according to its publishers, "a book for the bride and the experienced housekeeper." Mrs. Streeter's major premise is that being a homemaker is as much of a job as being a stenographer or an editor and that it should be performed with as much efficiency, common sense, labor saving, and pleasure as what is more often called a "position." She says that managing a home requires as much skill as managing an office or a business; that businesslike methods will bring as great a saving of time, money, and energy as they do in a business downtown.

And she tells, in language simple enough for the veriest untutored bride to understand, what those businesslike methods are. There are no pictures or diagrams, just plain talk, hard common sense, about how to make a home, about everything from unusual ways to use the vacuum cleaner—letting the children catch flies with it—to pleasant (sic!) methods of cleaning house.

The Musing Mr. Tomlinson.

"Waiting for Daylight" is a series of papers which H. M. Tomlinson wrote between July, 1915, and April, 1921. Many of them were written while Mr. Tomlinson was a war correspondent, and therefore have to do with the war, although they are never photographic—except, perhaps, in the case of his description of an air raid in London. They are, rather, meditative, with actual things as their stimuli.

Mr. Tomlinson writes with a real ease and a charm, although he is not, in my humble judgment, the great essayist that some of his admirers consider him. Pleasant ease and charm is so rare in these days of jazz writing—it's really that, you know, emotional, erotic, jerky, primitive. There are more and more writers who are breaking up their swinging rhythms of words into syncopations. There is more and more impressionistic writing being done. The good old English periods are rarely found nowadays. Mr. Tomlinson indulges in them. His style ripples pleasantly, it flows. Because he writes with the leisure of the great essayists, he is called a great essayist himself. He is, undoubtedly, a most pleasant person to read.

But he is a trifle too scattered in his thoughts for my taste. He lets his thoughts lure him where they will, and the fact that he starts to talk about books is no assurance that he will not end talking about science. There are those who like that haphazard method of writing essays, however. Certainly "Waiting for Daylight" is so far above the average of the so-called "essays" that some of our second rate writers put out that, compared with them, it is a masterpiece.

Prince Is Guide to Warship Guests

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—People who go aboard H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth to look round sometimes have the honor of being attended by a prince of the blood royal—and they don't know it.

As they step off the gangway a slim, pleasant mannered youth with white tabs on his collar will approach and ask them whom they wish to see. "Very good; I will see about it," he rejoins when they say they desire to be shown over the vessel. Calling a "side boy" he instructs him to "take these visitors round the ship," then, saluting them gallantly, goes back to his job. The affable young gentleman is Prince George, who is serving as a midshipman aboard the Atlantic fleet's senior flagship. It is not the way of the navy to consider parentages, and between Prince George and the remainder of the Queen Elizabeth middies not the slightest difference is made. Like them he sleeps in a hammock 'tween decks, a sea chest holds all his personal belongings, and he messes in the gun room under the autocracy of the senior sub.

From 6:30 every morning Prince George is kept busy until it is time to "turn in" at night. He has to attend "school" with the other middies, take his turn at seamanship and other "instructions," and perform all routine duties.

Among these is that of "midshipman of the watch" during which he acts as a kind of messenger for the officer over him.

The prince is also "spotty" of a picket boat, which means that he has command of a steam pinnace. Although this may not appear a very onerous position it is none the less one that entails much "roughing it." Picket boats for instance have to pick up spent torpedoes while ships are at exercise, and within the last few weeks Prince George has had many a soaking.

Good natured and absolutely devoid of "side," Prince George is popular with his messmates, who call him either "P. G." or George, leaving it to the navy list to give him his full title.

Brussels Makes Americans Feel 'Right at Home'

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BRUSSELS, Aug. 12.—With the onrush of the Americans, Belgian hotel managers carefully adapt their menus to the needs of the people from the United States who have never left home before. This is most apparent at breakfast, when little glass dishes of raspberries, strawberries, and other fruit can be had. As some of the people say, "It makes them quite homesick just to see them," and there is no sort of doubt that both British and Americans feel more at home in Belgium than in any other country in Europe. This is because most of the people about a hotel speak English and everything imaginable is done to make the place like home.

Nothing is "forbidden" in a Belgian hotel, nor in Belgium itself for that matter. If visitors like to commit suicide on the Belgian railways, there is no notice prohibiting it. The administration takes it for granted they are dealing with grownups, and doesn't trouble to warn them not to travel on the footboards or the roofs of the train. Everything else is conducted on the same liberal lines.

Young Russ Exiles Get Y.M.C.A. Summer Camp

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—The first American summer camp in unoccupied Germany has pitched its tents on the shore of the Baltic near Nest. The American Y. M. C. A. opened the camp for Russian refugees from 12 to 16 years of age, under the supervision of Arthur Aborn Simmons and Boris Pashkevsky. The boys are mostly young Russians of Berlin, the Russian colony of refugees being so big the German government has turned over two schools to the Russian authorities.

The spirit of these youngsters has won praise for the Y. M. C. A. workers who devoted their time and efforts to the Russian refugees in Germany and also for those in America who enabled the Y. M. C. A. to keep up its work of reconstruction.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

UNTROUBLED REST.

We city folks are often told
How sleep is something even gold
Or precious gems can never buy.
And if a real night's rest we'd try
And pound a soporific ear,
Then we should rise and go from here
And spend a night of blissful rest
On Mother Nature's ample breast.

Out on the farm, they all exclaim,
A slumber will caress your frame,
A slumber langorous and deep,
A long, untroubled, glorious sleep;
No noises will assault your ear,
The night is calm and soft and clear,
And nothing will your spirits rouse
Among the cabbages and cows.

And, trusting them, you leave behind
The raucous city's noisy grind
And seek the simple country air,
Where everything is calm and fair,
On Mother Nature's ample breast
In sweet, untroubled, blissful rest,
Where nights are dark and still and deep
And nothing can disturb your sleep . . .

EXCEPT

Seventeen year locusts
And tree frogs
And bull frogs
And katydids
And crickets
And owls
And roosters
And mosquitoes.

For Women Who Are Now Employed We Offer a Remarkable Opportunity!

BECAUSE of tremendous demand from women who work during the day but whose ambition inspires them to fit themselves for more profitable employment, we will hereafter conduct

EVENING CLASSES—Beauty culture presents to all women the one big opportunity. It offers remuneration limited only by your own ambition, your own will to succeed. It offers an enjoyable career—one which may be depended upon always in good times or bad.

NOW IS THE TIME to cast drudgery aside—to prepare for independence. The money making possibilities of Beauty Culture are remarkable. For the salaried operator or for the woman who can conduct her own business there is no profession to compare with it.

Manicuring

A most valuable course and a profession in itself. Course covers care of hands as well as nails and teaches every detail of manicuring by the most delicate method.

Facial Massage

Skin Bleaching, Electrolysis, Facial Massage includes treatment for complexion, sagging muscles, puffiness around eyes, blackheads, wrinkles, etc. Skin Bleaching—Instantaneous treatment. Electrolysis—Course teaches permanent, painless removal of superfluous hair, warts and moles.

Hair Cutting

Includes Bobbing for both women and children, Band Cutting, Singeing, Shingling for Boys, Cutting of Fringe.

Scientific Body Massage

A highly profitable branch of Beauty Culture.

Includes Swedish movements. The value of these treatments is understood by ladies of social prominence; also by actresses, as they recognize fully the necessity of suppleness of form and grace of movement.

This course brings the operator in touch with physicians who recommend it to their patients.

School of Manufacturing

We teach the manufacture of all kinds of hair goods—switches, braids, puffs, curls, etc. This is a very practical course and is profitable used in itself or in connection with general beauty culture.

Hair Dressing

Marcel Waving, Hair Dressing course includes Shampooing, Bleaching, Dyeing, Scalp Massage, Cutting, etc. Also fancy hairdressing for costume parties or the stage.

Scalp Treatment

A course that in itself is profitable for specialization. Teaches Hot Oil Treatment, Hot Oil Shampoo, how to improve circulation, how to relieve dandruff and every other contributing cause to falling or premature graying hair.

Baths

Turkish and Electric Light—two highly scientific and remunerative courses.

Turkish Bath course includes body massage, the salt glow, correct bathing and Hydropathy.

THE REV. EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES, PH. D.

Dr. Ames, for the last twenty-two years pastor of the University Disciples' church, University avenue and 57th street, and associate professor of philosophy in the University of Chicago, will soon see the realization of long cherished plans in the erection of a new church edifice costing $200,000 on the site of the present building.

The joint architects of the new structure are Howard Shaw and Henry K. Holtsman. The building will be of white Joliet rubblestone. It will provide for an auditorium finished on the interior in stone with stained oak ceiling, and a Sunday school room and library. The plans are drawn so that a building for recitation and dormitories for the accommodation of students of the divinity school of the Disciples of Christ of the University of Chicago can be erected on a quadrangle in connection with the church.

The present church building, which for years was known as the Hyde Park Disciples' church, will be moved to another part of the church lot and occupied during the erection of the new building. It will then be demolished.

Dr. Ames is a graduate of Drake university, Des Moines, Ia.; a graduate in the divinity from Yale university, and a doctor in philosophy from the University of Chicago. He is the author of several volumes, one of the best known being "The Psychology of Religious Experience."

David McConaughy, director of stewardship for the Presbyterian New Era movement, yesterday announced from his office in the Presbyterian building, 156 5th avenue, New York, a prize offer for original essays to be written by any Presbyterian Sunday school student under 18 years of age on the subject, "Christian Stewardship; Its Principles, Methods, Effects." Each Presbytery, leaders qualify for synodical competition and are admitted to honor roll, to be published in the Presbyterian Magazine. Each Sunday school, prizes as locally provided for. The contest closes Jan. 1, 1923, and the final awards will be announced at Presbyterian general assembly in Indianapolis on May 18, 1923. Details may be obtained from Mr. McConaughy.

Palmer Christian, a former resident of Chicago, is returning as associate organist of choir master of the Fourth Presbyterian church. During his absence he was for two years the municipal organist of Denver, and subsequently concerned with concert work at Asheville, N. C.

MARVELOUS NEW BEAUTY OF FACE AND FIGURE
In Two Weeks Time—Guaranteed
How One Woman Regained The Radiant Health and Youthful Charm She Thought Gone Forever
A Precious Secret Every Woman Should Know.

Clear Skin, Firm Flesh, Bright Eyes and a Body Tingling with Vitality are what win in love, business or social life. Just watch the Difference in How You Look and Feel After a Short Course of MASTIN'S VITAMON Tablets with your meals.

"Only a woman who has tried as I have the many different kinds of so-called 'instant beauty treatments' of clay, creams, skin-peeling, etc., without deriving scarcely any benefit can fully appreciate what joy I felt when first I realized that I had actually regained the fascinating charm of my girlish face and figure.

"When I became thin, nervous, with flat chest, mottled, blotchy skin and a haggard-looking face I was fully convinced that my youth and beauty had gone forever. So when a friend told me of the amazing and almost miraculous results that women were daily obtaining simply from the use of MASTIN'S VITAMON I decided to give them a trial.

"From day to day my mirror and the scales told the story of returning health, vitality, shapeliness and youthful beauty. What pastes and clays had failed to do for my skin and complexion MASTIN'S VITAMON had accomplished through aiding Nature to restore the vigor of internal health.

"My own experience with MASTIN'S has been so amazing and truly remarkable that I wish every woman in the land to possess this precious secret which is bound to mean so much to her happiness.

If you want a graceful, shapely figure, beautiful complexion and the "pep" and glow of perfect health such as so many other women have gained, go to any drug store today and get a package of MASTIN'S VITAMON. Simply take two tablets with each meal for a short time and watch results.

If after using MASTIN'S VITAMON you are not entirely satisfied and are not convinced that it has been worth to you far more than you paid for it your druggist will gladly refund your money and the trial will cost you nothing. You can get MASTIN'S at all good druggists.

Here Is Comfort!

When I planned and built this home, when I designed the furniture and had it made, there was this one thought in my mind—everything must be comfortable.

As a result, I think I can say that everything is comfortable. My own apartment here at the Rogers Park is exactly like all the others—same furniture, same furnishings, same everything. Nothing more, nothing different, is needed for real comfort and satisfaction.

Come, see the Rogers Park, if you seek a real home for the winter. Better first come to dinner and enjoy a good meal—1 to 8 p. m., Sundays; 6 to 8 p. m., weekdays.

The SUBCONSCIOUS COURTSHIP

By Berta Ruck

INSTALLMENT I.

THE GIRL WHO STARED.

"Love begins with the first look," decreed a philosopher, "and ends with the first kiss."

This theory, half fanciful, half bitter, is now as out of date as the corsets and snuff of its epoch. Today people hold that Love's beginning is not that first glance of Courtship at all, not even the first tender thought. Long before these, a host of deep-down impulses, of unacknowledged, wayward wishes, of traits suppressed, of "temperamentalities" not recognized, must have combined subconsciously to prepare his or her conscious personality for what they call "That time when we first knew we cared" . . .

Take this affair of Clover and Harry Carmichael. Take the day they saw each other for the first time alone. . . . in such unpromising circumstances.

They had seen each other, though not alone, just once.

On his way back to his rooms and again when he woke up next morning, Harry Carmichael's mind (quite unused to wondering about women) had wondered extraordinarily about this one particular girl. Please realize that it was no question of being "attracted"; no tinge of that feeling touched him. He just wondered, repeatedly, "Why did she look at me like that?"

"Is that Maj. Carmichael?" a gentle, extremely feminine and self possessed voice had asked.

At first he had thought that he had met the girl before and had forgotten about her so that he had to be reintroduced. Her first glance at him in the Holts' drawing room had conveyed that impression. But, then, why hadn't she said so, instead of suddenly lifting to his face that searching, puzzling look? She had looked at him, even at the moment of their hostess' murmuring his name ("This is Maj. Carmichael"), as if she, the girl, were saying to herself: "Ah, at last! This is more like it. Much more the sort of man. He might do."

Carmichael had not caught her name. (He'd a way of not "catching" women's names.) He had not noticed her face (faces of women he never did notice), or what she had on, except that it was dark, probably black, against white bare arms. But even he could not help noticing that she had looked at him again, still in that odd, stock-taking way, several times during dinner. He hadn't taken her in; Jim Holt, their host, had taken her in. Carmichael had taken one of Jim's sisters. Opposite to him had sat this other girl and her eyes.

A glimpse through the banisters—that was the last he had seen of her.

Afterwards, in the drawing room, there had been music, and this girl had played accompaniments. Once during a song she had looked across the piano as she had looked across the chrysanthemums of the dinner table, searchingly, at Carmichael. The sort of look one feels even when one is standing with one's back to it. (As he was.) But they hadn't spoken a word together; he had been talking to Mrs. Holt.

Then, when everybody was going away, this gazing girl had done something odder still. Carmichael thought she'd gone. He had seen her in the hall, with a big fur wrap-thing on. Alone, he was coming downstairs in search of Jim, who had offered him a good-night peg. Suddenly, on a landing, he had found this girl at his elbow; and again she'd turned that look upon him. He had been sure she was going to speak to him. She had, actually, opened her lips.

Then Jim Holt (one of the world's worst butters-in, by the way) had loomed into view. The girl had darted past them both upstairs again. Her skirts and ankles, flitting swiftly upwards, a glimpse through the banisters; that was the last he had seen of her.

But that had not been the last he'd heard of her.

This morning, the morning after the dinner, his telephone had rung just as he was half-way through shaving.

With a muttered grunt he'd put down his brush, and in his pajamas had raced down the wooden steps from his bachelor room into the Chelsea garage below, where the telephone stood on a bracket among other people's motorcycles and caches of oily rags, petrol tins, lockup boxes of tools. He had expected to be rung up this morning, though scarcely as early as this, by a man he knew in the Air Ministry. He took up the receiver.

Elphinstone? Her own name. Probably she was the young daughter to one of the firm.

"Is that Maj. Carmichael?" a gentle, extremely feminine and self possessed voice had asked.

"Yes," he had replied. He hoped that the invention which allows the person speaking through the telephone to see the person at the other end would never actually come into being. What the girl now ringing him up would have beheld would have been the chin and jaws of a snow-man talking into a receiver smothered in shaving lather. "This is Carmichael; who is that, please?"

Expecting to hear a man's name given by a typist, he was taken aback by these words:

"Clover Elphinstone. You met me last night at the Holts', I was on the stairs when you left."

He sank his own little craft and dived into the water after her.

"O—O, yes."

"Can you see me this morning at twelve o'clock?"

"Er—will you hold on a minute, Miss Elphinstone? I'll look at my book. . . . Er—yes. I can. Where?"

"Take it down, please." Followed an address in the city. "Near the bank. Read it out, please."

He did so.

"That is quite right," he was told. "At twelve. Good-by."

Not another word. Receiver hung up.

Infernally odd! He had been—yes, surprised into making the appointment.

Start this new daily serial now

A second after Clover had given Maj. Carmichael that first searching, all-appraising glance, she made up her mind that she would ask him to marry her.

The Story

Clover Elphinstone, the heroine of Berta Ruck's new daily serial, is a fine type of the modern young woman—business-like, beautiful, capable, unconventional, and yet wholly feminine. The Subconscious Courtship is a delightful love story, crowded with interesting and unusual situations. For instance, when Clover asks Maj. Carmichael to marry her the reader is almost as greatly surprised as was the major. It won't do, however, to tell more of the story, except to say that there is a thrill in every installment.

The Characters

When Harry Carmichael first went to Clover Elphinstone's office, he saw her slim, harmonious figure, a sort of visual echo of the arms and shoulders, bared and exquisite, he had almost noticed the night before. The little of her hair that showed was dark, but her coloring was fair as that of her namesake, a white clover blossom with its tinge of pink, and her face was a pure oval.

Maj. Carmichael was a lean young man with a purpose, and that purpose worlds away from love. He considered himself a "forbidding looking beggar." But he and his shabby clothes were admirably built. His appearance was typically that of a soldier and a sportsman.

The Author

The author is one of the most popular writers in England. Every flapper in the United Kingdom reads her stories and most of them revise their ideals according to her latest heroes. She is the wife of Oliver Onions, also an author. Recently they changed their name, officially, because their sons had such a time at school with it. Mr. Onions became Mr. George Oliver.

Berta Ruck has written fourteen novels and a travel book on her American impressions. She is very tall, very matter of fact, and yet very whimsical. She wears lovely clothes, which she buys in Paris. Much of her writing is done in Wales.

REAL ESTATE
SALESMEN.
There is seldom a chance to get on the sales force of this company. We have not advertised for salesmen for years. We have just sold and developed a 1,100 acre tract, and have 1,700 people actually living on our property in the past year. We can use some more high class men at once, as we are about to place on the market one of the most attractive properties anywhere near the city—a great new $2,000,000 development in the very heart of the most beautiful part of the suburbs—depot right in the center of the property, one of the greatest steam roads in the world. Rapid transportation to the city. Big, beautiful trees, home tracts at bargain prices with improvements in and paid for on lots from 60 to 100x150 ft. deep. We have now started 6 homes on this property that will sell for $15,000 to $18,000. We have a concrete building plan. $50,000 advertising campaign will begin within the next 10 days. Real live leads furnished. We want some high class men that we can add permanently to our organization. We will make places for the right men.

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—NORTH.

FOR SALE—NEAR MAIN-ST. STATIONS. We have something worth looking at in an 8 room residence for $8,500, half cash, or $500 less for all cash. Nothing in Evanston equals this for the price.

There are all sorts of apartment buildings offered for sale these days at various prices—more or less high—but we have one peach of a building without the usual top heavy mortgage, so we can make our own terms to the right sort of purchaser and make interest rate on all deferred payments 6 per cent when the price is $53,000. There are 3 apartments with 7 rooms and 2 baths, one available Oct. 1st. Located within 2 blocks of the lake and near stations. It was put up about 4 years ago—and that's that.

$15,000 will purchase a new 7 room residence on lot 50x180; fifty arranged and attractive neighborhood; will accept $2,500 cash and $100 per month for the balance.

Near the University and Davis-st. We offer exclusively for the first time a 9 room brick, hot water residence, with a bully deep lot for $30,000. Speed up if this is in your class, for it won't stick long on our books at that price.

This has never been a boom town, nor is the office noted for that kind of language, but I have been in the real estate profession right here in Evanston during the past 20 years—10 minutes—handling Evanston and North Shore property—if that sort of experience appeals to you. Come on out. Let's get acquainted.

KENILWORTH HOME
One of Finest in Village.
Few homes of this character and distinction are ever offered for sale in Kenilworth, and this well designed and built by, and home the WORLD known architect, father of the Chicago plan, and is a high example of his artistry. Of solid colonial design, age will have no effect on the exterior for a hundred years to come. The interior is distinctive, warm, and the decorative treatment is all that the most discriminating could ask. The lighting fixtures are bronze in touch of the old-ware in silver plate; there is a special ventilating system and the house has other distinctive features, including an unusually attractive sun parlor, and sleeping porches, etc. There are three master bedrooms, one being of unusual size; 2 maids' rooms, 3 baths. The grounds (125x175 feet) are among the finest in Kenilworth, with large elm trees and a profusion of shrubbery and flowers. There is a private driveway and 2 car garage. The property is most reasonably priced at $40,000.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

How to Start!

JUST SOME of our excellent clay loam land with timothy and clover growing on it; keep a cow and supply your milk, butter and cheese; then get more cows and have milk and cream to sell. Cows live all winter on the natural grass. Get five acres cleared off and put it into potatoes to bring more cash. Then start clear and plant more and still more acres of clover and corn in a silo will furnish winter feed for your cows. A few hogs and some chickens to supply your meat, and some to sell will help with a farden furnish a good living. THAT'S HOW TO START.

DON'T LIVE FARMING to support your food; get a farm home to save your rent; get land with wood on it to provide your fuel. You will have plenty of timber from the sale of your farm products. With modern methods farm work is not hard, and with the pleasures of country living, what more could you want?

DON'T WAIT. The lands are extremely low priced now—$15 to $25 per acre, and most of them $25 per acre; on practically your own terms. These lands are of too good quality; are too near towns and railroads and have too many advantages—schools, telephone lines, rural routes, and good roads to remain low priced. Settlers are steadily coming here. Every house and barn that is built and every new field that is put under cultivation increases the value of neighboring lands. Don't wait until you have to pay more.

PEOPLE ARE PURCHASING these lands every day. Now is the time to see the crops of the neighboring farmers. WRITE US at once about Homeseekers' low rates and ask for Booklet No. 53. It tells you how AMERICA'S LAST BEST LAND to be had at a low price.

HERE'S AN ACTUAL $250 FOR YOU

More than mere reductions, in Price.

Effective Sunday, all standard Rebuilt Cole Cars will carry a "reduced inventory" credit of $250 that will be passed along to you.

This means exactly the amazing thing that it says. The same Cole Rebuilt car that formerly sold for $1,250, open models, will NOW sell for $1,000. Those that sold for $1,500 will NOW sell for $1,250; the late models that sold for $1,750 will NOW sell for $1,500.

Long experience in rebuilding Coles has resulted in improved skill that now enables us to turn out perfect jobs.

Ask any Cole Rebuilt owner what he thinks of one of these cars, that looks as good as any new model; that runs and rides with a flexibility that is incomparable; that gives service and satisfaction which can't be measured by dollars, and, best of all, that has enabled him to save $1,000 to $2,000 in first year depreciation.

Now on top of this add another $250 to your Automobile Purchase Savings Account and you'll begin to appreciate the meaning of this offer and will not lose time inspecting the cars that come under this new ruling.

Write, call, or telephone. A Cole Car is at your service and without the slightest obligation.

Out of town patrons are particularly welcome.

We have the most attractive financing plan ever offered by any one, and maybe we can show you how to afford a car when you thought you couldn't.

5 Bargains

AT THE

Peerless Motor Car Co.

OF ILLINOIS.

PEERLESS SPORT, 1919. This is our standard 7 passenger, 4 door Sport car and was delivered very late in the year of 1919; was delivered very late in the year of 1919; in fact, it is a car that is above the average in every respect. The paint, which is a Dark Green, is in fair condition and it is completely equipped with many extras, such as motometer, nickeled headlamps and spotlights, and other extras. The Cord tires show practically no wear. This particular automobile has class and distinction and is one that this direct branch of the Peerless Motor Car Company will recommend. To interested parties would suggest an inspection of this car immediately. We are pricing it way below the market value and it will, undoubtedly, be sold to the first person who sees it. Special for this sale, $750.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1920. We cannot tell you in a newspaper description just what a value we have to offer in this high grade Peerless enclosed car. It is one that has been privately owned and has been kept in exceptional condition. It is painted a beautiful Maroon, with black running gear. Mechanically it will carry the standard warranty of the Peerless Motor Car Co. of Illinois. Peerless owners are reluctant to part with cars of this type and for this reason particularly at the price we are offering this one. It has much extra equipment, including bumpers, motometer, spotlight, and other extras. This is a rare bargain at our price of $1,500.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1919. Here is a car that has been turned in to us from one of our oldest customers and is one that has been very carefully serviced. It has been serviced in our own shops. The paint, which is a Dark Wine color, has not a mar or blemish anywhere. The top is like new. It will practically no wear. You cannot fully appreciate the quality or the unsurpassed value in this car without first seeing it. It will carry the standard warranty of the Chicago branch of the Peerless Motor Car Company. Act quickly if you would avail yourself of this bargain. Price, $750.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1921. This car has just been put through our Mechanical Department and refinished a deep maroon with natural wood wheels. The permanent top is the same as our current model. This car is one that originally was owned by one of Chicago's most prominent families and when turned in to us was more like a new car in condition. In fact, it was so good that we found but very little work necessary to put it in the condition it is in today, and we do not believe that it could be distinguished from new. It is equipped with a brand new set of cord tires, 1 extra, bumper, motometer, and many other extras that are highly desirable and smart appearing Peerless car is being offered at such a price that we do not believe you can afford to pass it up if you are interested in the purchase of a high grade car of this type. Your immediate action will be necessary if you would avail yourself of this bargain. Special for this sale, $1,500.

HAYNES SEDAN, MODEL 47, 1921. This standard Haynes 7 passenger sedan is one that is above the average in condition. It is painted a dark blue and is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, 1 extra, bumper, clock, and many other extras. Mechanically it is exceptionally fine. In order to avail yourself of a bargain in a late model Haynes sedan your immediate action will be necessary. We have taken into consideration the recent price cuts in the prices of new Haynes cars and have priced this car way below the market value to move it. Do not put off seeing and riding in it, if interested. Special for this sale, $1,500.
